Welcome to the Riverbank Path

The Ruth Bascom Riverbank Path System is one of the best known and most well-used portions of Eugene's parks and open space system. This 12-mile path lines both sides of the Willamette River from the Willie Knickerbocker Bridge just west of I-5 to the Owosso Bridge just south of Beltline Road. We hope this map will help you discover this path's easy connection to many of the recreational, cultural, and historic destinations that make Eugene unique.

Decades of Vision

This path system was brought to reality through the efforts of former Eugene Mayor Ruth Bascom and a collaboration of community advocates over the last 40 years. A combination of public planning, funding, and a growing statewide commitment to preserving the Willamette Greenway allowed construction to begin in 1971. By 2003 the final connecting link of the 12-mile system was completed, and the system was dedicated as the Ruth Bascom Riverbank Path System.

Look for the numbered diamond symbols on the map to locate these features on the Riverbank Path.

The Legacy of Community Advocacy Continues

This path system has recently undergone several wayfinding enhancements thanks to the efforts of Eugene Parks Foundation volunteers and generous local sponsors. In partnership with the City of Eugene their initiative, The Riverloop Connection, provided new mile markers at every quarter-mile along the system's four path segments, map and interpretive signs at 13 locations, and this comprehensive hand-held map. A special "thank you" to Pete Powers and Scott Wallace who designed this map and to the UO InfoGraphics Laboratory for their early guidance. This effort would not have been possible without support from the following dedicated community members:

Just a Few of the Highlights

The Ruth Bascom Riverbank Path System connects an incredible array of natural beauty, unique amenities, wildlife, and resources. A few of the highlights you will encounter are:

Whilamut Natural Area

Located along the North Bank Path, the Whilamut Natural Area covers 237 acres of open space in the east section of Alton Baker Park and is preserved for passive recreation and wildlife habitat. Whilamut is a Kalapuya word that translates into "where the river ripples and runs fast." You may notice several young native trees along the river that were planted by City of Eugene Stream Team volunteers. Information: (541) 682-4850

Pre's Trail

Legendary long-distance runner Steve Prefontaine envisioned a European style soft surface path for runners and encouraged local officials to create such a trail in Eugene. Since its dedication in 1975, the trail has been supported by the ongoing efforts of the Oregon Track Club. Pre's Trailheads can be found at multiple locations within Alton Baker Park near the North Bank Path.

Skinner Butte Park

Eugene's first and premier riverfront park, Skinner Butte Park, is located along the South Bank Path. A visit here offers a glimpse of Eugene's history as it is home to Eugene Skinner's original land claim, phenomenal views of the city from the top of the Butte, and recreational climbing opportunities on the west face of the Butte at the Climbing Columns.

RiverPlay Discovery Village Playground $\langle 5 \rangle$

The Eugene community created this one-of-akind, inclusive, award-winning playground to bring children in touch with Eugene's unique history and culture through creative play. Located along the South Bank Path within Skinner Butte Park, it is a destination for children of all ages and abilities, including the young at heart.

Owen Rose Garden 3

The award-winning Owen Rose Garden is located along the South Bank Path and is home to over 4,500 roses of more than 400 varieties. Making the garden even more spectacular is a majestic Tartarian cherry tree, planted in the 1860s and believed to be the oldest of its species in the nation.
