Paily Daily Control of the Dai Metel

MONDAY, JANUARY 23, 2012 • OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY

CORVALLIS, OREGON 97331

DAILYBAROMETER.COM

VOLUME CXV, NUMBER 64

BASKETBALL: Beavers beat Trojans Saturday at Gill.

SPORTS

- 8 A Gary Payton sighting
 - Wrestlers go 2-0 on weekend

2 - Spoken word competition closes MLK week

FORUM

- 4 Time to end OLCC
- 4 Defending Bacc Core

Willamette jumps its banks

HANNAH GUSTIN | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Phill Bocchi looks on at the Willamette as it overflows the river banks on Friday. Heavy rain and floods demobilized the city as certain roads were closed and the university campus was shut down due to unsafe conditions.

Summit addresses Oregon's hunger problem

Oregon the least food secure state in the nation, Summit's five year hopes to help

> By Alex Hilborn THE DAILY BAROMETER

Organizations that attended the Ending Hunger in Oregon: 2012 Food Security Summit discussed a five-year plan for fighting against hunger issues that face the state.

On Jan. 19 and 20th, Oregon State University, in collaboration with the Oregon Hunger Task Force,

Partners for a Hunger Free Oregon and the Oregon Food Bank, hosted Oregon's Call to Action 2010-2015, the new five-year plan, seeks to eliminate hunger and establish food security in the state by addressing the underlying problems that cause food insecurity. The call to action presents hunger as a problem that has a negative effect on all of society and directs people in ways that they can help combat the problem.

See HUNGER | page 2

SARAH GILLIHAN | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Individuals and organizations gathered on campus for the 2012 Hunger Summit on Thursday and Friday.

HHS alters curriculum, work load

Health instructors decide to change class due to unnecessary work load

> By James Shrieve THE DAILY BAROMETER

Over winter break. Health and Human Services 231 changed two major parts of its curriculum: the Personal Health Portfolio, which went from a single long-term assignment to a two-part assignment, and the inclusion of clickers

Splitting the portfolio will disperse the work load and should allow students to focus more intently on the portfolio and the class as a whole, while the clickers will help maintain attendance rates and time spent focusing in class.

The changes were made by Erin Driver, instructor of fitness and wellness leadership, Stasi Kasianchuk, an instructor of public health and human sciences and Melinda Ameele, HHS lifetime fitness director.

Through observation of the number of hours spent by teaching assistants grading the PHPs, they determined that not only were the TAs being overworked, but so were the students.

Ameele had taken on the TA position in an attempt to experience first-hand how much work they were doing. "I've done it two terms, and this was how I determined that it was too much last term. We all grade a sample PHP and time ourselves, just to make sure we're all on the same page. Just by doing that

See HHS | page 3

HANNAH GUSTIN | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Students in HHS 231 crowd into Milam Auditorium for one of the university's most populated Bacc Core lecture courses.

Barometer

Newsroom: 541-737-2231 Business: 541-737-2233

Memorial Union East 106 Oregon State University Corvallis, OR 97331-1617

Find Us Here...

NEWS TIPS • 541-737-2231 FAX • 541-737-4999 E-MAIL • NEWS TIPS news@dailybarometer.com

Contact an editor

EDITOR IN CHIEF BRANDON SOUTHWARD 541-737-3191 editor@dailybarometer.com

MANAGING EDITOR DON ILER 541-737-2232 managing@dailybarometer.com

NEWS EDITOR JOCE DEWITT 541-737-2231 news@dailybarometer.com

FORUM EDITOR ARMAND RESTO 541-737-6376 forum@dailybarometer.com

SPORTS EDITOR GRADY GARRETT 541-737-6378 sports@dailybarometer.com

PHOTO EDITOR ALEXANDRA TAYLOR 541-737-6380 photo@dailybarometer.com

> SENIOR EDITOR JENNA BISSINGER

COPY EDITORS GRACE ZETTERBERG, ALEXANDRA KASPRICK, KAYLI PATERSON, LORI PUGACH, KAITY PILKERTON

To place an ad call 541-737-2233

BUSINESS MANAGER 541-737-6373

baro.business@oregonstate.edu

AD SALES REPRESENTATIVES 737-2233

PAUL COSTALES Dailybaro1@gmail.com STEVANIE MEDEARIS Dailybaro2@gmail.com DANI GREGOIRE Dailybaro3@gmail.com CALDER ALFORD Dailybaro4@gmail.com NATHAN BAUER Dailybaro5@gmail.com DEVON PARMENTER Dailybaro7@gmail.com

> CLASSIFIEDS 541-737-6372

PRODUCTION

baro.production@oregonstate.edu

The Barometer is published Monday through Friday except holidays and final exam week during the academic school year; weekly during summer term; one issue week prior to fall term in September by the Oregon State University Student Media Committee on behalf of the Associated Students of OSU, at Memorial Union East, OSU, Corvallis, OR 97331-1614

The Daily Barometer, published for use by OSU students, faculty and staff, is private property. A single copy of The Barometer is free from newsstands. Unauthorized removal of multiple copies will be considered theft and is prosecutable.

Responsibility — The University Student Media Committee is charged with the general supervision of all student publications and broadcast media operated under its authority for the students and staff of Oregon State University on behalf of the Associated Students of OSU.

Formal written complaints about The Daily Barometer may be referred to the committee for investigation and disposition. After hearing all elements involved in a complaint, the committee will report its decision to all parties concerned.

dailybarometer.com

Spoken word competitors close out MLK celebrations

Saturday event in the MU allows student poets chance to share

By Annecy Beauchemin THE DAILY BAROMETER

The concluding event of last week's Martin Luther King, Jr. celebrations was the spoken arts competition "Speaking Justice: Where do we go from here?"

Students, staff and Corvallis community members were invited to the Memorial Union lounge to share their spoken word performances inspired by Martin Luther King, Jr.'s 1967 speech "Where do we go from here?'

Each speaker was judged on numerous aspects, including engagement with the audience, body language, clarity and relevance. After the competing participants presented, a short intermission took place as the judges deliberated on the winning three.

In third place came Franklin Soares with his reading of William Ernest Henley's "Invictus." Second place was an original composition by Alexis West, a discussion of the week's issues through the eyes of a student. The first place forward in Syria on Sunday that instructs

President Bashar al-Assad to delegate powers to his vice president following the formation of a national unity government.

ed the plan, which it views as "blatant intervention in its internal affairs," Syria's official SANA news agency reported soon

ment to start a dialogue with the opposition within two weeks, and for the new government to be formed within two to elect a council, within three months, that will write a constitution, the Arab League said. It should also prepare for parliamentary and presidential elections.

The plan, details of which were

The unity government should prepare

The Arab League called for the govern-after the announcement.

The Syrian government roundly reject-

"Power for Love," an original poem.

Once the winners were announced, the second phase of the night's events began, guest performances by spoken word artists Joaquin Zihuatanejo and Natasha Carrizosa.

Joaquin Zihuatanejo is both a teacher and an award-winning slam poet who draws themes for his work from his experiences growing up in the barrio of east Dallas, according to his website. He has recited his work all over the country, as well as internationally.

At one point between performances, he shared his writing process before reciting a poem he wrote inspired by an incident in which he was insulted by a stranger at a shopping mall for speaking Spanish. His first impulse, he explained, was to write a revenge poem, perhaps titled "How much I hate the man at the mall." But when his initial anger died down, he explained, he ended up with a piece on how he and the man are more connected than supposed. The resulting poem, "Speaking in Tongues," discussed the fact that today's both languages share roots in

On the influence of multiple cultures on the evolution of modern language, Zihuatanejo retorts to the man at the mall, "Your tongue is as black as Eminem's and Elvis Presley's lyrics.'

Zihuatanejo has frequently collaborated with poet Natasha Carrizosa, with whom he shared most of the readings Saturday night, though both presented solo pieces as well. Through her subject matter, Carrizosa is more than a single poet standing before an audience—in her work, she claims to speak for many. At one point, she delivered an empathetic solo poem as the people of the horn of Africa: "I am your child; you watched me die." In conclusion of "Horn of Africa," she paused to catch her breath for the next piece. "This is a hard one for me,"

After the performances, Wynton Davis, a high school student at the event, commented on the power of Zihuatanejo and Ĉarrizosa's work. "I was impressed," he award was Brandi Douglas's English language is full of bor- said, "with how well the audirowed Spanish words and that ence responded, even when they weren't snapping.'

The audience was invited at the beginning of the event to snap their fingers when a poem resonated with them, classic poetry slam style. "I could feel it," Davis said.

The reading's host, Anderson DuBoise, was looking for an activity for the week that was "a more artistic, creative event than a talk or lecture" that still made people think during the planning process of the MLK celebrations. Spoken word art immediately came to mind.

DuBoise himself presented "Where do we go from here?" with the competing readers. "This is not my first time doing poetry," he said. "But the first event like this in a long time. There used to be a spoken word club on campus, but that ended before I got there." There is, however, interest in restarting the group.

For those who missed presenting or who were inspired to write their own poems, the opportunities may have just begun with Saturday's event.

Annecy Beauchemin, staff reporter 737-2231 news@dailybarometer.com

Monday, Jan. 23

College Democrats, 5pm, MU Board Room. Come talk about current events, local campaigns and international news with like-minded people!

Speakers

Socratic Club, 7:30pm, Milam Auditorium. A debate: Speakers Dr. Nicole von Germeten, a Latin American History professor at OSU and Dr. Joseph Orosco, a Philosophy professor at OSU, will debate "The influence of Christianity on Latin America: Beneficial or

Tuesday, Jan. 24

Meetings

ASOSU Senate, 7pm, MU 109A Convenes to discuss student issues Students and student organization delegates are welcome to attend.

Recreational Sports, Noon-1:30pm, MU 110. Open Hearing. Public input for 2012-13 Recreational Sports budget.

The Pride Center, 3:30-4:30pm, The Pride Center. A discussion group focused on LGBTQ issues and topcs. Tea will be provided

Wednesday, Jan. 25

Meetings

ASOSU House of Representatives,

7pm, MU 211. Convenes to discuss student issues and concerns. Students and student organization delegates are welcome to attend.

Baha'i Campus Association, 12:30-1pm, MU Talisman Room. Recharge your battery - Interfaith meditation, devotion and prayers - bring your favor-ite inspirational reading to share.

Thursday, Jan. 26

Meetings

Recreational Sports, 3-4pm, Dixon Conference Room, RecSports Board Meeting. Discussion and deliberation on 2012-13 Recreational Sports budget

Friday, Jan. 27

Speakers

Sustainable Energy Initiative, 7pm, former Secretary of State, will present "Global Warming Hits Home" and discuss conservation efforts in Oregon, job opportunities created by renewable energy and Oregon's new energy

Sunday, Jan. 29

Meetings

Vegans & Vegetarians @ OSU, 5pm, SSC, 738 SW 15th St. We eat, chat and exchange recipes. All are welcome, even if you aren't vegetarian.

Monday, Jan. 30

Meetings

College Democrats, 5pm, MU Board Room. Come talk about current events, local campaigns and international news

Tuesday, Jan. 31

Meetings

ASOSU Senate, 7pm, MU 109A. Convenes to discuss student issues Students and student organization delegates are welcome to attend

Wednesday, Feb. 1

Meetings

ASOSU House of Representatives 7pm, MU 211. Convenes to discuss student issues and concerns. Students and student organization delegates are welcome to attend.

Baha'i Campus Association, 12:30-1pm, MU Talisman Room. Recharge yourself - Bring your favorite inspirational reading, prayer or devotion to share in an interfaith surrounding. Monday, Feb. 6

Meetings

College Democrats, 5pm, MU Board Room. Come talk about current events. local campaigns and international news with like-minded people!

Tuesday, Feb. 7

Meetings

ASOSU Senate, 7pm, MU 109A. Convenes to discuss student issues Students and student organization delegates are welcome to attend.

national unity government to enable it difficult for observers to do their jobs. to perform its task in the transitional But Arab League monitors have seen period," the foreign minister said. some aspects of the situation improve, The Arab League will take its initiative, he said. which does not back military interven-'The presence of the Arab monitors tion in Syria, to the United Nations in a bid to build international support. The organization also said it would extend its monitoring mission in Syria and increase the number of observers there. The mission was scheduled to end last

Syria rejects Arab league call for unity government

The Arab League agreed on a path announced by Qatari Foreign Minister Thursday. It was not clear whether Syrian

Hamad bin Jassim Al Thani at a press conference in Cairo, is the clearest statement yet from the Arab League on what the league's member states would like to

It remains unclear what weight, if any,

"The president will delegate his first vice president the full power to work with the proposal will carry on the ground.

see happen in Syria.

officials would accept the offer.

Secretary-General Nabil el-Araby said

the Syrian government has not complied with some parts of an Arab League agreement aimed at ending a violent crackdown on protesters. Syrian officials are treating the crisis as a security problem,

he said, noting that armed opposition factions controlling some areas made it provided security to opposition parties, which held an increase in number of peaceful protests ... in the areas where the monitors were present," el-Araby

-CNN

HUNGER

"Expanded programs that address the root causes of hunger and an emergency supply to keep up with community needs," said Rachel Bristol, CEO of the Oregon Food Bank, about what measures society must take to end hunger. "It's a solvable problem. We just need the politi-

On and off for the past decade, Oregon has held the position as the least food secure state in the nation as efforts to eliminate hunger led to improvements on the complicated issue only for the benefits of improvements to recede. Using the five-year plan, the organizations that combat hunger hope to move beyond simply responding to the issue. They want to provide hunger relief in the form of food to prevent hunger before it begins by changing government infrastructure.

"Feed people first then deal with the root causes; minimum wage, housing and transport," said former Oregon Senator Ron Cease. "Of course they are very controversial issues." Advocates for ending hunger point to lack of a national minimum wage stan-

one of the key sources of hunger. Workers' wages are too low to keep up with the cost of living. Low income households cannot keep up with the increasing costs of housing, transportation, utilities, child care and health care. This leads people to have little to no money to spend on food once these expenses are paid.

To combat the root causes of hunger, the five year plan outlines three goals for seeing a hunger-free Oregon. The call to action seeks for the improvement of economies on both the local and state level to make communities more resistant to the issues that create food insecurity. The plan also outlines the creation and maintenance of a reliable food network so that resources are accessible and the implementation of a safety net for those who fall back from hard times.

Changing public policy often takes vast amounts of time due to the processes involved and the opinionated nature of most issues. As a result, advocates for eliminating hunger stress the importance of public participation during the "Get people to come to the warehouse, it's an entry point. Then get them to repack food," Bristol said. "Then the pubdard that could keep up with inflation as lic policy network; write senators. It is a continuum; a platform to move people

In one of the opening speeches for the summit, Bristol talked about her vision of every hunger-free Oregon advocate coming together at one time to march to the state legislature, or even the nation's capital, so that politicians understand that people care about the problem.

During the summit, the two keynote speakers, Max Finberg and Dr. Deborah Frank, gave speeches about their respective areas of expertise on federal food policies and the medical side of hunger. The summit also had two round table discussions on ways hunger gets portrayed in the news and government policies as well as numerous breakout sessions dealing with diverse aspects of hunger.

"Progress is not necessarily not news. People have to believe you can make progress on an issue," said David Sarashon of the Oregonian on whether or not the hunger-free Oregon movement will lose momentum once the state no longer had a top ranking in food insecurity. "As there are advances, these are worthy of attention too.'

Alex Hilborn, staff reporter

737-2231 news@dailybarometer.com

Master of Arts in Teaching

- Earn your master's degree, teaching license, and ESOL endorsement at the same time! Applications for March 2012 due January 27
- For more information contact Bill Hamlin at 503-838-8704 or email hamlinw@wou.edu

Applications for June 2012 due April 20

www.wou.edu/mat

Western Oregon

Students save at our new 9th Street location!

- $2 Coil Binds. Coil bind with vinyl cover
- Free Letter or Tabloid paper upgrade. Print your project on card-stock or colored pa for the price of standard paper.
- Color Oversize Printing at $6 per square foot.

1175 NW 9th St. 541-757-8127 Present your Student ID to take advantage of Sale. Good at our Corvallis location only. Promotion good thru April 30, 2012.

Socratic Club debate tonight in Milam

Two speakers will discuss the influence of Christianity on Latin American history

By James Shrieve

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Milam Auditorium, the Socratic Club will sponsor a debate on the topic, "The Influence of Christianity on Latin America: Beneficial or Destructive?"

The speakers will be Dr. Joseph Orosco and Dr. Nicole von Germeten. The event will be mediated by Luke English, a member of the Socratic Club. Also present will be Father Ygnacio Llorent, Campus Ministry Director at the Newman Center. It is a free event and open to the public.

"The influence of Christianity on Latin American life and culture has long been hotly debated. The names of conquistadores like Pizzaro and Cortes have become synonymous with the brutality of Spanish imperialism," according to the Socratic Club. "But missionaries like Bartolome de las Casas and bishops like Samuel Ruiz Garcia have drawn attention for their efforts to defend human rights, especially of the Amerindians. Latin American history has become a battleground for historians' disputes over the influence of Christianity on native cultures.'

had a negative effect on Latin American culture, while Dr. von Germeten will argue that it had a positive influence.

Orosco received his Ph.D. and M.A. in philosophy from the University of California, Riverside, and his B.A. in philosophy from Reed College in Portland, Ore. His primary area of interest is in social and political philosophy, particularly democratic theory and global justice. He teaches classes in American Philosophy and Latin American thought, with an emphasis on Mexican culture, history and immigration to the United States.

Nicole von Germeten received her Ph.D. from the University of California Berkeley in 2003. She also has an M.A. in Spanish language literature and wrote a thesis on Sor Juana Ines de la Cruz's use of indigenous Mexican language and religion. She has written two books and contributed essays, reviews and articles to several edited volumes and journals, including "Black Mexico," "Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture," "Colonial Latin American Historical Review," and "Local Religion in Colonial Mexico."

The speakers will each be given 15 minutes to present their case. Then there will be a seven minute period given to each of them for rebuttals. Following that, Father Ygnacio Llorent will speak on his experiences with Christianity in Latin America. This will

Orosco will argue that Christianity has roll into a discussion between the three of them and the event will end with a 45-minute open conversation with the

Dr. von Germeten participated in a debate during fall term for the Socratic Club, in which she flexed her knowledge of Mayan history and culture. The Club asked her to return for this event and she suggested that Dr. Orosco be the other speaker.

"We hold two or three one-hour meetings for administrative planning for preparing the debate. Dr Ferngren, a member of our club and a professor at OSU, spends a good bit of time talking with the speakers, emailing them, and making sure they understand the topic and how the debate will go. He also spends untold hours emailing religious newspapers in the area; religious organizations to get the word out," said Matt Reuben, president of the Socratic Club. Club members spend a couple of hours getting finances together, as well as posting fliers and ads around campus.

The Socratic Club sponsors five to six debates every year on subjects at the intersection of the Christian faith and contemporary culture. This is their tenth anniversary as a student organization on campus. Most of the debates can be found on YouTube.

> James Shrieve, staff reporter 737-2231 news@dailybaror

541-752-5151 • 1045 NW Kings See our menu at www.woodstocks.com

HHS

■ Continued from page 1

sample one, I knew it was too much," she said. "Too much for a two credit class, that's the key point."

Now the assignment will be split up "in ways the students don't even know yet," Ameele added. "This is the test term. It was just developed and now it is going into play. We hope it will make the work load more manageable." The effectiveness of the change will be measured by the amount of time it takes TAs to finish grading assignments.

The changes come after a relatively steady period during the class. Students learn how to journal about what they are ingesting, then go online and discover the nutritious details. This whole package will be requested from students in week five so that the TAs would have enough time to grade it before dead week. This was all done while taking on a regular course load of

The FAFSA is your key to accessing funds for your lectures and labs.

play. We hope it will make the work load

more manageable.

Melinda Ameele

HHS lifetime fitness director

Along with the new arrangement of the PHP comes the inclusion of clickers in the lectures. Ameele sat in on a few lectures and discovered just how effective they were. The classes were full and the instructors are doing well and the students are taking notes. It's going good. From what I can see the It was just developed changes have been effective." and now it is going into

The class is also responding to a change in government policies regarding nutrition and health.

Up until 2010, the Department of Agriculture had used the MyPyramid system as a way of evaluating nutrition. In 2011, MyPyramid was replaced by MyPlate, which emphasizes the nutrition in each meal over that of a day's intake. While this seems mundane, it is the most radical change the government has made to its nutrition policies in at least a decade.

> James Shrieve, staff reporter 737-2231 news@dailybarometer.com

Outreach in Biotechnology — Food for Thought Lecture Series PUTTING IT ALL ON THE TABLE

Feast, Famine and the Future of Food

Peggy G. Lemaux

WEDNESDAY JAN. 25 7-8:30 P.M.

LaSells Stewart Center FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC 541-737-4098 oregonstate.edu/orb

Peggy G. Lemaux, a Cooperative Extension Specialist and faculty member at the University of California at Berkeley, discusses the challenges of feeding an estimated 9.1 billion people worldwide by 2050. Her lecture highlights how new agricultural methods and improved crop species are needed to provide adequate food in an environmentally friendly manner without increasing the amount of cultivated land.

The Irish Famine Memorial in Boston denicts the devastation of the Irish Potato Famine from 1845-1852.

Accommodations for disabilities may be made by calling 541-737-4098

The Socratic Club at Oregon State University, celebrating its 10th anniversary, presents a debate that is free and open to the public: The Influence of Christianity on Latin America:

Beneficial or Destructive? Monday, Jan. 23 • 7:30 pm • Milam Auditorium

The influence of Christianity on Latin American culture has long been debated. Conquistadors like Pizarro and Cortes are synonymous with the brutality of Spanish imperialism. But missionaries like Bartolome de Las Casas and bishops like Samuel Ruiz Garcia have drawn attention for their efforts to defend human rights, especially of the Amerindians. Two experts will debate the issue.

Nicole von Germeten teaches Latin American history at OSU. She is the author of "Black Blood Brothers," which describes the social and religious life of Africans in Mexico. She will argue that Christianity exercised a positive influence on Latin American culture

American thought, with an emphasis on Mexican culture, history, and immigration to the United States. He will argue that Christianity had a negative effect in Latin

Joseph Orosco teaches classes in Latin

Watch more than 20 of our previous debates at: youtube.com/user/orstsocraticclub education. Are you ready? Some funds are extremely limited!

Deadlines are approaching! Apply for Financial Aid today by completing the 2012-2013 FAFSA!

www.fafsa.gov

(Remember, the FAFSA application is FREE!)

Oregon Opportunity Grant FAFSA Deadline is February 1st!

OSU Priority Deadline is February 28th!

Taxes aren't done? File using estimates & update later!

brought to you by:

the Office of Financial Aid & Scholarships

TUE 1/24 1-4 P.M. KICKOFF EVENT M.U. QUAD STEPS Get a schedule & a photo

w/ the Styrofoam igloo!

Mon-Fri 1/23-27 GUESS THE WEIGHT CONTEST!

BY THE ALS SKY BRIDGE Guess the weight of the recyclables to win!

Mon 1/30 2:30-5:30 P.M. STYROFOAM

For accommodations related to disability, call 541-737-1262

For more info, visit us online: oregonstate.edu/groups/socratic

COLLECTION M.U. BRICK MALL Bring clean Styrofoam for free recycling!

Household batteries can be recycled in labeled buckets by Java II and in the UHDS service centers (Arnold, McNary & West)!

forum@dailybarometer.com • 541-737-6376

Time to end OLCC, another wasteful layer of government brought that noble experiment, prohibition, to an end, which Oregon had ignominiously suffered since 1916. Soon after the repeal, the Oregon state legislature created the Oregon Liquor Control Commission to regulate the newly legalized substance. Both Oregon and the United States have come a long way since the days of prohibition, but the state still suffers under the antiquated yoke of

4 • Monday, January 23, 2012

While alcoholism continues to be a horrible disease that afflicts too many Oregonians, and we certainly don't condone underage drinking, is it really necessary to have a separate, redundant government regulatory agency for a single commodity? It isn't, and it is overdue to end this remnant of our puritanical past.

The fact is the OLCC hurts businesses. Few other commodities are subject to the sort of stringent regulation, asinine and arcane rules, and sting operations that alcohol faces

'n 1933, the 21st Amendment under the OLCC. Businesses aren't allowed to advertise happy hour specials or drink discounts. Restaurants and retail establishments often deal with sting operations where a simple mistake can lead to hefty fines and lost licenses. What other government agency goes out of its way to create infractions and hurt businesses that provide valuable jobs in a rocky

> The state also controls the sale of distilled spirits through a state monopoly, leading to higher prices, diminished selection and inconvenient locations and hours. Many other states allow liquor sales in non-state run stores with no problem; why can't Oregon? By eliminating the state monopoly on liquor and replacing it with a higher tax on liquor, sales would undoubtedly increase, which would be a boon for local distilleries and businesses that make more money from the convenience of selling liquor. Liquor is no longer a demonized substance that deserves to be unnecessarily locked away from the public, and our state must do away with the last remnants of prohibition.

Editorial

Furthermore, OLCC agents are notorious for being unpredictable and showing up to write hefty fines with little notice, making themselves the scourge of every mini-mart employee and bartender. Agents receive little training and have few requirements, yet can have the power of God over businesses that rely heavily on alcohol sales to make ends meet.

Two years ago, an OLCC agent, Doitchin Krasev, who had already been accused by businesses in Bend for demanding bribes and uneven enforcement of regulations, and had been transferred to Ontario as a result, was discovered to be in the country illegally and not an American citizen. He was living under the false identity of a murdered Ohio boy, Jason Evers. If OLCC agents are able to get jobs else could be wrong with an agency that is universally reviled and completely unnecessary.

It is especially troubling that the OLCC finds it necessary to continue such harsh enforcement efforts when by its own accounts, businesses have for many years exceeded expectations and target goals in not selling to minors. Of course there are always going to be those who try to break the law and get away with it, but for the most part, it is incredibly difficult to buy alcohol as a minor in most establishments, unless you're getting an older brother to buy it or have a false ID. That bar down the road that doesn't ask questions doesn't exist anymore and hasn't for a while, but the OLCC continues to exist as if it did. And if that bar did exist, there are already police officers who are more than capable of enforcing the "over 21" law. There is no need for an extra set of liquor

At a time when state budgets are already tight, an easy way to free up some funds would be to get rid of the OLCC. To those who are worried about the loss of revenue in ending the state-run monopoly, we propose increasing the cost of licenses to sell alcohol and increasing alcohol taxes across the board. Without having to pay for the payroll and other costs of an agency, the state would also be helped by the extra tax revenue that could be created from loosening up

Prohibition was a poor idea, generally accounted as a failure by all. But even worse, over 90 years later we are still suffering the effects of this absurd experiment in regulating people's personal lives and limiting their personal freedoms. It is high time to put the final nail in the coffin of this superfluous government agency left over from another time and place.

Editorials serve as a means for Barometer editors to offer commentary and opinions on issues both global and local, grand in scale or diminutive The views expressed here are a reflection of the editorial board's majority

Alex Danfelt

The Daily Barometer

A possible hangover remedy on the way

n my experience with Eastern medicine and herbal remedies, many "ancient Chinese secrets" have proven to be no more than an ancient Chinese placebo. I'm not saying there aren't any traditional medicines that have verifiable medical merit, but it's not likely that indiscriminately wolfing down the genitals of a badger is going to make me "strong and powerful."

Every now and then, researchers will catch on to something that has a significant enough following to warrant a second look. This time, it's an extract taken from the Chinese raisin tree, Hovenia dulcis, which has the medical world getting very excited over

The extract in question has been used for over 500 years as a treatment for hangovers, utilizing the chemical dihydromyricetin (DHM) as the active ingredient. Researchers at the University of California, Los Angeles, have been experimenting with DHM's effects on lab rats and are preparing for human trials. Through their research, pharmacologist Jing Liang, who led the team, mentioned that, "DHM will reduce the degree of drunkenness for the amount of alcohol drunk and will definitely reduce the hangover symptoms... in time it will also reduce the desire for alcohol.

The testing consisted of injecting lab rats with a dose of alcohol equal to a human consuming between 15 and 20 beers in two hours. After the rodent binge, researchers would place the rats on their backs in a cradle and time how long they took to flip themselves onto their feet. After administering the alcohol without DHM, the rats took an average of 70 minutes. When they injected the same amount of alcohol with one milligram of DHM per kilogram of body weight, the rats decreased their time to right themselves to a respectable 5 minutes.

After their wild bout of involuntary excess and whatever rats like to do when they get rat-hammered, the researchers observed that rats not given DHM retreated to the corners of their maze in classic hangover fashion while those who were given the extract behaved "normally," exploring the enthralling halls of their maze.

The researchers made a clear connection between the intake of DHM and its ability to ward off the effects of alcohol on the body's motor skills. I can't say for sure how many beers it would take for me to be stuck on my back for 70 minutes, or even 5 minutes, so without human testing, it's difficult to determine if this chemical can fully eradicate the effects of alcohol. But it absolutely made a notable difference.

Considering there are 2.5 million people who die due to alcohol abuse every year, this chemical may prove quite valuable. Though it is a tricky disease, those who are truly willing to kick the habit can benefit greatly. If they have a physical dependency, they may be able to drink enough to quell the withdrawals and slowly wean themselves while not feeling alcohol's physical and mental effects, encouraging them to further indulge.

The potential problem are individuals who won't be able to get drunk and continue to drink until their heart stops or turn to a different substance to abuse. If somebody is hounding for a chemical escape, they are going to find it. If somebody is mentally ready but not physically able to stop, DHM may be the key.

For the casual drinker looking to stay sober, this extract is worthless and potentially dangerous. Without any feedback from their body to determine their level of inebriation, users could continue drinking to the point of alcohol poisoning and cause serious health issues. Granted, you would have to be rather absent-mind

Finding purpose in the Baccalaureate Core n the recent Daily Barometer editorial from Tuesday, Jan. 16, "What should be getting fixed in the Bacc Core requirements," the editorial board exhorts, "Let's get some serious thoughts going on the actual purpose of the Bacc Core." After several years of involvement in the review and revision of the Baccalaureate Core, we applaud this outlook and encourage all of the OSU community to actively engage in such dialog. And we agree with many points made in the editorial regarding a need for flexibility and purpose.

However, what followed was off the mark: rather than taking a view that is narrow in scope and encourages sequestration of students by major, we offer a contrasting vision of the foundational elements that general education plays in both the professional and personal growth of students. OSU's Bacc Core can serve this function.

The requirement of a general education component in the university curriculum is not unique to OSU; rather, it has a rich history, as institutions have struggled to develop an architecture to meet the needs of immediate and long-term student problem solving are undoubtedly valuable to future careers and to leading a fuller life. Additionally, being able to express beliefs while seriously considering the views of others, to understand one's own identity while respecting the culture and history of others, and to ponder multiple sides of an issue are all cornerstones of our democracy.

Our alumni, employers and stakeholders have repeatedly endorsed these educational goals. This view of general education is consistent with a comprehensive initiative led by the Association of American Colleges and Universities that includes input from hundreds of universities and over 300 employers. In fact, in surveys conducted by the AAC&U, employers indicate graduates need to be better prepared in the very knowledge and skills that form the foundation of general education — such as critical thinking, oral and written communication, global knowledge, adaptability, quantitative reasoning, social responsibility, intercultural skills and ethical judgment. These attributes are often listed primary to any specialized training and/or knowledge in a particular field of study.

The vision and structure of OSU's Baccalaureate Core was ahead of its time Guest Column in the 1980s and continues to be a model for other institutions. Its mission states: "The Baccalaureate Core Curriculum represents what the OSU faculty believes is the foundation for students' further understanding of the modern world. Informed by natural and social sciences, arts and humanities, the Bacc Core requires student to think critically and creatively, and to synthesize ideas and information when evaluating major societal issues. Importantly, the Bacc Core promotes understanding of interrelationships among disciplines in order to increase students' capacities as ethical citizens of an ever-changing world."

The Daily Barometer

In 2009, an ad hoc review committee was charged with assessing the state

To be successful,

this [Bacc Core] plan requires shared governance...and several years and iterations...

of OSU's Bacc Core. The review committee consisted of 11 faculty members from a crosssection of colleges, two senior administrators and two student leaders. Input was gathered from focus groups of students, staff (e.g., advisors) and faculty, and was reinforced by a survey of over 2,300 thinking, effective communication, and OSU students across all majors and academic standing. Responses showed a philosophy and goals of the Bacc core are worthwhile and consistent with modern national trends.

> But how do we achieve these goals? Historically, there have been two approaches to meeting general education outcomes. In the "Great Books" approach first developed at the University of Chicago, students engage with classic texts, and the curriculum tends to take the form of a limited set of required core classes — there is little

In contrast, the "modes of inquiry" approach focuses on the different ways of knowing. The premise of this approach, and our philosophy at OSU, is that exposure to multiple modes of intellectual inquiry (e.g., that of a mathematician and a historian) sharpens and broadens our thinking, as well as our understanding of what it means to know. With this latter approach, a distribution of courses is made available to students within broad categories, and they select courses that align with personal areas of interest, provided they meet appropriate contextual category criteria.

Why the dissatisfaction with the baccalaureate core? The baccalaureate core ad hoc review committee's assessment also showed that students perceived the Core in practice as a discrete and seemingly unrelated set of courses presented and navigated as a mere checklist. In order to better align the current practice with the nobler intent, the committee outlined and the Faculty Senate approved a fundamental vitalization that needs to proceed across the campus over many years.

One of the foundations of this revitalization plan is the implementation of multiple direct and indirect assessment measures to ensure that classes within a Bacc Core category support the category criteria, and reinforce the modes of inquiry that are intended. Such assessment allows feedback loops to the Faculty Senate and other appropriate units. To be successful, this plan requires shared governance in its truest sense and several years and iterations - we are restoring and powering an oil tanker, not a speed boat, while at sea (and not in the

What we heard at the Faculty Senate this month were preliminary details of a comprehensive assessment plan, which is a critical first step. We thank our colleagues on the Faculty Senate's Baccalaureate Core Committee for this service and also encourage the entire campus community - students, faculty, advisors and administration - to participate in the dialog and create the baccalaureate core that will best prepare our students for what awaits our futures.

For more information on the AAC&U's initiative, visit http://www.aacu.org/ leap/vision.cfm.

For more information on surveys of employers and recent graduates conducted by AAC&U, visit http:// www.aacu.org/leap/documents/ Re8097abcombined.pdf.

To view the final report of the baccalaureate core ad hoc review committee for the Faculty Senate (the revitalization plan), visit http://oregonstate.edu/ senate/committees/other/bcr/reports.

> Milo Koretsky, Professor, College of Engineering John Bailey, Associate Professor, College of Forestry

Letters

Letters to the editor are welcomed and will be printed on a first-received basis. Letters must be 300 words or fewer and include the author's signature, academic major, class standing or job title, department name and phone number. Authors of e-mailed letters will receive a reply for the purpose of verification. Letters are subject to editing for space and clarity. The Daily Barometer reserves the right to refuse publication of any submissions.

> The Daily Barometer c/o Letters to the editor Memorial Union East 106 Oregon State University Corvallis, OR 97331-1617 or e-mail: editor@dailvbarometer.com

See DANFELT | page 6

news@dailybarometer.com • 737-2231

Monday, January 23, 2012 • 5

YOU DECIDE:

THE BEST PLACE TO______!

DANFELT

Continued from page 6

ed to allow this to happen, but you always have to consider the lowest common denominator.

The lack of a hangover also seems to be a moot point. If you don't drink excessively, you won't have a hangover. If you do drink excessively, you are probably looking to experience the effects of alcohol. Sure, if you drink heavily with DHM, you are not getting the hangover but you are also surrendering the intoxication, so what's the point? "DHM: All of the liver damage with none of the fun!"

As a controlled tool, this Chinese folk medicine has a promising future. As of yet, no adverse side effects have been identified, but that will likely be fully addressed with upcoming human trials. It could lead to more drinking rather than less, but if it is properly administered, it may be worth the risk.

Alex Danfelt is a senior in communications. The opinions expressed in his columns do not necessarily represent those of The Daily Barometer staff. Danfelt can be reached at forum@dailybarometer.com.

Letter to the Editor

In response to "Sensationalizing science"

In defense of the Bulletin

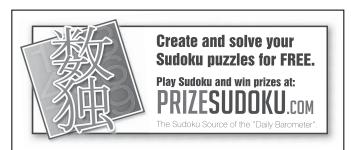

In 1942, when the world's first nuclear reaction took place at University of Chicago, I was a student there. Three years later, after surviving a bullet wound at Iwo Jima, I walked through Nagasaki six weeks after the A-Bomb destroyed it. I have done my best to prevent the use of nuclear weapons ever since then.

I was back on the Chicago campus studying pre-med when the Bulletin was formed. I continue to believe in their cause and consider their concerns about the precarious state of the world to be realistic and well-founded. The aftermaths of Chernobyl, Fukushima, Hiroshima and Nagasaki are real, lasting warnings of what lies ahead if we can't reverse proliferation.

Your editorial is wide-ranging, and you make some good points about "science" and reactions against it. However, it's not good to throw pies at the messenger (The Bulletin) if you don't like the message (The moving up of the Clock).

CRAIG B. LEMAN, M. D.

Corvallis

Today's Su • do •

SECOND GLANCE

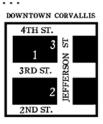

THE MAIN SHOP

FASHION RECYCLING SINCE 1984

[312 SW 3RD]

② THE ANNEX THE TREND SHOP [214 SW Jefferson]

S FASHION & VINTAGE
[312 SW Jefferson]

Medi	um
			8	3				4
7	8			1
		3						2
	9	2	4		8			6
5			3		7	1	2
9						5
				4			8	9
4				6	5

To play: Complete the grid so that every row, column and every 3X3 box contains the digits 1 to 9. There is no guessing or math involved, just use logic to solve.

Hard
6	8	7	1	3	2	9	4	5
3	2	5	8	4	9	6	1	7
4	1	9	7	5	6	3	2	8
7	6	3	9	8	1	2	5	4
2	4	8	5	6	7	1	3	9
တ	5	1	3	2	4	8	7	6
1	7	6	4	9	3	5	8	2
8	3	2	6	7	5	4	9	1
5	9	4	2	1	8	7	6	3

Yesterday's Solution

Subjective criticism doesn't clarify anything

we experience it as an individual. We apply the only consciousness we have to a painting or song or sculpture, and develop a kind of analytical summary of what we are seeing, hearing or feeling.

While we can imagine and sympathize with the perception of other observers, we can never look at a piece of art in the exact same way that another can. Through discussion and review, people are able to communicate what they find attractive or repulsive about a particular work of art, and provide some sort of rationale for their

While this method of judgment seems the most logical, more often than not, I find myself dealing with others who have a much more simplified and frustrating system of expressing their opinions. Instead of admitting that his or her aesthetic preferences (which can be diversely explored without too much effort) are not in sync with those of the artist, a person would rather say, "That painting is stupid" or 'That song sucks".

This kind of knee-jerk reaction does not make the work of art appear stupid, just the observer. Making a claim like "that song sucks" says nothing. In fact, it suggests that the song was not actually listened to, but overheard, and that more than anything, it was distracting.

I do not intend to take the hipster perspective entirely, and tell every skeptic that if they did not like a specific work of art, it is because they did not understand it. I would not force someone to listen to a song a thousand times until they get why I think it has no faults. However, it is difficult to believe the people who claim — often with strong conviction — that a song simply "sucks" without reason or explanation.

The Spaces in Between

I will usually say to this person, "Why do you think it sucks?" And their reply glazes over the issue with a comment like, "It was just really annoying" or "The singer's voice is terrible." I know prying will most likely get me nowhere, so I usually leave it at that and try not to sound like a therapist. But afterwards, it is hard to shake my own thoughts. Like a little kid, I want to ask, "But why was it annoying?"

A painting cannot paint, and a song cannot perform; these creations are brought to life through the artist that imagined them, and the artist is not omniscient. Every time I hear someone accuse a painting or song of "sucking," I feel bad for the painting or song because it did not do anything wrong.

It makes sense to look at a lawn mower with no blades and say the lawn mower "sucks" because it does not serve its function as something that cuts grass. But when experiencing art, it is arguably impossible serving its function; the purpose of art is human expression, which is by definition an inherently subjective enterprise. Perhaps an artist meant to do one thing and ended up doing another, and the art did not fulfill its purpose for the artist. Although, if one is truly channeling personal expression into any kind of art form with a pure intention, I do not believe that there is a right vs wrong element involved — it is all an outlet of human expression.

Instead of projecting onto a work of art, providing personal accountability for one's judgment is much more preferable. Saying "I didn't like that song" is way better than saying "That song sucked," because not only does it provide the observer with better insight to their own preferences, but it takes other people's consideration into account as well. In admitting that they did not like the song, the observer still permits others to find authentic enjoyment in it. By making such a claim, they are intrinsically admitting that they actually do have reasons, and have thought about them more than some other observers.

I understand this is not a great concern of many people, and it is impossible to be aware of this critical approach for every little bit of artistic input that surrounds us. But in this case, please, if my article was not written to your liking, do not tell me

Kirk Pederson is a senior in English. The opinions expressed in his columns do not necessarily represent those of The Daily Barometer staff. Pederson can be reached at forum@dailybarometer.com.

Gabrielle Giffords will resign to focus on her recovery

Giffords announced on her website Sunday that she will resign from Congress this week to continue her recuperation from the brain injury she suffered when shot just over a year

"A lot has happened over the past year. We cannot change that," Giffords, 41, says in a video on her website, speaking in a halting manner.

"I don't remember much from that horrible day, but I will never forget the trust you placed in me to be your voice," Giffords continues. "Thank you for your prayers and for giving me time to recover. I have more work to do on my recovery. So to do what is best for Arizona, I will step down this week."

Giffords, a Democrat, will sub-the week to House Speaker John Boehner and Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer. Brewer said Sunday in a statement that she will call a "special primary and general election" to fill the state's eighth congressional district seat for the rest of Giffords' term, which expires at the end of the year.

A statement from her office said Giffords will attend the State of the Union address Tuesday as one of her last acts before stepping down.

She also will finish her 'Congress on Your Corner" event that was interrupted by the shooting rampage of Jan. 8, 2011, that killed six people and wounded 13 others, including Giffords, the statement said.

President Barack Obama was effusive in his praise for Arizona Rep. Gabrielle mit a letter of resignation during the congresswoman, saying Giffords "embodies the very best of what public service should be." He added that her "cheerful presence will be missed in Washington (and) she will remain an inspiration to all whose lives she touched myself included."

"Over the last year, Gabby and her husband Mark have taught us the true meaning of hope in the face of despair, determination in the face of terrible odds, and now — even after she's come so far — Gabby shows us what it means to be selfless as well," Obama said in a statement.

Ohio Boehner, an Republican, said that Giffords 'will be missed." And Brewer, the Arizona governor, lauded Giffords as a "noble public servant ... and a model of what can be accomplished with persistence and determination."

House Democratic Rep. Nancy Pelosi called Giffords a "bright star" whose "message of bipartisanship and civility is one that all in Washington and the nation should honor and

"Her legacy in the Congress and her leadership for our nation will certainly continue," Pelosi said in a statement.

In her website video posted Sunday, Giffords says her public service career has not ended.

"I will return, and we will work together for Arizona and this great country," she says.

Earlier this month, Giffords joined thousands for a vigil in Tucson, one of several emotional events over the weekend to mark one year since the shootings.

Prosecutors accuse Jared Lee Loughner, 23, of carrying out the attack, which purportedly targeted Giffords during the constituent meet-and-greet event outside a supermarket.

Giffords is still recovering from her injuries, and her right side remains weak. She has made few public appearances since the incident with some rare exceptions, such as casting a vote in Congress to raise the federal debt ceiling and conducting an interview with ABC's Diane

- CNN

Classifieds

Help Wanted

STUDENTPAYOUTS.COM Paid survey takers needed in Corvallis. 100% Free to ioin. Click on Surveys.

BARTENDERS WANTED. Up to $250/day. No experience necessary. Training available Call 800-965-6520 ext. 151.

Services

EXPERIENCED (PH.D. ORGANIC CHEMISTRY) TUTORING Organic/General Chemistry, $20/hour,

Health & Fitness

OSU GUYS! Get answers to questions you have always had and get paid for it! Attend a free MARS appointment and receive a $20 gift certificate to Fred Meyer. Talk 1:1 with a MARS peer educator about sexual health and relationships. All appointments are confidential. To schedule call OSU Student Health Services at 541-737-2775. studenthealth.oregonstate.edu/mars

STUDENT HEALTH SERVICES has a fully integrated Sexual Assault Nurse Examiner program to support any student, regardless of gender identity, who is a survivor of sexual assault. Call 541-737-9355 or come to Student Health in the Plageman Bldg. studenthealth.oregonstate.edu/sane

Buyer Beware

The Oregon State University Daily Barometer assumes no liability for ad content or response Ads that appear too good to be true, probably are.

Respond at your own risk.

To place an online and/or print classified ad, go to dailybarometer.campusave.com

Online Rates: FREE to students, staff & faculty with onid.orst.edu email

$25 per ad per month No refunds will be issued.

Print Rates: 15 words or less, per day – $3.75 Each additional word, per day - 25¢ 10 Days - 25% off • 20 Days - 50% off

Women's hoops beats USC in overtime

Indendi hits trey to send it to for third conference win

THE DAILY BAROMETER

LOS ANGELES, Calif. - The Oregon State University women's basketball was able to find itself in the win column Saturday afternoon, beating the University of Southern California in overtime at the Galen Center.

This was an all too familiar circumovertime, where Beavers dominate stance for the Beavers, who have played their fair share of down-to-the-wire

> The Beavers were led by junior guard Sage Indendi's 17 points, who set a new school record for career 3-pointers (102). Indendi's last three in regulation was what tied the game and sent it into overtime.

Freshman Guard Ali Gibson was able to carry the teams momentum through the overtime period, scoring four of the total nine points. She would finish the game with 14 points and team-high seven rebounds.

Junior forward Patricia Bright was the third player to finish with double figures, scoring 12 points.

The Beavers will host the University of Oregon this upcoming Saturday at Gill

sports@dailybarometer.com

Gymnasts win in Arizona but score low

Week after scoring 196.525, gymnasts score 194.825 in Tucson

The Daily Barometer

State gymnastics team wasn't perfect Friday night, but they got the job done.

In their first meet with a Pac-12 opponent, OSU defeated No. 13 University of Leslie Mak and Brittany Harris.

Tucson, Ariz. Friday's victory was now the 11th straight time Oregon State has defeated the Wildcats.

While it was not quite the TUCSON, Ariz. — The No. show the Beavers put on in 4-nationally ranked Oregon their opening week defeat of the University of Oklahoma, Oregon State still came out of their first meet on the road with a victory, with a few standout performances from Mak, last week's Pac-12 Gymnast of the Week, had the best performance of the night, scoring a 9.95 on the balance beam. Mak's strong score was much needed, as the team struggled on the beam, scoring their lowest score in any event so far in the early season on beam Friday.

The sophomore, Harris, did very well on both uneven bars (9.85) and vault (9.825). Senior Olivia Vivian was also a sound

It was great to see

Gary come back.

He was one of the best players to ever

come through here

at Oregon State.

Jared Cunningham

Junior guard

performer, scoring a 9.8 on both bars and beam.

Even though they defeated the Wildcats, OSU's score will most likely drop their ranking out of the top five, and possibly the top 10.

Oregon State will return home this Friday to face another ranked Pac-12 opponent when No. 14 Stanford University comes to Corvallis for a 7 p.m. meet.

sports@dailybarometer.com

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Continued from page 7

If they truly want to get back into the mix of it in terms of relevance in the conference, they'll have fix their road woes as soon as possible.

Naturally, that was a hot topic of discussion in Saturday's postgame press conference - "how will you win on the road?" - but not until after the Beavers sheer dominance of the Trojans was dis-

USC entered Saturday's contest with one of the nation's worst offenses – their 54.3 points per game ranks 341st in the nation. But their steel-curtain defense hadn't allowed more than 66 points in any game prior to Saturday, and they were fresh off a 3-point loss to first-place University of Oregon in Eugene.

Oregon State's defense, particularly the once-go-to 1-3-1 defense, shut down a USC offense that looked like it never had a chance. The Beavers forced 18 turnovers, several of which came in the game's opening moments.

"We started off early tonight, started off hard," said junior guard Jared Cunningham. "We knocked down a couple shots and got it going early. We did a great job of jumping out to a lead early and finishing.

The Beavers have played man-to-man defense around 75 percent of the time

"The reason why we stayed with the one-three-one was because we got like six steals in a row and built a good lead and just kept doing it," Robinson said.

The zone was particularly effective against USC guard Maurice Jones, the Trojans leading-scorer and best 3-point shooter.

"At the beginning of the game we had to key in on him," Cunningham said. "We went and stopped his offensive game and made him have to pass the ball off to other players. It was important to limit his touches.

Jones finished with two assists and seven turnovers. He needed 14 shots to score 13 points and was 0-of-4 from 3-point territory.

Three-pointers had been killing the Beavers prior to this weekend, but the Trojans connected on only three treys Saturday night. Sophomore Garrett Jackson, a product of Westview High School in Portland, was the only Trojan to have any success from beyond the arc (2 of 4).

Oregon State may have gotten a boost from a certain former Beaver who was this year. But Saturday, Oregon State pri- in the house. NBA great Gary Payton watched the game from a courtside seat and spoke to the team before the game.

Robinson said at least one player, and several coaches, got an emotional boost from the experience.

"Well to be completely honest, other than Jared, I think that the staff was more excited about it because we know him as a player," Robinson said with a bit of a chuckle.

Robinson went on to explain that the majority of the players on Oregon State's roster were born after Payton had hung up the orange and black.

But Cunningham, who naturally has been compared to Payton, fully understood the significance of Payton's appearance.

"It was great to see Gary come back," Cunningham said. "He was one of the best players to ever come through here at Oregon State. It was good talking to him earlier before the game and hearing what he had to say.'

Cunningham finished with a teamhigh 18 points on 7 of 11 shooting.

> Grady Garrett, sports editor sports@dailybarometer.com

Got TV broadcasting or media

11am-3pm daily

2:30-5:30pm daily

and a 1-liter pop...

close nightly

on the brain? KBVR-TV is now hiring an Assistant Station Manager

DAILY CAMPUS SPECIALS

One-topping slice and a pint of your choice...

DreamTime Pizza — $12.95 1-topping large or 2-topping medium pizza

FREE DELIVERY

CAMPUS • 757-1713 • 2525 NW Monroe

www.adpizza.com

*Lunch Special — $5.95

One-topping slice & one-topping salad...

Slice and Pint — $4.95

OSU's student television station is now hiring an assistant station manager for Winter through Spring 2012. Applicants must be enrolled for at least six OSU credits each term and have a minimum 2.0 GPA.

Applications are available at 210 Snell Hall/MU East. Deadline for full consideration is Monday, January 23,

Any questions? Contact KBVR-TV at 541-737-6323.

Selected Best Asian Restaurant in the Valley 122 NW 3rd St. • Downtown • 541-752-1410

Lunch 11:30–2:30 Mon-Fri ● Dinner 5–10 Mon-Sat ● Closed Sunday Happy Hour Monday-Thursday 8:30-10

Authentic Japanese Food

- Sushi
- Sashimi
- Tempura
- And More!
- Now with more Korean Cuisine!

Sukiyaki

And Yakiniku

Shabu-Shabu

Check website for monthly special offers AomatsuSushi.com

Check our ad on Carmike Theatre for special offer

The Daily Barometer is hiring!

Diversions Writers

Graphic Designers

Columnists

Web Editors

For more information about these positions contact Brandon Southward at 541.737.3191 or e-mail editor@dailybarometer.com.

Applications may be submitted via e-mail, fax (541.737.4999), or in person at 118 MU East.

2012-13 Recreational Sports Budget Review OPEN HEARING

Tuesday, January 24 noon - 1:30 p.m. Memorial Union 110

Student input is desired on the use of student fees for the operation, programs, and services offered by the Department of Recreational Sports

The Daily Barometer

sports@dailybarometer.com • 737-6378

Weekend Near-perfect weekend for Beavers; only swimmers fall

THE DAILY BAROMETER

Men's basketball

Saturday, Gill Coliseum OSU 78, USC 59

2nd Total USC 37 59 OSU 36 42 78 OSU

Cunningham: 18 pts, 5 assists Burton: 11 pts, 9 rebounds Moreland: 4 pts, 11 rebounds, 3 steals

Wesley: 15 pts, 7 rebounds Jackson: 12 pts, 2-4 (3-ptrs)

Women's basketball

Saturday, Galen Center (Los Angeles)

OSU 65, USC 61 1st 2nd

OSU 38 65 USC 34 OSU

OT Total

Indendi: 17 pts, 3-7 (3-ptrs) Gibson: 14 pts, 7 rebounds Bright: 12 pts, 5 rebounds

Corral: 20 pts, 6-14 (3-ptrs) Gilbreath, B: 9 pts, 8 rebounds

Gymnastics

Friday, McKale Center (Tucson) (4) OSU 194.825, (13) Arizona 194.375

Top OSU Participants

Vault: Harris (2nd, 9.825)

Bars: Harris (2nd, 9.850), Stambaugh/Casey/Mak (T3rd,

Beam: Mak (1st, 9.950) Floor: Jones/Mak (T2nd, 9.850) All-Around: Mak (1st, 39.400), Stambaugh (3rd, 38.900)

Wrestling

Sunday, Gill Coliseum OSU 20, NDSU 13 OSII wins:

133: Drucker over Solberg (12-6) 141: Mangrum over Diamonu

149: Sakaguchi over Erickson (10-3)

174: Weishoff over Garner (11-4)

197: Meek over Gusewelle (major decision)

HWT: Jack over Knutson (8-4) NDSU wins

125: Sprenkle over Rollins (major decision)

157: Monk over Pena (9-7) 165: Johnson over Latham (9-8) 184: Stoll over Vinson (9-7, OT)

Women's swimming

Saturday (Boise, Idaho) Boise St. 148, OSU 114 Top OSU finishers

Kibby: 3 dual wins (100- and 200-yard breaststroke and 400yard individual medley)

Dole: 2 dual wins (100-yd backstroke and 200-yd backstroke) O'Brien: 1 win (200-yd butterfly) Bloch: 1 win (1,000-yd freestyle)

Beavers beat USC, complete 'important' sweep

VINAY BIKKINA | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Jared Cunningham scored 18 points and added five assists in Saturday's win over the winlessin-conference Trojans.

With former great Gary Payton in the house, Beavers get third conference win by trumping USC by 19 points

By Grady Garrett
THE DAILY BAROMETER

After Oregon State beat UCLA Thursday night at Gill Coliseum, coach Craig Robinson said it was the most important game since he'd arrived at Oregon State.

After beating the University of Southern California 78-59 Saturday, completing a sweep of the Los Angeles schools and improving the Beavers to 3-5 in conference play, Robinson added to his "most important" sentiment.

...This was the most important weekend (since I've been here)," Robinson said. "Getting back into the mix with our confidence was really important, and I thought we did that tonight and it started with Thursday.'

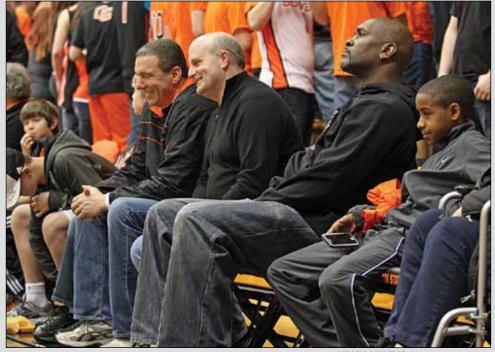

We started off early, started off hard. We knocked down a couple shots and got it going early.

> Jared Cunningham Junior guard

It did appear the confidence that carried the Beavers to a 10-2 mark in nonconference play had returned, though it remains to be seen whether or not that will carry over to road games. The Beavers, who have not won a conference road game yet this year (0-4), hit the road for three straight beginning Sunday at the University of Oregon.

See MEN'S BASKETBALL page 7

The Glove

VINAY BIKKINA | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Gary Payton, arguably the greatest player to put on an Oregon State uniform, sat courtside at Saturday's game and was swarmed by fans throughout the night.

VINAY BIKKINA | THE DAILY BAROMETER

Garrett Drucker was one of six Beavers to post a win Sunday vs. NDSU.

Wrestling picks up two wins

■ Beavers rout Northern Colorado Friday, top North Dakota State Sunday to give coach Zalesky 200 career wins

By Andrew Kilstrom

As No. 5-ranked senior heavyweight Clayton Jack walked onto the mat at Gill Coliseum for the last time, with the Oregon State University wrestling team clinging to a 4-point advantage, there was no doubt what the outcome was going to be.

The "Imperial March," Darth Vader's theme from Star Wars, boomed throughout the arena as Jack controlled the deciding match and sent North Dakota State packing Sunday.

It was a weekend filled with story lines for the Beavers as they took care of business, winning both of their duals and improving to 7-2 overall.

In addition to Senior Day, Sunday marked a historic day for head coach Jim Zalesky as he accumulated win number 200 as a head coach, making him the 13th active NCAA Division I coach to reach the milestone.

'It's not about records for me personally," Zalesky said. "It says more about the wrestlers I've had and the wins they've been able to achieve."

The 20-13 win was even more memorable for the seniors wrestling for the last time at Gill Coliseum. The class has three members, including 133-pound Garrett Drucker who secured a win in his last home match. Jason Lara, the third senior on the Oregon State squad, was unable to wrestle due to a knee injury suffered earlier in the season.

The senior class is unique to Zalesky because it was his first recruiting class, so it was fitting that Jack sealed number 200 for his head coach with an 8-4 decision much to the delight of the appreciative Gill

"This is a special group and one that came in with me," Zalesky said. "Clayton Jack, Drucker, and Lara are what make it special for me."

Oregon State and North Dakota State were tied until redshirt freshman 184-pound Taylor Meeks dominated with a major decision to put the Beavers up four going into the pivotal final match.

"It hurts that we're not that deep into the season and it's our last home meet, but unfortunately it had to be today," Jack said. "I'm happy I could go out and get a win in my last match at Gill though.'

The North Dakota State win was following an impressive 35-9 rout of Northern Colorado Friday.

The dual was highlighted by No. 18 ranked, 157pound R.J. Pena's team-leading 18th pin of the season.

Though Pena lost a close match to No. 11 ranked Steven Monk on Sunday, he remains only one pin away from tying the Oregon State record for pins in a season by a sophomore. His improvement has been a big part of the team's continued success this season.

I've spent a lot of time in the weight room getting strong and going over my technique," Pena said. "I just think everything's starting to come together and my wrestling's really starting to click. I'm having a lot of fun out there and my hard work's starting to pay off for me."

The two wins came after a heartbreaking loss by criteria to now No. 5 ranked Wyoming, which Oregon State felt it should have won.

"The Wyoming loss was really hard on us," Jack said. "It was important that we came out and won our last two home meets of the season and we took care of

The Beavers will try to continue their two-game winning-streak when they take on Pac-12 opponent Boise State Friday.

Andrew Kilstrom, sports writer