WILLIAM L. FINLEY '03, who will tell of his adventures with wild animals in a talk in Wheeler auditorium tonight.

Graduate Will Speak Tonight On Wild Life

Lecture to Be Illustrated
With Motion Pictures of Western Animals

Close-up motion pictures of birds and animals which are seldom seen, will be shown in "Getting Personal with Mountain Lions", an illustrated lecture by William L. Finley '03, to be held at 8 p. m. tonight in Wheeler auditorium.

His new picture and lecture is the result of several expeditions with Arthur N. Pack, president of the American Nature association, into little-known regions of Utah, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. Several thrilling adventures while photographing lions will be related during the lecture.

Finley is recognized as one of the greatest photographers of wild life, as well as a well-known author and lecturer.

Tickets may be obtained at 301 California hall and at the department of visual instruction on Allston way, near Telegraph avenue. They sell for 50 cents.

William L. Finley, March 26 - 1932 Noted Naturalist Is Visitor in S. R.

Santa Rosa Press Democrat
William L. Finley, noted naturalist, author, and lecturer on wild life, visited in Santa Rosa yesterday and spent last night with relatives here. Finley, former president of the American Audubon Society, has just returned from a lecture tour in the east.

The naturalist resides at Jennings Lodge, near Portland, Oregon, but is in this part of the state for a series of lectures at the University of California and Stanford. Today he will deliver a talk on his experiences before the Pacific Union College in St. Helena.

Finley is one of the outstanding leaders in his work in the country, and has gained a nation-wide reputation for his books on wild life subjects. He accompanied Theodore Roosevelt on his expedition into Africa and has written several stories on the trip.
