"Where Rolls the Oregon"

A Motion Picture Lecture Featuring a Vast and Varied Outdoor Country

Five thousand feet of film in the romantic country first explored by Lewis and Clark.

Indians still spear salmon at the falls of the Columbia, coyotes stalk sage hens and pronghorns on the open plateaus, eagles and hawks live a pirates life among the crags and the remaining undrained marshes are the homes of myriads of ducks, geese, grebes, herons, gulls, pelicans, stilts, ibis, avocets and sand-hill cranes.

"BIRDS, BERGS AND KODIAK BEARS"

By

WILLIAM L. FINLEY

Thrilling Motion Pictures of Wild Animal Life

For the past twenty-five years Mr. Finley has hunted with cameras and notebooks, packing through the wilder parts of the Cascade and Rocky Mountain Ranges, and in many of the national parks. He has scaled the peaks of Jefferson, Hood and Rainier. On various cruises he has explored many bird islands in the Gulf of Mexico, the picturesque coast line of British Columbia, the haunts of big game in Alaska, Northern Glaciers, and volcanoes, and the outpost islands of the Bering Sea.

Mr. Finley has a national reputation as a naturalist, author, explorer and lecturer, as well as a most successful photographer of wild animal life.
