

CHICAGO, November 3, 1933.

Mrs. Murray Warner,
Hotel Osburn,
Eugene, Oregon.

Dear Mrs. Warner:

Robert remained in Chicago until Wednesday afternoon of this week and Sam came on for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, so you can readily understand that we have had a busy time. I am really expecting Robert and Sam both back here about one week from Saturday, and this should be our final session for deciding our complicated tax matters.

There was one matter I meant to talk to you about while you were here but in the rush and bustle it entirely escaped my mind. You may recall that your mother paid the expenses of Florence, the daughter of Frederick S. Smith, through Northwestern University. After Florence's graduation she undertook to do the same thing for the younger brother, Robert. I may say in passing that the help extended to Florence proved well worth while and your mother was very well satisfied with that investment. Robert is now in his senior year and is in need of assistance if he is to graduate. We have discussed the matter and it is our conclusion that it would be well worth while to see him through. I know it was your mother's intention to complete the job had she lived. The expense during the first three years was much larger proportionately than for the last year. That is because of opportunities the seniors have of earning within the school. I have just had Robert in the office and have gone over his budget. It will take $580. to see him through in addition to his room and board which he gets without cost in exchange for services. Of the sum needed his father can provide about $180. leaving $400. which must be provided from outside sources. I talked with Robert, Sam, and Jack and they all thought that the job should be completed. As we can not do this with the funds of the Estate it become an individual job if it is to be done. Robert asked me to write the facts to you, to find out if you cared to participate, and if so if you would take the job on with him. Will you let me know at your convenience your wishes in this matter.

Mrs. Edmonds is overjoyed with her clock. It seems that she has had a feeling of envy for the owner of that clock for a great many years, and now she is very appreciative.

Sincerely yours,

H. B. Edmonds

Mrs. Harry Winter,
Hotel Grand,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mrs. Winter:

Robert remained in Chicago until Wednesday afternoon of this week and then came on for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, so you can readily understand that we have had a busy time. I am really expecting Robert and Sam both back about one week from Saturday, and this month is our final session for dealing out complicated tax matters.

There was one matter I want to talk to you about which you were here but in the main and details is entirely beyond my mind. You may recall that your mother said the expense of Florence, the daughter of Frederick S. Allen, through Northwestern University. After Florence's graduation she undertook to do the same thing for the younger brother, Robert. I may say in passing that the help extended to Florence proved well worth while and your mother was very well satisfied with that investment. Robert is now in his senior year and is in need of assistance. He has a few hundred dollars in his pocket but if his own education that it would be well worth while to see him through. I know it was your mother's intention to complete the job had she lived. The expense during the last three years was much larger proportionately than for the last year. But as he comes of age the matter has of course been settled within the amount. I have just had Robert in the office and have gone over his budget. It will take $800.00 to see him through in making to his room and board which he gets without cost in exchange for services. Of the sum needed his father can provide about $100.00 leaving $700.00 which must be provided from outside sources. I talked with Robert, Sam, and Jack and they all thought that the job should be completed. As we can not do this with the funds of the estate it becomes an individual job if it is to be done. Robert asked me to write the letter to you, so that you if you cared to participate, and if so it you would take the job on with him. Will you let me know at your convenience your wishes in this matter.

Mrs. Winter is overjoyed with her story. It seems that she has had a feeling of envy for the owner of that stock for a great many years, and now she is very appreciative.

Sincerely yours,

W. B. Winter
