To the Members of the Academy:

With the enclosed bill from the Treasurer's Office for your annual renewal membership dues in the Academy of Political Science may I express the wish that the interesting record of the work of the Academy, coupled with the need attested on every hand for the educational work in which we are engaged, may prompt you to do two things: renew your membership promptly and send us a list of persons in your community, business or profession who would be interested in knowing about the work of the Academy and in receiving an invitation to membership.

The Academy has been trying staunchly to do its part in advancing a better understanding of the complex economic conditions of today. Its programs have sought to grapple with fundamentals. The membership of an organization is its life and we depend on you to "stand by" in this difficult time.

The annual dues of $5.00 is a very modest amount for the semi-annual Proceedings of the Academy and its Political Science Quarterly, yet these dues make possible the work of the Academy.

Looking at the matter from an individual viewpoint, you might easily think that the Academy will suffer no great hardship if you allow your membership to lapse, but if even a few hundred of our 7000 members get into that way of thinking, the deficiency would jeopardize our work.

I know you will understand the spirit in which we have placed the matter before you. I am concerned with the general tendency to cut down on expenditures of this character and I therefore take the liberty of writing to you quite personally urging your continued support of the useful work of the Academy.

Sincerely yours,

Ethel Warner
Director
