

Myers' arraignment cancelled, grand jury appearance next

By THOMAS BENNETT
of the Barometer

The scheduled arraignment of William Myers, the man arrested in connection with the placing of a bomb on campus Feb. 6, has been cancelled.

Myers was to have been arraigned before the Benton County District Court today. However, according to District Attorney Pete Sandrock, it was decided by his office that such an action would be unnecessary.

According to Sandrock, Oregon felony cases must be tried in circuit court. Since Myers will appear before a circuit court grand jury anyway, an arraignment in district court was deemed redundant.

"In this case the guy has a lawyer already; he's not going anywhere," Sandrock said. "It would be an unnecessary duplication to have an arraignment in district court."

Myers was arrested Feb. 6 under suspicion of first-degree attempted arson. He has not yet been formally charged with that or any other charge. Sandrock said the case is still under investigation.

No comment was given regarding the scheduled grand jury appearance of Robert Buker, who the OSU Department of Information confirmed was subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury Feb. 24. Albany police say Buker was questioned by OSU police the day of the bombing in connection with an anonymous phone call made from Albany to Corvallis.

According to Sandrock, he can give no information regarding Buker or his subpoena.

"If it (Buker's) is a secret indictment, I can't confirm it," Sandrock said.

Nor could Sandrock comment on Myers' upcoming grand jury appearance, which will decide if there is enough evidence to charge the OSU computer center employee. In a typical case, he said, the next public knowledge of the case would come when the actual trial began.

"We want to turn down the glare of publicity," Sandrock said.

Study Notes to need fee funding for two more years

By LISA DITRI
of the Barometer

The Study Notes program, funded by student fees, probably will not make a profit this fiscal year, according to ASOSU treasurer Mike Gorman.

"But next year, the way it's looking now, they will probably break even with the help of the student fee funding," Gorman said.

Study Notes will probably require funding from student fees for the next two fiscal years, said ASOSU president Nick Van Vleet.

The Study Notes program was started by the Young Entrepreneurs' Society in spring 1986 with approximately $4,500 in funding from the student fees contingency fund, according to Van Vleet.

Gorman said Study Notes' income this fiscal year as of Feb.

"They will probably break even with the help of the student fee funding."

—Mike Gorman

10 from term and daily sales is $4,514.

When the new fiscal year begins July 1, 1987, the program, now under the direction of ASOSU, will continue receiving funding through student fees.

"The amount has not been finalized yet, but the budget is due next week," Gorman said.

Study Notes is an ASOSU-subsidized, student-managed service which currently provides notes from 17 different courses offered winter term 1987. A paid notetaker who has previously passed the course with an "A" attends and prepares notes on the current lectures. Students may purchase the notes of one course for $15 per term or $1 per lecture.

Income projected for next year, subject to amount of sales, could be approximately $20,000; but there probably wouldn't be a profit from that revenue, Gorman said.

Study Notes should be self-supporting within the next two years, according to Van Vleet.

OSU student arrested in separate bomb incident

By THOMAS BENNETT
of the Barometer

An OSU student was arrested Wednesday in connection with an explosion set off in south Corvallis Tuesday.

Stephen C. Litchfield, freshman in pre-engineering, was arrested by Benton County Sheriff's deputies at about 7 p.m. Wednesday at his residence at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity at 1015 N.W. Monroe. He was charged with first-degree arson and held in the Benton County Correctional Facility on $15,000 bail.

He was released just after 9:30 that evening after $1,525 of that amount was posted. Staff at the correctional facility refused to say who posted Litchfield's bail.

The arrest stems from an incident in which a homemade bomb was set off in a pile of drainage tiles near the 1500 block of Crystal Lake Drive in south Corvallis shortly before 10 p.m. Tuesday. A witness allegedly saw a car driving away from the site at the time and notified police, who traced the car fitting the description to Litchfield.

A sheriff's deputy would not elaborate on the type of explosive that was used, but did say it was "big enough to do a lot of damage."

Accomplices are also being sought in the case, the deputy said.

Litchfield had no comment when contacted Wednesday evening.

"They've improved every term. Study Notes is growing and improving in sales. This shows that it's catching on," Van Vleet said.

Every campus of the Pacific 10 Conference offered similar programs before OSU. University of Oregon has had their service since 1967.

Whitney Knickrehm, an undergraduate business student and member of the Young Entrepreneurs' Society, is the director of Study Notes.

"Study Notes is definitely successful. Sales have almost doubled since last term," Knickrehm said.

The notes are a reliable source of information and a service to the students, Knickrehm said.

"They are comprehensive, high-quality notes and the students are happy with the service overall," she added.

Study Notes program members encourage the students to attend the lectures and use the notes.

"Students that buy them don't skip class; they use them as a supplement," Knickrehm said.

"If you go to class, then buying someone's notes for the same lecture isn't going to help," said Suzan England, an undergraduate civil engineering student. "I wouldn't buy them myself. If you have to miss class, you could get your friend's notes," England said.

"It's a great service to the students and an aid to study for tests," said Patty Bershers, paid notetaker and student.

"If you're in trouble, you can pull yourself out. You can go to class and still have a nice set of notes from the course," Bershers said.

"We're trying to get it set up like at other campuses; when you buy your books, you buy your 'study notes.' For the amount you pay in tuition, the study notes are a worthwhile service."

There are 15 notetakers and more are needed to expand the service. Study Notes is located in Memorial Union East 131. The office is open Monday-Friday, from noon to 4 p.m.

Trial of 'Ivan the Terrible' continues

Lawyers question credibility of Holocaust survivor

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Lawyers for accused Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk yesterday questioned the credibility of the trial's first witness — a Holocaust survivor and an expert on the Treblinka death camp.

Demjanjuk, 66, a retired U.S. autoworker stripped of his American citizenship and extradited to Israel last year, is accused of being the feared guard "Ivan the Terrible," who operated the gas chambers at Treblinka during World War II.

Mark O'Connor, Demjanjuk's American attorney, repeatedly asked Yitzhak Arad, director of Israel's Yad Vashem Holocaust memorial, to explain inconsistencies between the maps in his book on Treblinka and those in official records. "I don't see any meaningful differences," said

Arad, a Holocaust survivor.

O'Connor said there were some discrepancies and noted that Arad was one of the greatest authorities on the Holocaust. O'Connor then questioned whether other witnesses who are not experts would be able to identify parts of the camp accurately.

The war crimes trial, the first in Israel since 1962, is in its third day.

Arad testified Tuesday there is no evidence to support "rumors" that the notorious guard called "Ivan" was killed in 1943 at Treblinka, a camp in Nazi-occupied Poland where some 900,000 people were killed.

"I have scoured every document," Arad said as an expressionless Demjanjuk looked on. "I have never come across anyone who said, 'I either killed or saw Ivan the Terrible killed.'"

The key issue in the trial is whether Israel can prove more than 40 years after World War II that Demjanjuk is "Ivan the Terrible." Arad said after an inmate uprising at Treblinka in 1943, rumors circulated through the camp that Ivan was killed in the revolt.

A Treblinka survivor, the late Abraham Goldfarb, had testified "under oath" in another proceeding that Ivan was killed by inmates, Arad said. But when he was interviewed a second time, Goldfarb said he had not seen Ivan killed and had only heard about it from other inmates, Arad said.

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, who faces the death penalty if convicted, has said he was captured by the Nazis while serving in the Soviet army and that he became a prisoner himself. He contends he was never in Treblinka.

After the war, Demjanjuk moved to the United States and became an autoworker in Cleveland. The trial has drawn several hundred spectators daily, including Holocaust survivors.

Much of Arad's testimony Tuesday described how the Nazis tried to carry out Adolf Hitler's plans to exterminate the Jewish race.

Defense attorneys objected to Arad's testimony, accusing the prosecution of trying to turn it into a "showcase trial" similar to those during Josef Stalin's rule in the Soviet Union. The chief judge dismissed the objection.

US death penalty called a 'lottery'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Amnesty International called yesterday for abolition of the death penalty in the United States, charging it has been "arbitrary, racially biased and unfair."

The London-based human rights organization said at the end of 1986, 1,836 convicts — 48 percent of them blacks — were awaiting execution in 33 of 37 states that allow the death penalty.

Methods of execution vary in each state, but the most common are the electric chair and gas chamber. Some states use poison, hanging or shooting.

"The evidence suggest that the use of the death penalty has been arbitrary, racially biased and unfair," it said in a 245-page study.

"The process has once again become a horrifying 'lottery' in which political, financial and community pressures plus geographical location may well play a more decisive part in sending a person to the death chamber than the actual crime," it said.

"Amnesty International is appealing for the abolition of the death penalty in the United States," the study said.

The strongest criticism aimed at the sentencing of blacks, charging that they are more likely to be sentenced to death for killing whites than the other way around.

Some states have more blacks than whites awaiting execution, although the number of those arrested on murder cases are roughly the same number, the study said. It said 66 percent of death inmates in Alabama are black.

In Florida and Texas, blacks who killed whites were "five or six times" more likely to be sentenced to death than whites who had killed blacks, it said. In Florida, blacks who killed whites were 40 percent more likely to be sentenced to death than those who had killed blacks.

Opposition tipped to win Irish election

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Election officials yesterday began a hand count of 1.8 million ballots in national elections with an opposition party favoured to lead the next government in fighting Ireland's worst economic crisis since independence from Britain.

An estimated 75 percent of the country's 2.4 million voters cast ballots Tuesday in a high turnout — a boost for Charles Haughey's opposition Fianna Fail party which led the pre-election opinion polls.

But a spokesman for Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald's Fine Gael party said the participation of the new center-right Progressive Democrats Party put an unknown factor into the voting for a new 166-seat parliament.

First results were expected about 3 p.m., but in a close race it could take until Thursday for a final outcome.

Early unofficial election results showed the ruling party losing ground to the opposition. But political analysts said they were uncertain whether Haughey's Fianna Fail could muster enough support under Ireland's complex voting system of proportional representation to win the 84 seats needed for a majority in Parliament.

"As the Americans usually say, it's just too close to call," said a political commentator on national radio.

Early unofficial results also showed gains for the Progressive Democrats, which FitzGerald has suggested could be a coalition partner.

The first indications were based on party political analysts assessing partial votes and extrapolating them for entire districts.

The last opinion poll before the vote gave Haughey's party 45 percent support and FitzGerald's Fine Gael party 30 percent with the Progressive Democrats only 13 percent.

A party needs a total of at least 84 seats to win a majority and automatic mandate to form the next government, which will have to tackle Ireland's 20 percent unemployment rate and a surge in emigration.

The economy was the main issue with the country struggling through its deepest crisis since independence from Britain in 1922.

One out of five workers are unemployed, taxes average 40 percent and emigration — mainly to Britain, the United States and Australia — has soared over the past four years.

In the last parliament Haughey's party controlled 71 seats, while FitzGerald's had 68 and ruled in coalition with the Labour Party, which held 14 seats.

Hungry pandas moved

PEKING (UPI) — About 100 "hunger-stricken" giant pandas will be moved from China's largest nature reserve to a new mountain home 450 miles away where there is plenty of bamboo to munch, China's official newspaper reports.

The People's Daily newspaper said at least 62 of central China's estimated 1,000 wild giant pandas have died of starvation since a periodic blossoming of the animal's staple food, arrow bamboo, began about four years ago.

The blossoming, which occurs every 60 years, leaves the bamboo inedible for the reserve's estimated 100 giant pandas. It takes at least 15 years for the bamboo seedlings to become edible for pandas, one of the world's rarest animals.

"China's hunger-stricken giant pandas are expected to migrate from the Wolong Nature Reserve in Sichuan (province) to Shennongjia in Hubei (province)," People's Daily said.

Scientists say we've lost war with insects

CHICAGO (UPI) — The human race, packing more pesticides than common sense, has lost the war with the insect kingdom and inadvertently created armies of superbugs "nothing can kill," top insect experts warn.

"The short-sighted and irresponsible use of pesticides...is producing strains of monster bugs. There are now about 30 species that nothing can kill," said Robert Metcalf, professor of biology and entomology at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

Insect resistance, growing with each new chemical challenge, threatens global agriculture and international health and costs about $2 billion annually, said Brian Croft, a professor of entomology at Oregon State University.

"We have definitely created a big problem for ourselves," he said.

The insect experts gathered today at the American Association for the Advancement of Science annual meeting for a symposium intended to bring the pesticide problem to the attention of Congress and other governmental agencies.

The scientists suggest the prevailing insect control effort, which typically involves developing a new pesticide and then saturating the intended victim, results only in making an insect immune to that pesticide.

Two of the more significant cases:

—Malaria had been nearly eliminated from many parts of the world until the World Health Organization decided to eradicate it, Metcalf said. The WHO spent 21 years and almost $2 billion before giving up in 1976; all they had to show for their effort was a race of malaria-carrying mosquitoes virtually immune to all applicable insecticides.

—Cotton bollworms "weren't a big problem" until farmers decided to spray them. "Most of them were fairly well-regulated by their natural predators and when we started throwing pesticides all over the place, we killed our friends," Metcalf said.

Budget shortfall may cause 120 state workers their jobs

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Ten state employment offices may have to close and 120 state workers may be laid off unless the Oregon Legislature agrees to divert $10.4 million from an unemployment trust fund, members of budget subcommittee were told.

Ray Thorne, administrator of the state Employment Division, said the closures and layoffs are the result of the "blue smoke and mirrors" being used by Congress to meet the requirements of Gramm-Rudman, the federal deficit reduction law.

Thorne said that Congress is refusing to release a fund containing $1 billion that legally belongs to Oregon and 27 other states so the administration can count they money against the federal deficit.

Bothman to head DOT

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Robert Bothman, a career employee who worked for the state Highway Division for 36 years, was appointed director of the Oregon Department of Transportation.

The appointment of Bothman, 54, was the first official act Tuesday of a state transportation commission that has four new appointees by Gov. Neil Goldschmidt, all of whom were sworn in just prior to the meeting.

Bothman, who has been serving as acting head of the 4,800-employee department, replaces Fred Miller, who was appointed by Goldschmidt as director of the state Executive Department.

New appointees for OSU's student media

The new heads of OSU's three student media were chosen by the Student Media Committee Wednesday.

Carisa Cegavske, junior in business, was chosen as Daily Barometer editor for 1987-88.

Station manager for KBVR-FM will be Sherri Lee, graduate student in Geology.

KBVR-TV's new station manager will be John Clarke, junior in Liberal Arts.

All will take over the jobs spring term.

According to Cegavske, overseeing the installation of the Barometer's new computer system will be a major priority when she assumes the job of editor. The system will replace the 15-year-old Compuedit system now in use.

Cegavske is currently news editor at the Barometer.

Continuing the work she did in obtaining grants for KBVR-FM, Lee said she wants to provide consistency and get the station on "firmer financial footing."

Clarke, who helps produce several KBVR-TV shows, said he wants to expand the station's viewership and gain "respect for the station in the community," with a larger range of programs.

'Welcome to the meeting—glad you found it!'

Today at 2 p.m., somewhere in the Memorial Union, the Student Activities Committee will hold a meeting.

That meeting will be illegal.

As defined in the Oregon Public Meetings Law, any and all public meetings must be advertised so that they "give actual notice to interested persons and actual notice to members of a governing body." Even "special" meetings must give a minimum of 24 hours public notice, via the Daily Barometer or by flyers distributed widely around campus.

But the Student Activities Committee failed to meet these requirements, and hence is holding an illegal meeting.

Unfortunately, this is not an isolated example of the violation of meeting announcement requirements and open meeting laws. Recent cases in point include:

•Last Monday, a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Student Activities Committee was held. Not only was the meeting unadvertised, their notification to committee members was so poor that co-chair Sheila Peterkort was not even notified, and therefore missed the meeting.

•Just yesterday, a meeting of the Educational Activities Committee had to be cancelled, because it was brought to the chairman's attention that insufficient announcement of the meeting had been given.

Lack of publicity for these or any other meetings is not a trivial matter. It is a violation of state law and ASOSU governing regulations. Furthermore, it is a gross violation of the rights of the campus citizenry to participate in their governing bodies.

The role of these committees in shaping student life and activities cannot be overemphasized. In the case of today's Student Activities Committee meeting, a decision is supposed to be made on an ASOSU proposal to allow half-time students to participate in leadership positions in student activities. It is a decision in which all interested parties should have a chance to provide input.

In the case of the budgeting boards, students have the right to know—and to respond to—where their money will or will not go, particularly when they spend more than $100 per term in incidental fees.

They have not had those opportunities. Examples abound of meetings scheduled in secret, poorly- or unadvertised, and consequently poorly attended by those with an interest and a stake. Compounding the problem is that agendas are often vaguely delineated and narrowly distributed, so the public doesn't know what the meetings are about.

The issue involves more than ethics. Chairpersons of OSU's various student/faculty committees should read the Oregon Public Meetings Law, Oregon Revised Statutes Chapter 192, which requires ample advertisement. The regulation applies to any "council committee or subcommittee consisting of two or more members at which there are sufficient members present to constitute a quorum, the purpose of which is to decide or deliberate on public matters."

It is time that the members of OSU's student committees, their chairpersons and particularly their advisors, realize the responsibility they have to publicize their meetings and their proposed agenda. Anything less is at best unethical and at worst against the law.

So when the Student Activities Committee meets today, it should be good practice in parliamentary procedure, but no decisions they make will be binding. They'll be wasting their time because like a lot of other committees around campus, they are conducting their business behind anonymous doors.

Just thought you ought to know. (DC,PAF)

Morning in Amerika ten years hence—or is it?

By John M. Burt
for the Barometer

I wanted to write about the ABC miniseries Amerika, but then I realized that in order to do that I'd have to watch the damn thing. So instead I called up some of my contacts in 1997 to find out what will really be happening ten years from now.

Well, as it turns out, what we'll really be doing is watching ABC's 7-hour miniseries Morning in Amerika, billed as an ideological response to 1994's The Death of a Nation, which was an ideological response to the 1991 updated version of It Can't Happen Here, an ideological response to the immense 1987 miniseries Amerika, which was an ideological response to the 1983 TV-movie The Day After, which was actually based on something in the real world: the aftermath of a limited nuclear exchange.

As is typical with sequels, as the chain of indignation progressed

Nonstandard Deviations

through the '90s, the productions became more and more divorced from reality. The Day After was positively gentle in its treatment of postwar Kansas, and had no ideological axes to grind; despite the flap later on, there really aren't two sides to the question "Should we have a nuclear war?" Amerika, on the other hand, featured a Soviet occupation of North America by the Russkies' favorite pals, Nazis, the UN and Darth Vader clones. It Can't Hap- pen Here featured a politician who destroyed constitutional government without anybody putting up a fight. The Death of a Nation claimed that the dismal failures in the first decade of the so-called Strategic Defense Initiative (accurately depicted as continuing to the turn of the century) were the work of US scientists who were secretly Soviet agents. But Morning in Amerika is the first to be an intentional comedy.

Ron Reagan, Jr. portrays a charismatic, much-loved but terminally dotty President whose advisors "handle" him and the country straight to oblivion. From a "budget-balancing" policy that triples the national debt to an "arms control" program that flubs every opportunity for progress and increases international tensions, Reagan's character is an unflinching flag-waver and an unflinching failure.

The series reaches a climax when the President, right in the middle of a sermon on the evils of dealing with terrorists, is caught paying ransom to a gang of the world's worst. What's more, on the side he's also slipping money to a different group of terrorists because he doesn't like their main targets.

Morning in Amerika ends with the chaos resulting from this revelation; we are left to imagine its consequences. The President fanatizes himself exonerated, with his picture on the dime and a monument built to him while he's still alive, but perhaps a journalist character's fantasy is more accurate, as he imagines the impeached, jailed President wandering the prison yard, still hopelessly confused, alternately believing that he's visiting the prison as President or that he's in a gulag under Soviet occupation. A scene of Reagan trying to conspire with one of his former aides (Jonathan Winters), also a convict, to escape and join the resistance is truly priceless. It's the biggest laugh of the series, except for the press conference in which the President tries to pass off a flubbed arms-control summit as a hopeful success.

You poor souls in 1987 will have to slog through another ten years of tiresome ideological posturing before you get to see Morning in Amerika, but it'll be worth the wait. They don't make enough of them like this anymore.

Middle Amerika

To the editor:

I found Mr. Crist's editorial in Monday's Barometer to be both well-researched and thought-provoking. I also think both of these characteristics are shared by Amerika. As was the case with The Day After I think many critics of the program are making the very common error of ascribing the implausibilities of the scenario to lack of research by the producers. A basic fact to remember when reviewing works of fiction is that the author may, and often will, set up an implausible scenario for dramatic effect. A review of any of the prime-time competitors of Amerika will amply illustrate this fact (or do you really believe in Magnum PI, The Equalizer, Night Court or Dallas?).

A second principle to remember is that the principles and beliefs of the characters are not necessarily those of the author. Sometimes a writer or producer has the courage to go ahead with a project which he knows will provoke criticism—simply because he believes the story is worth telling.

Your point about the women who "corroborated" (sic) with the enemy escapes me. Am I supposed to hate them because they fell in love with one of the "enemy," or admire them because they had the strength to ignore the politics and fall in love with a person? After all, the KGB colonel seems to be one of the more sensitive and less stereotyped characters in the drama. Perhaps the drama is trying to make us examine our own stereotypical attitudes about patriotism, collaboration, and politics by exposing us to situations implausible enough to activate our internal Poopoo Detectors.

In closing, I must express my sympathy for "the media" which you say continues to "pander to the far right..." At the same time the Reagan administration is outraged when Sam Donaldson asks a tough question or a reporter from another network tells a story the administration would rather cover up. The poor media—too far to the right of the Barometer, and too far left of the Reagan Administration! I guess that leaves them in Middle Amerika.

Skeletons

To the editor:

I was surprised to find in this Monday's and Wednesday's issues of the Barometer statements by a socialist that are actually true! These are Mark Scott's assertions that Albania represents a "pure" form of socialism, whereas all other socialist nations are sullied by "revisionism." Absolutely right! And what is Albania's "pure" form of socialism? Why, Stalinism.

Until recently, Albania was the personal concentration camp of a murderer named Enver Hoxha. One of the common icons of the Hoxha personality cult is the image of Enver the Great bathed in heavenly light, a finger waving in righteous anger—as he denounces the cowering figure of Nikita Khrushchev, "Butcher of the Ukraine," for departing from the path of Stalin!

And what was the path of Stalin? Butchery and terrorism as ends in themselves, practiced on a scale so massive that it makes Hitler (another "revisionist") look like a petty swindler. This is what Mark Scott is crusading for in the name of socialist purity. So much for the sincerity and humanitarianism of the Marxist-Leninists.

If you want to inoculate yourself against this man's evil propaganda, I suggest that you pick up a copy of Arthur Seldon and Brian Crozier's excellent, no-holds-barred book "Socialism: The Grand Delusion". It is relentless in exposing the hundred million or so skeletons in the socialist closet.

Leadership America

The International Leadership Center is seeking applicants for its summer-long leadership development program. Titled "Leadership America," this is a national program for college students who will have completed the junior year of their undergraduate studies by June 12, 1987. Fifty outstanding men and women from campuses across the country will be selected to spend 10 weeks strengthening their leadership skills. The objective of the program is to prepare these students to accept major leadership responsibilities.

Leadership America includes one week in North Carolina, one week in the Rocky Mountains and three weeks in Dallas, Texas. It also includes a four-week internship in business, government, or community service followed by a closing session in Washington, D.C.

Participants receive a $3,000 stipend which offsets any expenses, as well as loss of income during the summer. The primary criterion for selection is an "outstanding potential for leadership."

Applications for the program must be completed no later than March 31. Selection will begin in February and be completed by May 1.

For more information, contact Susan Clinton, at the Office of International Education, 754-3006.

Flamoe credits teamwork for OSU's success

By TED TRASK
of the Barometer

Athletes usually have those memorable moments which they wish to savor for a lifetime. Whether it be a last second shot to win a game or a night when he or she could not miss.

For sophomore guard Chelle Flamoe on the OSU women's basketball team, a list of "unforgettables" is hard to come by. But there was a moment, or a game in this case, in which she would like to put in the "let's forget about that one" category.

A week ago OSU lost to U of O, 71-51.

"Everyone is trying to forget that one. We were very disappointed in our performance. We had the support and blew it," Flamoe commented yesterday prior to practice.

Crowd support is relatively sparse for the lady Beavers, but Flamoe feels those who do come have a good time.

"Those who attend do enjoy it," she said.

"If people come once they will enjoy it and come again," Flamoe added.

While Flamoe appreciates the fans who come, having additional promotion for the games would help. In addition, she does have suggestions to improve attendance.

"Playing back to back with the men would help. (Also) I don't think the fans should pay," she explained.

Trouble obtaining fan support in women's play is not unusual. Neither is fighting for press coverage. Flamoe feels the coverage is adequate, but they (the team) do have to work for it.

"We have to gain respect and things are picking up," she noted.

Flamoe, a science major with a 3.9 GPA, attended Bellarmine High School in Tacoma, Wa., and started playing basketball her sophomore year. While she enjoys the competition and staying in shape, having an identity to play is important.

"I've always played (b-ball), I don't know where I would be without it," Flamoe said.

"There are times when it's too much, but there really isn't anything I don't like," she added.

In addition to better competition, Flamoe can easily point out the differences between high school and college.

"People are more serious here, which is good because it helps build a commitment to the team," she explained.

She also feels there is a major change between this year and last year's squad. Last year the Beavers finished 7-21, while this year record stands at 18-6 with six games left. But it's not just the record.

"It's our attitude. We are working harder. We have a positive attitude, which results in winning and gives us more incentive. We broke down mentally last year and hopefully that won't happen this year," Flamoe commented.

Working hard and teamwork is what Flamoe credits to this year's success. In addition, she appreciates the fact that there is no one person carrying the team.

"Everyone has their own role, everyone relies on everyone to do their own part," she said.

Although Flamoe describes herself as boring and sees many different personalities on the team, she feels this is an admirable aspect of the squad.

"The different personalities blend quite well on the court," she commented.

Flamoe also praises head coach Aki Hill.

"She understands each player as a person, which is important," Flamoe says of her coach.

Good coaching is one of the reasons the sophomore standout came to OSU. When it came to decision time, Flamoe was contemplating UNLV, Hawaii and here.

"I like the program (here). It is also semi-close to home," she noted.

In addition, she likes the team's chances of making a post season tournament.

"We have a good shot at it (NCAA or NIT). We have to win four of the next six," Flamoe said.

OSU will begin the homestretch drive for the postseason on Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Gill Coliseum against UCLA.

Is winning the only thing on Flamoe's mind?

"Winning is nice, but giving your best effort is what's important," she noted.

OSU faces UCLA for first place tonight

By KYLE WELCH
of the Barometer

This is it.

This is the day that Oregon State, UCLA and the rest of the Pacific-10 conference have been waiting for. Tonight, the UCLA Bruins, 17-6 overall and 11-4 in the Pac-10, bring their half-game Pac-10 lead to Gill Coliseum for a matchup with OSU, 18-5 and 10-4. Tipoff is set for 8 p.m., due to ESPN coverage.

Not only is this a big game for both schools participating, the Wildcats of Arizona will be following it closely as well as they still are in good shape for the conference crown.

Currently, Oregon State has lost two in a row to the Bruins, dating back to last season's 74-63 UCLA win at Gill.

In their first meeting of the year, OSU erased a 22-point UCLA lead only to lose in overtime 69-67. The "Uclans" lead the series with the Beavers 48-22.

OSU is coming off a road loss to Arizona which dropped them 1½ games back of UCLA. Arizona State upset UCLA Monday night, to get the Beavers back in the thick of things with a realistic shot at winning the title. First, they have to get by UCLA and that won't be an easy chore.

The Bruins boast senior forward Reggie Miller, who has been touted as one of the best at his position in the country. However, this year Miller hasn't been playing up to his capabilities but he is still averaging 20.4 points a contest.

Miller hit two key three-pointers in UCLA's victory over OSU earlier this season.

Besides Miller, the Bruins are strong at the guard spot with Jerome "Pooh" Richardson and Dave Immel. Richardson is averaging 11 points a game as well as 6.9 assists. Immel, a Hillsboro product, is scoring at an 8.7 clip.

OSU has had steady play from Gary Payton and Jose Ortiz in the past few games and will need everyone to get into the act tonight.

Saturday, the Beavers will host Southern California in a game scheduled to start at 3 p.m.

Beaver Notes - Payton broke the OSU school record for assists in a single season with his six against Arizona last weekend. He now has 191 which breaks Freddie Boyd's mark of 185 set back in 1972...The Beavers had their worst shooting night from three-point range against U of A, going 0 for 9...OSU still remains a better second half team. The Beavers have outscored their opponents by 16 points in the first half this year compared to 158 in the second...There are only a few $12 tickets left for tonight's game. It looks like the game will be a sell-out.

Pistol championship: The 1987 Intercollegiate Sectional Pistol Championship will be held February 21-22 at the OSU indoor range, located at the westernmost end of Washington Avenue.

Sports Briefs

The cost is $6 for an individual competitor and $8 for a team. Free pistol firing will begin at 9 a.m., and examination of pistols for the standard pistol match will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Racquet results: Benny Tjaja finished first in the IM Super Star Racquet Tournament Saturday, Feb. 14.

Tjaja tallied 219 out of a possible 300 points competing in racquetball, tennis, table tennis and badminton. Jim Rankin was second with 202 points.

Individual sport winners were Robert Harty in racquetball with 57 points, Jim Rankin and Jim Buranis tied in tennis with 58 points, Chris Carman won the table tennis with 53 points and Tjaja had 65 points in badminton.

Two-on-Two: A two-on-two basketball tournament will be held at the Langton Hall Gym on Feb. 28. The tournament is open to all currently enrolled students, faculty and staff.

Men's games begin at 1 p.m., co-rec games start at 2.30 p.m. and women's games will have a 3:15 p.m. tip-off time.

Entry forms are available at the Intramural office, rm. 125 in Langton, deadline is 5 p.m., Thursday Feb. 26.
