WILLIAM L. FINLEY

Twenty-five years of travel and exploration have netted Mr. and Mrs. William L. Finley more than 200,000 feet of motion picture film, all of American wild life. These interesting and adventurous people have been praised for their unusual research by such noted explorers as Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who proclaim their pictures of Alaska as having merits that no other exploring photographer has been able to obtain. The first motion picture ever made of a fifty-foot whale leaping from the water, and actual pictures of a huge iceberg falling from the top of a glacier into the sea, furnish high spots in this very interesting film.

This attraction is offered in addition to the regular picture program, Friday only, at the Pelican Theatre, at regular prices. The regular feature picture is "The Crooner," starring David Manners and Ann Dvorak. You'll live and laugh and cry with the crooner as you learn those things about his private life that are seldom known.

NOTED NATURALIST
 HERE ON FRIDAY
Klamath Falls, Ore.

5-3-33

William L. Finley of Portland, world-known naturalist, will be in Klamath Falls Friday for a personal appearance at the Pelican theatre. His visit here has been timed with the showing of his picture story, "Alaskan Wilds and the Kokiak Bear."

Finley, author and explorer, has been a figure in the wild life of America for many years. Citizens of the state, particularly those graduated from Portland schools, can recall his lectures and pictures as far back as 20 years.

His books and pictures have been reviewed all over the world. His most recently printed article appeared in a late edition of Collier's.

Finley's film at the Pelican will be shown in addition to the regular program.
