Finley Off on California
Speaking Tour

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Finley will leave Portland Monday for California, where Finley, who is vice president of the National Wild Life federation, is to present a series of motion pictures and lectures on "Woods, Waters and Wild Life." He will appear both at University of California at Berkeley and University of California at Los Angeles.

Finley will attend a meeting of the California Wild Life federation at Oakland, November 22; return for a meeting of the Washington federation at Seattle, November 29, and attend the annual session of the Oregon federation at Corvallis, December 1 and 2.

Oregon is ahead of Washington and California in her conservation program according to Finley, who cited examples of the recent passage of the anti-pollution measure in the state and of sewage disposal plans approved in Portland and Eugene as forward steps.

Wild life enthusiasts in the three states plan to co-ordinate their efforts in furtherance of conservation measures for the sake of the tourist industry, which on the Pacific Coast amounts to about $400,000,000 annually, Finley said.

Finley will leave for the East December 20 for a series of speaking engagements which will last till March 1. His lectures will deal largely with Oregon and her wild life resources. He will attend the National Wild Life federation meeting in Detroit, February 17.

Woods, Waters, and Wild Life is a thrilling story, featuring the vast and varied outdoor country of the West, where Indians still spear salmon at the Falls of Columbia, where coyotes stalk sage hens and pronghorns on the open plateaus. Pictures of the eagles and hawks among th crags—of the marshes—the homes for myriads of ducks, grebes, herons, stilts, gulls, pelicans, ibis, avocets, curlews, sandhill cranes and others.

The patience of a naturlist who loves to watch in the woods, the technique of a cameraman who knows the artistry of lights and shadows, and an understanding and sympathy with all things outdoors, combine to make this a spectacular and unusually interesting presentation.
