Early morning explosion wakes TKE house

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity members Matt Hsu (left) and Jeremiah Boenisch survey the damage to their fraternity house after a bomb exploded in front of it Sunday morning.

By DAVID SOKOLOWSKI
of the Daily Barometer

A bomb exploded outside the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) fraternity house early Saturday morning, bending metal and scattering glass, but hurting no one.

TKE member Damon Carlisle discovered the bomb as he was retrieving his bicycle about 2 a.m. Saturday. Carlisle said he saw something burning and went inside to tell Jon Tschetter, TKE president.

"He noticed it was a bomb and jerked me away when we were right at the edge of the window," Tschetter said. "We weren't injured at all — it was pretty incredible."

Even before Tschetter got to the phone the police were on their way. An officer had heard the explosion while on patrol across town, Tschetter said. The explosion was heard by a TKE live-out across town and brought neighbors into the streets.

Ten minutes after the explosion, the TKE phone rang, he said. The voice on the line said "Boom," and hung up.

The blast destroyed the small glass panes of the front window. It also bent a bench and shredded a bush that were next to the bomb. A TKE member's computer in a second-story room had dirt scattered on it and might be damaged, Tschetter said.

The case is being investigated as an arson, but nothing can be said until more information is known, said Officer Sean Houck of the Corvallis Police Department.

"We really have no idea of a motive," Houck said. "It could be a random event or friction between people ... anything's possible."

Some gunpowder was found on the bench, but nothing else is known of the bomb, he said. The Corvallis Fire Department is working on this case also, but was unavailable for comment.

Library project raises money for expansion plans

By DYVON BELL
of the Daily Barometer

The OSU Libraries Expansion Project is raising money and garnering support with which to prod government leaders in the next biennium.

It is the largest single fundraising drive in OSU's history, according to a project brochure, and the library is OSU's highest construction priority.

The library expansion project volunteer steering committee, headed by OSU alumnus Robert Lundeen, hopes to raise $10 million. The expansion is estimated to cost $30 million, but a freeze on state capital construction was imposed after the passage of Ballot Measure 5, so the project has received only about $180,000 in public funds.

The Oregon government is expected to eventually come through with the remaining $20 million.

"When that's going to be done is really in the laps of the gods in Salem, but we don't want to stall around with the private sector," Lundeen said. "Our fundraising is a motivation for the state Legislature to come to the party."

Donations and pledges have raised $2.1 million to date. Nancy Powell, director of library development, said that students provided an inspiration for the project when the ASOSU senate voted in April 1991 to pledge $500,000 in student fees over a period of years.

Now the faculty is joining the campaign.

Mike Martin, former OSU faculty senate president and professor of agricultural and resource economics, sent a letter to faculty members describing the campaign and ways they can contribute. A form for taking a payroll deduction was included in the letter.

More than 35 faculty members have responded since the campaign began two weeks ago, Powell said. The goal is 100 percent participation.

"We want to send a message to legislators, policy makers and the general citizenry that OSU faculty care deeply about the heart of the university — that's the library," Martin said.

Lundeen said, "They (faculty), better than anybody else, understand how important a proper library is to a research university."

Powell stressed that importance.

"OSU is a major research institution; the library is required to support that research," she said. "A research library transcends time and space, so it takes up room. We never throw anything away."

One of five research libraries in the Pacific Northwest, Kerr Library was built to hold 750,000 volumes; it currently houses 1.2 million. Two hundred thousand volumes are in storage that lacks appropriate climate control.

As the collection has grown, it has impinged on office space and student seating, Powell said. The State of Oregon standards specify that OSU's library should seat approximately 3,000 students. Kerr holds only 1,500, and each year that the collection increases at its current rate, 90 additional seats are lost.

The expansion project would increase the size of the library by more than 65 percent with an addition of approximately 125,000 square feet. The library would hold 1.6 million volumes and seat 3,500 students.

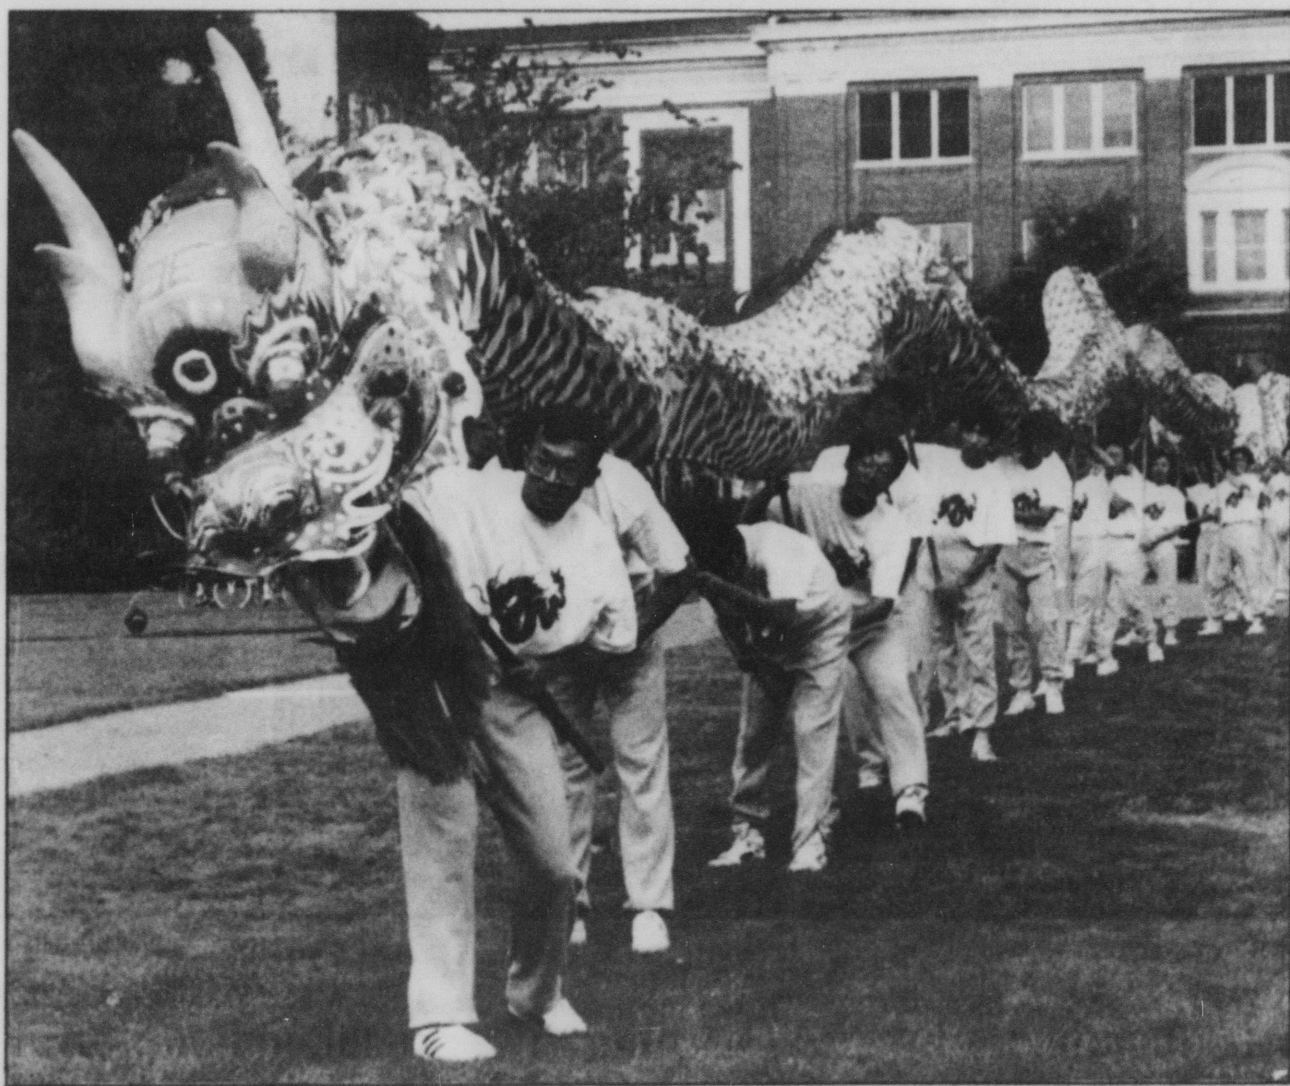

The exterior of the building would get a new facade and there will be a new study lounge. Other structural changes could include compact, motorized shelving in the stacks and the construction of a new entrance on the northeast corner of the building, replacing the entrance on Jefferson Street.

"We have to have the space somewhere and we will have the space because OSU isn't going to go away as a research university," Powell said.

Speaking of the fundraising, she added, "If we want more than the state can provide, we have to get it somewhere else. That's the way life is now."

Buns, not fragrances, are attractive to women

Most American guys are reluctant to use fragrances, on the theory that if you start wearing perfume, you're heading down a slippery slope that will inevitably lead to rouge, leotards, watching "Oprah," etc. So most guys prefer to emit only natural male aromas such as B.O. and ketchup.

Dave Barry

To change this attitude, the fragrance industry has for years been running an advertising campaign based on the theme that a fragrance-wearing guy will need a fully charged cattle prod to fend off semi-naked women. You've seen the magazine ads, which usually feature a guy being stared at by a woman whose facial expression says: "I am receiving your fragrance! Let's have carnal relations right here in the magazine!"

The thing is, when I hear real women talk about what they find attractive in a man, they never mention fragrance. Women don't care about shallow, superficial qualities. Women care about spiritual issues, such as: Does the man have cute buns?

Take my research department, Judi Smith. I want to stress that Judi is happily married to her husband, Tim, a total stud muffin and sex wolverine. But sometimes, for research purposes, Judi puts photographs of male models on the office wall, and these photographs tend to be bun-oriented.

So the question is, do male fragrances really attract women? In an effort to find out, I conducted a scientific test of two fragrances for men, starting with:

GIORGIO COLOGNE FOR MEN

I selected Giorgio because it met my stringent criterion; namely, I got a free publicity sample in the mail. I used the standard scientific test procedure of (1) sneaking up behind the males in my office, (2) firing a burst of cologne at their heads, and (3) sprinting off to a safe distance. The results were as follows:

— The males reacted to Giorgio in exactly the same way that a cockroach reacts to Raid. If there had been a giant refrigerator nearby, they would have scurried under it.

— Females in the vicinity of the Giorgio-treated males definitely experienced a passionate emotion. "What is that SMELL?" is how they expressed it. To my knowledge, the office staff went through the entire working day without a single episode of carnal relations. This was bad news for Giorgio, but good news for the human gene pool, considering the guys in my office.

I had higher hopes for the next fragrance product:

LIQUID MAGNET

I found out about this thanks to alert reader Robert T. Germaux, who sent me a mail advertisement that begins: "Would you like to turn beautiful women on instantly? Would you like beautiful girls to ignore your face and stare at your pants?"

Frankly, no, because of the ravioli stains. But anyway, according to the ad, Liquid Magnet contains a "rare distilled Swiss pheromone formula" that is irresistible to women. If you wear it, the ad claims, "Salesgirls, dental hygienists and other women will try to touch you, and may reach for your private parts!"

I personally, would not be thrilled if I were having my teeth cleaned, with a suction hose in my mouth and drool all over my bib, and a dental hygienist wearing gloves and a mask suddenly lunged for my personal region.

Especially if she were holding a sharp instrument. But I felt it was important to test this product, so I generously sent off $39.95 of my newspaper's money.

Weeks later I received a small, crushed, torn, oozing brown package that looked as though it had been delivered by Edward Scissorhands. Inside was a leaking cheap plastic spray bottle containing a yellowish fluid that you might mistake for public-restroom deodorant if you didn't know it was a rare distilled Swiss pheromone formula. I sprayed some on myself and a colleague, John Dorschner; then, in a courageous act of journalism, we walked into the newsroom, despite the very real danger of attack by gangs of lust-crazed women.

The results were striking. We walked by at least two dozen women, engaged in their normal work routine. We were forced to lean close to some of them, so they could become crazed with lust.

"Notice anything?" we said, arching our eyebrows.

"Yuck," they said, moving away.

"That's even worse than Giorgio," announced Judi, who refused to remain in the same room with Liquid Magnet.

We are forced to conclude that either (1) these particular pheromones work only on Swiss people, or (2) Liquid Magnet is a scam.

Maybe fragrance is not the way to a woman's heart after all. Maybe we men, instead of using superficial tricks, should concentrate on becoming more sensitive and loving and caring. Although I personally would recommend surgical bun augmentation.

Access ramps aren't good parking places

People who lock their bicycles on handicapped-access ramps may find their locks cut and their bikes removed.

L. Terry Griffith of the Oregon State Police said that bikes parked on the ramps not only make it almost impossible for handicapped students to get into buildings, but they create a fire hazard for these students.

Campus security is currently leaving signs and notices on buildings and bikes, but if the situation does not improve soon, they will have to resort to cutting locks, Griffith said.

Those who believe their bicycles have been dealt with in this way can contact the Public Safety Safety Building at 737-3010.

OSU starts Alzheimer's study

By LEIGH BARCLAY
of the Daily Barometer

Oregon citizens who checked off a voluntary contribution to Alzheimer's research on their state tax returns last spring have helped fund an Alzheimer's research project at OSU.

The Alzheimer's Disease Center of Oregon collected the contributions and made the distribution decisions. The OSU research project was awarded $14,970 by the center to analyze data already collected by the state.

"The study is just starting, so there have not been a lot of findings," said Clara Pratt, director of OSU's gerontology program and of the study. "We will be looking into how people with Alzheimer's Disease and other forms of dementia are served and what factors affect those services," Pratt said.

Some factors may be age, access to transportation, and family support in rural and urban areas. Other factors, on a functional level, are how those needs can be met, Pratt said.

The Oregon Senior and Disabled Services Division provided Pratt with data on 17,700 low-income elders who receive community and institutional services. The data were collected through Oregon's Client Assessment and Planning System.

It includes assessments by trained case managers on the health and functional status of each client, and support and service needs that the client has received over time, Pratt said.

"Oregon has the best community-based care for the elderly, proportional to any other state in the nation," Pratt said.

Even with Oregon as a model, Pratt said that Oregonians need to learn a lot more about delivery of services to those individuals in foster and residential care. This new study should do just that.

Approximately 22 percent of those helped were diagnosed as having Alzheimer's Disease or similar disorders, Pratt said. But a large percentage of those with Alzheimer's Disease or other forms of dementia go undiagnosed.

"In fact, up to 35 percent of the elders served by the state have significant behavioral problems related to dementia including serious disorientation, problems in judgment and wandering," Pratt said.

Caseworkers determine which services an elderly person receives. The ability to manage daily living skills such as bathing and dressing are evaluated to determine functional status, while instrumental skills such as cooking and housekeeping form another category of assessment.

Pratt, who has been with the Gerontology Program since 1978, believes that the examination of current services to older persons who suffer from Alzheimer's and other cognitive impairments is essential to planning for future services.

"This project has the potential to promote the development of new programs by providing a thorough study of how well current services are working," Pratt said.

"As dementia increases, the family is less able to provide complete care for the older person so the need for outside services dramatically increases," Pratt said. "But we don't have a good idea of what services people are getting or how those services correspond to dementia."

Student relives Wild Kingdom

By MONTRECE BOGLE
of the Daily Barometer

Trapping, tranquilizing and placing radio collars on animals is something most people only see on Wild Kingdom — but Randy Hand has lived it.

Hand, a senior in wildlife science at OSU, collared elk while working for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. The project, called the South Central Elk Telemetry Study, was started in an effort to learn more about the increasing number of elk in Klamath and Lake counties.

After collaring the elk, Hand tracked the collars' radio emissions to keep track of the elk herds from the air. In all, Hand was responsible for placing 21 elk in the area and tracking another 40 elk between Bend and the northern California border.

"This was the real Marlin Perkins stuff. This is the stuff they go up in planes and film — the stuff you see on TV," Hand said. "It was the ultimate position and I had it. I learned a lot about elk and had a lot of fun."

Hand got interested in game management when he was eight years old, he said. While sitting around a campfire on a hunting trip, Hand's uncle told him that there would be few animals left by the time Hand was old enough to hunt.

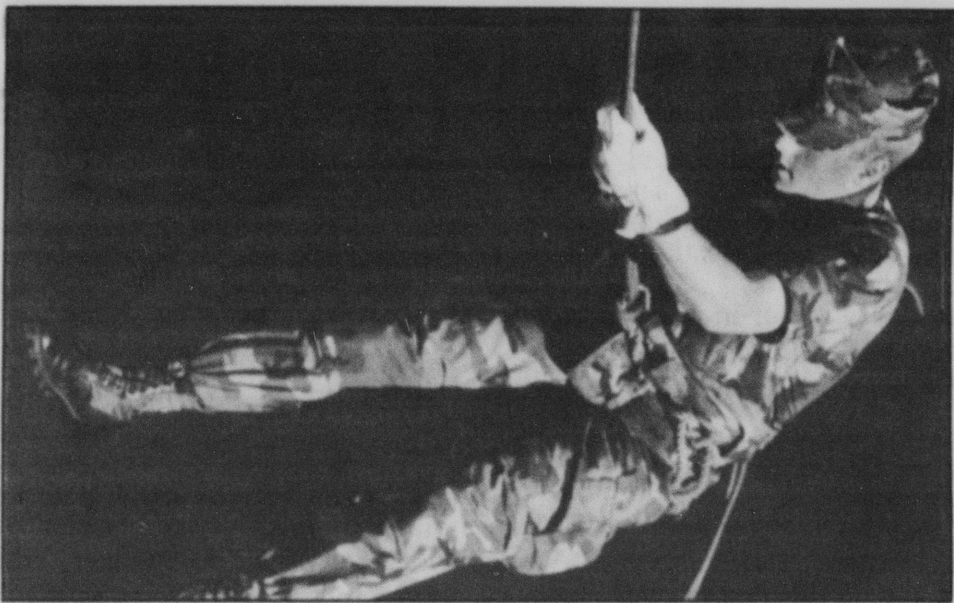

After high school graduation, Hand decided to attend OSU. During the orientation session for the fish and wildlife department, students were told to leave if they were there to hunt or make a lot of money, Hand said.

"Basically that left me just sitting there," Hand said. "I still had a grin on my face."

Though Hand is happy with his career choice, he expressed some frustration with his educational experience.

"I was expecting to get to go out and do some of these things (direct wildlife management) — that never happened," Hand said. Hand said he worked at a minimum-wage job as a crew leader in order to get the experience he needed to get the elk-tracking job. He recently received a $1,000 scholarship from the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation for his work in the wildlife profession.

One rotten area spoils OSU

The early morning bomb blast that rocked the Tau Kappa Epsilon house Sunday capped what was a very immature month for the North Campus Hill area.

Seventy minor-in-possession citations, scores of busted parties, trespassing, harassment, burglary, interfering with police and other citations, and now little boys with big toys have forced Corvallis Police to go door-to-door in this area begging for an ounce of sanity.

Corvallis Police Chief Pam Roskowski said nearly every incident was linked directly to alcohol consumption. Her department has rung up 200 or so hours of overtime keeping the peace in that one area. This prioritizing leaves the other 99 percent of Corvallis less protected.

It's obvious that police realize they're dealing with an alcohol-based society, and they can write all the citations they want and it won't help. The only solution to this problem is for North Campus Hill residents, primarily Greeks, to drop the high school antics and grow up. If not for self-pride, do it for other reasons.

First, you're making OSU college students look bad. Second, you're adults and aren't acting like it. Third, have a hint of respect for your year-round neighbors. Fourth and most importantly, it's all fun and games until someone gets an eye poked out.

Get the point? Grow up.

Oregon must preserve its federal perks

By Mark O. Hatfield, Oregon Republican senator

These are difficult times for higher education in Oregon. With the impact of Ballot Measure 5, the challenge to develop new strategies for funding has focused our attention once again on the critical partnership between the state and federal government.

Oregon has a tradition of working closely with the federal government to provide a high standard of educational opportunity, but we must continue the quest to make higher education available to anyone who is willing and able to pursue it. As we forge headlong into the 21st century, higher education is facing challenges that will require even greater participation of state and federal governments, and the private sector as well.

We are fortunate to have had a history of success stories in Oregon, where federal assistance has been crucial to the development of higher education in six basic areas: research, student aid, health care, marine and fisheries, forestry, and agriculture. This year alone we have provided funding for the Small Fruits Research Center in Corvallis, the Neurosensory Research Center at Oregon Health Sciences University, Oregon Graduate Institute for new welding technology, and to the Oregon Institute of Technology for geothermal research.

Last year, approximately $110 million came to Oregon in the form of federally funded student loans. A total of $57 million of that amount came as part of the Stafford Grant Program (formerly the Pell Grants); $19 million in Perkins loans, $10 million in work study support, and $7 million in Veterans benefits.

These Oregon programs and projects, and the financial aid programs, require a continued commitment from the federal government. But budget constraints have limited our ability to realize real growth in crucial areas.

For instance, student aid programs have not kept pace with inflation. In reauthorizing the Stafford Grant Program in 1986, Congress scheduled the basic grant for the neediest students to increase to $3,100 in 1991-1992. But due to budget limitations and increased demands for these grants, the maximum award remains at $2,400, just $300 above the 1986 maximum of $2,100.

And, as a result of Measure 5, there has been a dramatic 37 percent increase in tuition for students in the Oregon system. A similar concern has been Oregon's declining rank among Pac-10 public universities in terms of faculty salaries. Out-of-state institutions are raiding Oregon campuses to recruit our faculty, offering salary increases of 23 to 70 percent. On average, faculty members leaving Oregon State University have been accepting salary increases of 47 percent.

Clearly we have a difficult challenge ahead of us — to meet the needs of those who want access to education, and do so within the constraints of Measure 5 and the federal budget.

Part of the solution has been to strengthen Oregon's commitment to higher education by integrating and unifying existing programs that compete for limited resources. The Oregon Graduate Institute has provided a unique partnership between public and private research programs and representatives from the engineering and high-technology industries.

The partnership with the private sector is critical to the development of higher skills training. Senator Ted Kennedy and I recently introduced a job skills bill that will increase the number of American workers in highly skilled positions. We are simply not doing enough to provide adequate education and training, and the consequence is America's declining role in the world marketplace. In addition to establishing federal performance standards for education and training, this legislation would require businesses to spend at least 1 percent of their payroll on worker training or pay an equal amount into a federal fund for training programs.

Community, junior and technical colleges play a major role in this regard and will continue to play an important role in the higher education system.

We are also seeking to integrate the private sector and higher education with legislation to establish an urban grant program. This legislation would provide a mechanism for educational institutions, like Portland State University, to form partnerships with business, government or non-profit groups to address severe urban problems, such as housing, and to provide better learning opportunities for disadvantaged urban students. The challenge is to adapt traditional university resources to meet the needs of the inner city, but in doing so we also hope to encourage partnerships between other universities and the urban university.

We have the successes here in Oregon, and the continued commitment to quality, that will help guide Oregon's higher education system as it continues to evolve in an era of budget austerity. We have the creative minds, the resources and the facilities to make it happen. Working together to build on existing partnerships while forging new ones will help us meet the challenge.

Mark O. Hatfield, 70, has been Republican senator for Oregon since 1966. His current term expires in 1996. He earned his bachelors degree at Willamette University in 1943, his masters from Stanford University in 1948 and has received numerous honorary doctorate degrees. He was governor of Oregon for two terms, 1959 to 1967.

On the lighter side this week: I'm bored

As if I don't have anything else to do, now they're making procrastination via television as hard as ever. Consider these couple facts (all that was available to me come press time) that are sure to make you nod.

In the prime of Bart Simpson's rebel existence, creator Matt Groening was under immense pressure from our beloved PC'ites to tone down the once-favorite smart mouth. It seems the moms of the world were whining that their kids were taking after Bart a little too much and that he was not an ideal role model.

Ken Hile

When I first heard the news, I shunned the fact that Groening might cave. After all, Bart and his attitude are the lifeblood of that show. That's what made him popular. But I ask you this. Last season, did you notice that Homer, not Bart, was the centerpiece of almost every show? And when Bart did make it on the screen, was he not somewhat subdued? Still had a trace of attitude, but was subdued. The "family" theme became more prevalent. "Oh gee, that's so sweet."

Now, as I watch the Simpsons this year, it's worse. Not only is Groening not being coy about hiding Bart's newfound subservience, but the family theme is out of control. We're dealing with real emotional issues, family problems, anti-violence, anti-greed, anti-this, anti-that. Puke!

All I say is, watch the ratings fall and the Simpsons fade away.

Next comes the National Football League and its anti-celebration and anti-fraternizing rules. Players are no longer allowed to celebrate in the end zone. No moon walks, spiking the ball, Ickey Shuffles, nothing. When an overly gleeful receiver hucked his touchdown ball into the stands for fans to prize, he was penalized 15 yards. Is that bad?

And after the game, players are supposed to go directly to their locker rooms without fraternizing with players on the other team. This came as a result of a near postgame fight last year between San Francisco's Ronnie Lott and New York Giants' Phil Simms. It's ironic that just that season my friend and I were commenting on how cool and popular it had become for the opposing players to shake hands and rap after a game. Mind you nobody is following this rule, it's ALL OUT ANARCHY by NFL standards, but the idea of enforcing the rule is ridiculous. It's a job to them, and they're all friends. Let it be.

I say spike the ball all you want, talk like hell, and let the kicker take care of the penalty. As for the Simpsons, it was a nice show while it lasted.

Political correctness really needs to go away. I'm getting bored with it.

'Conversation' your only real opportunity

By Todd Foster

Before you skip to the next article, let me ask you this. Did you wish you could have done something about Ballot Measure 5 last year? Are you angry that your tuition increased and you didn't have a say? Are you returning to OSU to find that several of your friends couldn't? Has your favorite professor and his entire department disappeared from the schedule of classes?

If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, there is hope. You will have the opportunity to make your voice heard this year. Governor Barbara Roberts has begun the "Kickoff" of "A Conversation with Oregon." The Governor's office will be working very hard for the next several months to see what we, the little, yet most important people, would like Oregon to become as a state. Why? Let me explain.

To wet the taste-buds of your brain, let me explain, or at least opionate, that we do not live in a democracy. We live in a republic, and a republic by definition is a system of government where elected representatives make decisions for those who voted for them. Our elected officials are essentially "hired" by us to work for us in governing our state. However, many of us realize consciously, and unconsciously, that our political system is in a bad state of disrepair.

Once we elect our officials, many become enslaved to political action committees, lobbyists and "special interests" (tobacco companies, National Rifle Association and the American Medical Association, etc.). The number-one job of our politicians, once we elect them, is to get re-elected. Even the good ones will agree to that.

Providing the best for our state is the second priority. If you walk up to an elected official and ask them if this is true, he or she will be able to talk their way around the question and site supporting statements such as "Well if I'm not doing my job right then don't re-elect me." Chances are you will walk away from the politician feeling confused or feeling that the person was really nice. But don't let that get to you. It's a politician's job to be really nice.

The bottom line is that our system of politics turns us off. Why would we want to participate? It's easy to feel helpless, and as a result we are labeled apathetic. It's not our fault. The information we need to be active members in our own government lies in only three places. One, in running for elected office or working for the government. Two, devoting four

Return of Dark Age?

To the editor:

U.S. Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas' praise for the implicit use of natural law in judicial decisions gives legal standing to Catholic theological complaints about "unnatural" sex. Using the pretext of natural law, the Catholic hierarchy opposes birth control, sex hygiene items such as condoms, sex education in schools, abortion, masturbation, and homosexuality. Their real motive is to make people suffer for having sex.

They still believe virginity is best and that all sexual intercourse, even within marriage, is somehow impure and regrettable. Yet celibacy practiced by the Catholic hierarchy is just as unnatural as birth control.

In Asia 2,400 years ago the Chinese philosopher Lao-tse objected to roads, carriages, and boats as unnatural. Clothes are contrary to nature yet make man healthier than the naked savage who goes without clothing.

Today we support the idea of inherent human rights but these are quite different from natural law. Since Judeo-Christianity's basic cosmological model is essentially monarchical, only acquired, and more specifically, bestowed rights — which are revocable — can be found in the Bible and many rights therein are ethnic group or gender based (Hall, "Two Kinds of Rights, 1988).

Let's not return to the Dark Ages under the rubric of natural law.

Letters policy

The Daily Barometer welcomes letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, double-spaced and generally 150 words or less. All letters will be considered for publication. However, due to the limited space available, brevity is encouraged.

Letters from students must include the author's signature, telephone number, academic major and class standing.

Letters from faculty members, administrators and classified employees must include the author's signature, job title, department name and telephone number.

Letters submitted by members of the community must include the author's signature, address and telephone number.

that all parties must participate in.

If you are not pleased with the effects of Measure 5, and you would like to contribute your opinion during the conversation you won't be excluded. If you are in support of smaller government, then you need to participate in this conversation because in 1997 when the full effects of Measure 5 have been implemented, we will have a smaller government, but it won't be the kind that any proponent of smaller government would want.

Most of you are probably thinking right now that the governor wants to know if we want a sales tax. You're probably right. If the registered, active voters of the state want to see a sales tax, it will be on the ballot in mid-to-late 1992, but in keeping with the spirit of the Conversation, it is found that Oregonians want to dissolve state services and government from what it is today. Well, there is a plan to implement this will of the voters also.

The Governor is bypassing all of the bureaucracy who doesn't have a clue what "you and I" as individual citizens think about state government and tax policy.

Now obviously, you and I don't have any concept of what state government or tax policy should be like because few if any students spend our free time studying such things. But we do have an opinion on what OSU should be like. Unless you're really weird or elitist, you probably believe that (1) We should all be able to afford to go to OSU (2) OSU should provide an opportunity to get a good education in a wide variety of fields.

It's that simple. We're students, we all study different subjects here, we all come from different areas of the world, and none of us are experts on state government or taxes. But, we are the ONLY experts who can testify to what students feel, need and deserve. Even Governor Roberts doesn't have that knowledge.

So if you're still reading this and thinking that I am going to reiterate the problems that OSU will have this year, then don't worry. I am only suggesting that maybe instead of whining about our tuition increases we should get off of our butts and do something about it. Actions speak louder than words.

Todd Foster is ASOSU student affairs task force director. He is a junior in political science.

Allegations may stall decision

Thomas accused of sexual harassment

By PETE YOST

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas "very forcefully denied" allegations by a law professor that he sexually harassed her when she worked for him a decade ago, a Republican senator said Sunday. And the White House dismissed the accusations as "unfounded."

But Democratic senators called the accusations very serious and two said a delay in Tuesday's scheduled confirmation vote might be necessary.

Thomas himself made no comment on the allegations by Anita Hill. The allegations were first disclosed by National Public Radio and Newsday.

The University of Oklahoma law professor told the Judiciary Committee last month that Thomas had detailed scenes from pornographic movies to her when she worked in the early 1980s as his legal assistant at the Department of Education and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, according to a source familiar with the allegations.

Hill told the committee that Thomas had asked her out and when she refused, began to describe his sexual interests and the pornographic scenes, but he never touched her, the source said.

"I felt as though I did not have a choice, that the pressure was such that I was going to have to submit to that pressure in order to continue getting good assignments, being able to work and be comfortable in the work environment," Hill said in an interview with National Public Radio.

The committee did not disclose Hill's allegations publicly before sending Thomas' nomination to the full Senate late last month without recommendation. The committee told the White House of the accusations and a two-day FBI probe ensued.

Taylor Marries For The Eighth Time

By JEFF WILSON
 Associated Press Writer

LOS OLIVOS, Calif. (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor and ordinary guy Larry Fortensky took the plunge — along with a skydiving intruder — under a swirl of airborne reporters and photographers trying to glimpse the screen star's eighth wedding.

Miss Taylor, 59, and Fortensky, a truck driver 20 years her junior, were at a gazebo altar Sunday at Michael Jackson's whimsical Neverland ranch when a parachutist wearing a helmet camera dropped in, landing within 100 feet of the couple.

Guards seized Scott Kyle Harris, a 34-year-old free-lance journalist from Sun Valley, and took him away in handcuffs.

The couple then exchanged vows and a flock of white doves flew skyward, capping a star-studded ceremony performed by lifestyle guru Marianne Williamson. Jackson, a close friend, and Miss Taylor's eldest son, Michael Wilding, gave away the bride.

Jackson publicist Lee Solters, who attended the wedding, said the ceremony was "very simple," with the skydiver — who was cited for trespassing and released — providing the most dramatic moment.

The Oscar-winning star of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "Butterfield 8" met husband No. 7 in 1988 when both were at the Betty Ford Clinic to kick drugs. She announced their engagement in July with the promise: "This is it!"

Exclusive rights to cover the ceremony were sold to photographer Herb Ritts and gossip columnist Liz Smith, with the proceeds going toward AIDS research, a cause championed by Miss Taylor.

The 160-strong guest list reportedly included Ronald and Nancy Reagan, Gerald and Betty Ford, Gregory Peck, director Franco Zeffirelli, Arsenio Hall, Pia Zadora, George Hamilton, Liza Minnelli, Merv Griffin, Quincy Jones and "Home Alone" star Macaulay Culkin.

Arrivals in limousines were identified at the walled gate to the 2,700-acre ranch, then escorted through an airport-style metal detector. The property includes an amusement park and a zoo stocked with exotic pets such as llamas.

Fifteen minutes before the ceremony, a fleet of media helicopters lifted off from a nearby airport and descended upon Neverland.

The California Highway Patrol set up a roadblock and banned parking a mile from the ranch. About 100 journalists, fans and curious neighbors milled about under the hot sun as limousines with darkened windows passed.

Miss Taylor was 18 when she married Conrad Nicholson "Nicky" Hilton in 1950. After divorcing Hilton, she married actor Michael Wilding, then producer Mike Todd, singer Eddie Fisher and actor Richard Burton. She and Burton divorced in 1974, remarried in 1975 and divorced again that same year.

In 1976, she married Virginian John W. Warner and helped his successful campaign for the U.S. Senate in 1978. They divorced in 1982.

OSU loses marathon to WSU, falls flat against UW

By MALINDA WOODMAN
of the Daily Barometer

Without the talents of Amy Svihart and Leslie Preiss, the team's leading scorers, the Oregon State volleyball team dropped two matches to the Washington schools over the weekend.

Preiss sat out both matches because of an injury she sustained after getting hit in the face with a ball during Thursday's practice. Meanwhile, Svihart went down in the second game of Friday's match against Washington State with a knee injury and sat out the rest of the night. Unfortunately, she didn't make an appearance in Saturday's match either.

Friday's match went down to the wire. Both teams won two games and the final game went to 21-19. The battle lasted a full two hours and 40 minutes and both teams fought hard, but the Cougars prevailed 9-15, 15-7, 16-14, 15-17, 21-19.

"I think the team rose above the loss of Preiss and Svihart," said head coach Dave Gantt after the match. "It certainly would have been nice to have had them and their loss was definitely a factor."

Freshmen Shelly Smith and Melanie Yamaguchi filled the void though, as they combined for 39 of the team's 74 kills. Smith paced the Beaver offense with a season-high 24 kills, while Yamaguchi contributed 15 in just four games played.

Setter Christine Camp led the Beaver defense with 21 of the team's 105 digs.

Junior Kristen Hovde led the Cougar attack with 30 kills and teammate Kelly Hankins was next with 22. Carrie Coururier had 18 kills and she also led the Cougar defense with 23 digs.

The 20th-ranked Washington State Cougars upped their conference record to 3-1 and are 15-4 for the season.

"We played well enough to win until the very end," said Gantt. "All we can do is keep working and sooner or later, we'll win a close one."

Saturday night's match wasn't a close one as the Beavers were swept by the Washington Huskies in three straight games 15-9, 15-6 15-3.

"We didn't compete tonight," said Gantt after the match. "We had a tough match last night and we just didn't rise to the occasion. We definitely missed Amy and Leslie, but that's when other players need to step up and take over."

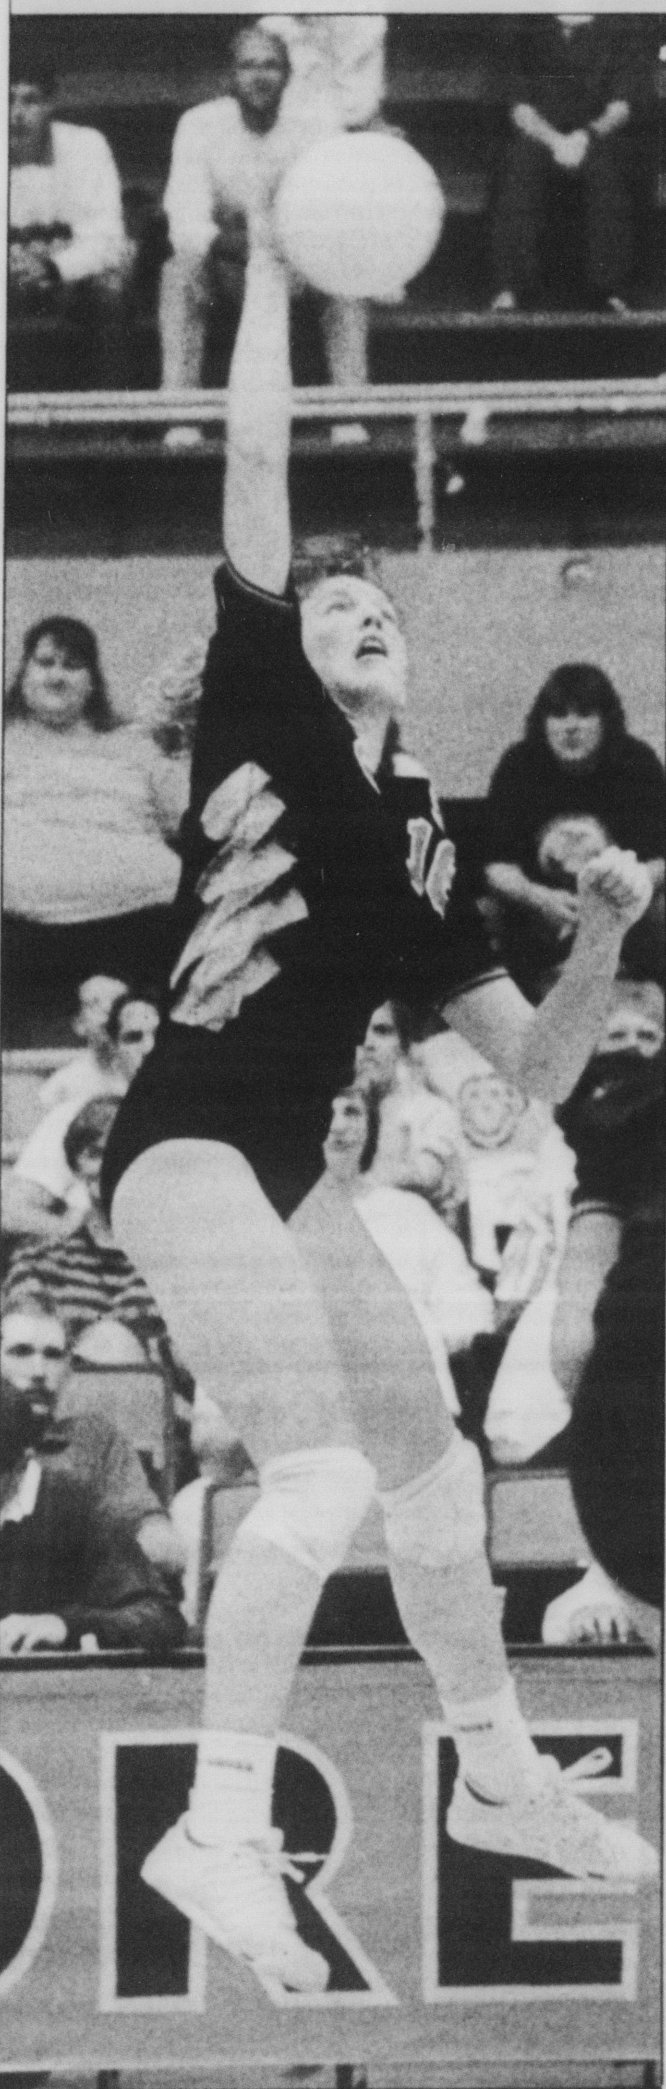

Senior Lisa Hecht did her part, leading OSU with 10 kills, 12 digs and two solo stuffs. Smith was second on the team with seven kills, 12 digs and two solo blocks.

Sophomore Traci Minten added 12 digs for the Beaver defense, and freshman Tanya Lifa had five solo blocks and one block assist. Lifa now leads the team with 27 solo stuffs and 51 block assists for the season. Dawn Austin led the Huskies on offense and defense with 12 kills, 17 digs and five solo blocks. Teammate Ashleigh Robertson was second with 11 kills and 12 digs.

"You have to give Washington credit, they blocked us well," said Gantt. The Huskies had 14 blocks for the night.

Washington's record improved to 2-3 in the Pacific-10 Conference and 11-5 overall, while the Beavers fell to 1-5 in league play and 8-10 overall.

The Beavers will be in the Bay Area next weekend to challenge Stanford and California, and then they'll stop back in Portland on Tuesday, Oct. 15 for a non-conference match against the Pilots. Their next home match will be the civil war match with the Oregon Ducks on Friday, Oct. 18 in Gill Coliseum at 7:30 p.m. That match will be televised tape-delayed on Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. by Prime Sports Northwest.

OSU loses ninth straight

Cougs beat Beavers to a pulp, 55-7

By JESS REED
of the Daily Barometer

Two early Oregon State special teams fumbles and a wide open defense helped Washington State continue to dominate OSU as the Cougars crushed the Beavers 55-7 on Saturday.

Oregon State's defense has allowed 110 points to the Cougars' strong passing attack in the last two years. The Beavers are 0-10-1 against the Cougars since 1978. "Yeah, it was easy," WSU receiver Phillip Bobo said after the game. "They weren't stopping anything we did."

WSU racked up 503 yards total offense for the game while holding the Beavers to 178 yards, only 10 of which were passing yards.

Oregon State's woes started early. After stopping Washington State's opening drive, punt returner Maurice Wilson fumbled the ball on the OSU 17-yard line to set up a quick 7-0 WSU lead.

On the ensuing kickoff, Chad Paulson fumbled during the run-back, putting the ball on the 22-yard line. One play later, Cougar quarterback Drew Bledsoe hit Bobo in the end zone for his first of his five touchdown passes.

On Washington State's next possession, Bledsoe was able to increase the score to 21-0 after hitting Deron Pointer for a 32-yard pass. For the day, Bledsoe was 20-26 passing for 270 yards. He hit C.J. Davis six times in the game for 100 yards and one touchdown. Bobo caught five passes for 56 yards and two touchdowns.

"The secondary is back there for a purpose — to cover people — and we didn't do that," OSU safety Brent Huff said.

The Beavers' only bright spot came at the hands of true freshman Mark Olford. Playing in his first college game, the backup quarterback from Sacramento had a 58-yard touchdown run, and had 94 yards off 21 carries to lead the Beavers.

Olford also had three fumbles. OSU coughed the ball up six times on the day and lost three.

"When you play a young player like that, he has the potential to make a big play, and he made a real big play and ran for a touchdown," Oregon State head coach Jerry Pettibone said. "And he had the potential to make big mistakes, and he did that, too." Washington State didn't let the Beavers cheer for long as a double-reverse touchdown by Davis upped the score to 28-7. One more score in the half after an Olford fumble gave the Cougars a 35-7 advantage.

Three more touchdowns in the second half gave the Cougars just their second victory of the year. Washington State racked up 33 first downs to just 11 by the Beavers.

The Beavers are now 0-1 in the Pacific-10 and 0-4 overall. Washington State moved to sixth place in the Pac-10 with a 1-1 record, and 2-3 overall.

Oregon State will take on Arizona State next Saturday at Parker Stadium for a 1 p.m. contest.

Puget Sound outscores Beavers, 3-1

By DOUG BINDER
of the Daily Barometer

Oregon State put up a good fight, but faded in the second half and lost to Puget Sound 3-1 in women's soccer action Sunday. The loss drops the Beavers to 2-8-1 overall on the season, and 1-1-1 in league play. Although the Beavers managed to outshoot Puget Sound 21-18, OSU couldn't stick the ball in the net.

"We didn't have much luck in the first half when we had chances," said OSU head coach Dave Oberbillig. "And we didn't play with the same intensity in the second."

Puget Sound scored to open the game and take the early 1-0 lead. Despite some good first-half play and some scoring opportunities, OSU didn't get on the board until midway through the first half on a direct kick by sophomore midfielder Cacey Zimmer. The first half ended with the score tied at one.

Puget Sound took control of the second half, scoring two more goals. Goalkeeper Dinah Marsh made a great save on a free kick that could have given Puget Sound another goal.

Meanwhile, OSU couldn't come together around Puget Sound's net and the opportunities were few and far between.

"This was a game I thought we could win," Oberbillig said. "We're having trouble finding the back of the net. We're getting it there, but not finishing it off."

Things aren't going to get any easier this week. The Beavers will host the nationally-ranked Portland Pilots at 4 p.m. on Tuesday at the Women's Building Field.

"They've got an All-American that we'll have to try to shut down," Oberbillig said. "If we can do that, I think we'll match up OK with them."

NOTE: On This Date ... will become a new daily feature in the Barometer sports section. It will take a day-by-day look at some of the greatest moments in OSU sports history.

In 1961, on this date in Oregon State sports history, junior quarterback Terry Baker had one of his best games of the '61 season. He gained 154 yards in total offense and led the Beavers to a 44-6 victory over Idaho.

Baker went on to become perhaps the most accomplished athlete in OSU history. The following year he won the Heisman Trophy and was named Man of the Year by Sports Illustrated. He will also be making several more appearances in this daily format as the year goes on.

Young scores 3 in OSU win

By DOUG BINDER
of the Daily Barometer

Junior forward Sean Young struck for three goals in the first half, leading the Oregon State Beavers to a 4-1 victory over Evergreen State on the Women's Building Field Saturday.

All the scoring took place in the first half of play, and the Beavers, particularly Young, dominated.

Junior Rick Kempf scored the Beavers' first goal of the game off an assist from junior midfielder Loren Delaney, and Evergreen came back with a goal of their own to knot the game at one goal apiece.

Then Young took over. He broke the tie with a tap in for his first goal, scored off an assist from senior defender David Link for his second and then fired in a rocket from 25 feet out.

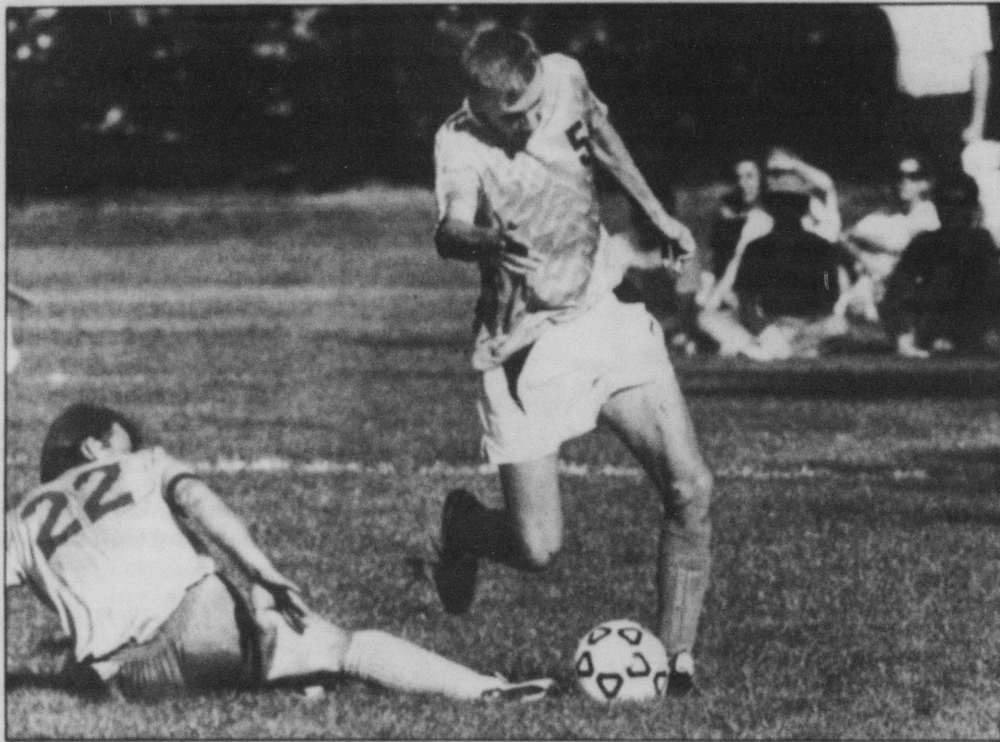

"I wish they all went like this," said Young. "I had a lot of good opportunities."

OSU head coach Jimmy Conway said he wasn't surprised at Young's scoring spree.

The scoreless second half was also controlled by the Beavers, although they weren't quite as sharp.

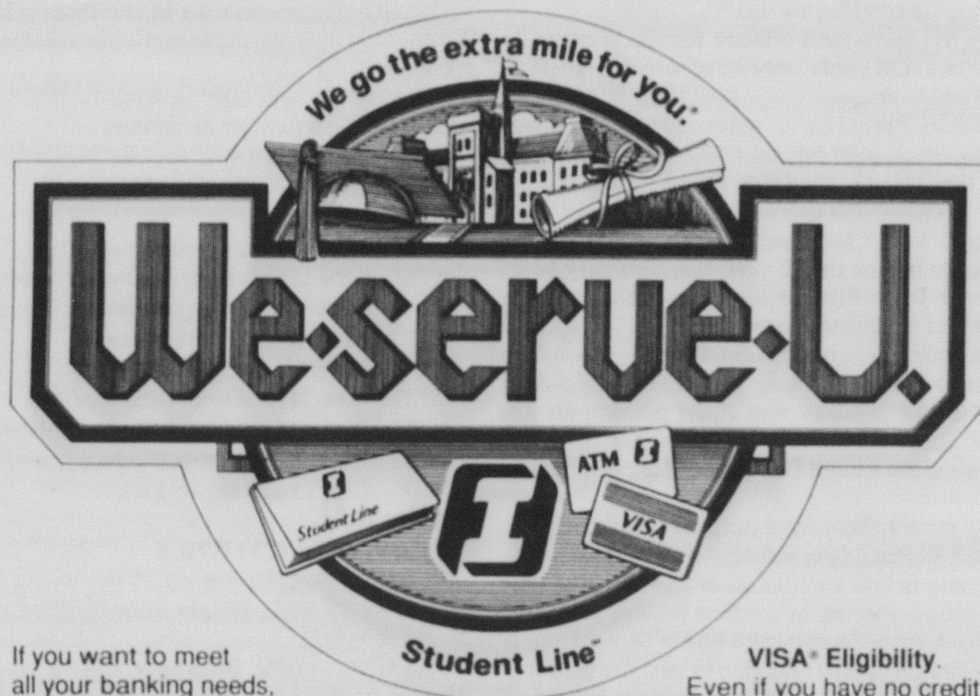

Kempf and junior Chris Scotti each had good scoring opportunities in the second half, but they didn't find the net. For the game, OSU outshot Evergreen 26-4.

The win pushed OSU's record to 6-4 overall for the season. The Beavers will be on the road this week, taking on Pacific Lutheran in an important league game Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Junior Sean Young maneuvers around an Evergreen defender on the way to one of his three first-half goals. OSU won Saturday's game 4-1.

Oilers, Redskins dominate weekend action

By BARRY WILNER

Associated Press Writer

The Patriots made the Houston Oilers mad, and the Broncos paid for it.

Houston had two weeks to stew after being upset by lowly New England. Poor Denver.

"New England had a lot to do with it," said Bubba McDowell, who, along with Cris Dishman, keyed a turnover-happy defense in Houston's 42-14 romp. "We went up there and got a little lackadaisical. We knew we had to come out from the start and be the defense we know we can be. We made up our minds to come out and do that early."

Dishman returned a fumble by Steve Sewell 19 yards for a touchdown and set up another score with a 43-yard interception return. McDowell recovered a blocked punt in the end zone and also had a sack and blocked a field goal on the final play of the first half. Houston held Gaston Green, the AFC's leading rusher, to 35 yards and sacked John Elway five times. The Oilers led 35-0 at halftime.

Redskins 20, Bears 7

If the Chicago Bears (4-2) were going to prove their mettle, it would be against unbeaten Washington. Instead, the visiting Redskins showed why they have the league's best record.

Interceptions by Fred Stokes and Kurt Gouveia in the fourth quarter were converted into 10 points to clinch the Redskins' sixth win in as many games. Mark Rypien, who already had thrown a 26-yard touchdown pass to Art Monk, hit Monk with a 5-yarder with 6:20 left.

Washington, which has three shutouts this season, was denied its fourth on a 1-yard run by Neal Anderson that cut the lead to 10-7.

"We're not very good. We're not in their category," Bears coach Mike Ditka said. "I don't know who we can beat. It would have to be some team that scores less than seven points."

Lions 24, Vikings 20

Barry Sanders lifted the host Lions just when it looked as if all was lost.

Sanders scored on a 15-yard run with 36 seconds remaining to cap a furious 21-point comeback in the final 6:50. He rushed for 116 yards, 60 in the final quarter, also caught nine passes for 76 yards and was instrumental in all three late scoring drives.

"Any time you give the ball to Barry, you are hoping for a TD," quarterback Rodney Peete said.

The Lions' 5-1 start is the team's best since 1980. They took sole possession of first place in the NFC Central for the first time since the end of the 1983 season.

Seahawks 13, Bengals 7

At Cincinnati, the Bengals once again fell apart and lost their fifth straight for their worst start since Sam Wyche went 0-5 in 1984.

John Kasay's two second-half field goals provided the difference and Cincinnati's last-minute drive came up inches short. Cincinnati, without any timeouts, had fourth-and-5 at the Seattle 22. Boomer Esiason's short pass to James Brooks just missed a first down with 29 seconds left.

Bucs 14, Eagles 13

At Tampa, the Bucs ended a seven-game slide in sloppy style in the rain. Helped by Philadelphia's inept offense that gained just 83 yards, the Bucs stayed close despite committing six turnovers. Then Chris Chandler, replacing an ineffective Vinny Testaverde, threw an 8-yard TD to Robert Wilson after Broderick Thomas tackled punter Jeff Feagles inside the Philadelphia 10.

The Bucs got the ball back with 2:24 to go and marched 54 yards in six plays to go ahead on Bruce Hill's 5-yard reception with 1:09 remaining.

Rookie quarterback Brad Goebel, playing because Randall Cunningham and Jim McMahon are injured, completed nine of 20 passes for 62 yards and was intercepted twice.

Jets 17, Browns 14

At Cleveland, the Browns held the top-ranked running game in the league to 76 yards. But Ken O'Brien made Cleveland pay for that, completing 19 of 23 passes for 195 yards. Blair Thomas threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Rob Moore on an option play and Pat Leahy won it with a 28-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

A meeting you'll never forget.

Suddenly, there you are.

Face to face with the opportunity of a lifetime...and the implications are enormous. You're a Systems Support Engineer for Microsoft. Providing imaginative solutions to systems and application problems. And it's only the beginning.

Here, you'll never butt heads with boredom. Because your contribution begins right away. Immediately, you'll be interacting with third-party developers and writing sample code. Using your system support skills to the full.

If you're about to graduate with a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science, Math, Electrical Engineering or a related discipline, this is a great way to start. In the course of working, you'll become an expert on a system such as MS-DOS®, LAN Manager, SQL Server or Windows™ Software Development. On-the-job training for a career as immensely promising as the products themselves.

If you are not about to graduate, we offer Co-op opportunities in both systems and applications which provide a 9-month intensive learning experience.

Either way, we'd like to talk with you at our Information Sessions. If you've dreamed of making it big in the software industry, we can accommodate your ambitions.

We are an equal opportunity employer and are working toward a more culturally diverse workplace.
