My dear Gertrude:

Yesterday, I wrote you sending you a copy of a letter which I had written to George, Jr., and, this morning, I received a receipt dated August 5th for the $40.00 which I sent him at that time and on this receipt he writes as follows:

"The reason I did not get it any sooner was that I left the address of Jack in Florida when I moved because I was going down South soon. I had written you about eight days before asking that you change my address, but you evidently did not get it. The check sent on the twelfth is probably on its way to Florida, and I hope that you notice the new address for the next one. How is Jack? Please forward the enclosed note to him. It contains pictures, so please address it by hand.

"George F. Fiske, Jr.
3516 Crescent St.
Astoria, Long Island
New York".

He is quite correct in stating that I evidently did not get the change of address but I recall now that two or three weeks ago a letter came enclosed with his receipt of a former payment addressed to John F. Bass, Jr., with a request that I forward it to him. I understand that in that letter to Jack he gave his new address as above so this takes care of any distress.

This morning I received a check for $1,000.00 from Mr. Edmonds which I have deposited in your Continental Illinois account.

With very kind regards, I am

Yours very truly,

Perkins B. Bass

My dear Gertrude:

Yesterday I sent you a copy of a letter which I had written to George, Jr., and, this morning, I received a receipt dated August 8th for the $40.00 which I sent him at that time and on this receipt he writes as follows:

"The reason I did not get it any sooner was that I left the address of Jack in Florida when I moved because I was going down South soon. I had written you about eight days before asking that you change my address, but you evidently did not get it. The check sent on the twelfth is probably on its way to Florida, and I hope that you notice the new address for the next one. How is Jack? Please forward the enclosed note to him. It contains pictures, so please address it by hand.

Astoria, Long Island
New York."

He is quite correct in stating that I evidently did not get the change of address but I recall now that two or three weeks ago a letter came enclosed with his receipt of a former letter to him. I understand that in that letter to Jack he gave his new address as above so this takes care of any distress.

This morning I received a check for $1,000.00 from Mr. Edwards which I have deposited in your Continental Illinois account.

With very kind regards, I am,

Yours very truly,
