

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

MID-YEAR EXAMINATION

IN

LATIN 3, COMPOSITION 1.

1.—Translate into Latin:

754
129
625

After the death of Scipio, B.C. 129, the eyes of all were turned to Laelius to see how he would bear his affliction. They feared he might not bear his grief as became a true philosopher; but he was really much wiser than they supposed. For he remembered that Scipio had far surpassed the most sanguine hopes of all his friends, and had accomplished a destiny so glorious that he seemed to have passed to the gods above rather than to the shades below.

Moreover, he believed that the soul does not perish with the body, but, when freed from the chains of the flesh, returns to heaven.

So Laelius found only pleasure in the remembrance of their friendship; being glad that he had known such a man on this earth, and having the hope of meeting him again hereafter.

With good reason, therefore, Laelius's young friends thought him as wise as the famous philosophers of Greece.

2.—Give the principal rules for the sequence of tenses, and illustrate.

dicit ut fac

quod dicitur

DECEMBER, 1899.

pres
fut

imp pluper future perfect perfect

DECEMBER 1890

[Faint, mostly illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

PHYSICS DEPARTMENT

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

interco delere riden