A pale faced artist that I know, he tried to paint a brave named Lo
The red man said You're much too slow, I painted myself years ago."
The artist said, "Then watch me draw," he drew a colt of forty-four,
The red man said he never saw a colt so old and tough before,
This colt was drawn with art, it reached that red man's heart,
And when we saw poor Lo depart we all fell off the water cart.

CHORUS.

In Prairee Land, Prairee Land till the Tenderfoot gets wise,
While he buys they tell him lies of Prairee Land, the real dime novel brand,
Men from plains who held up trains they run garages up in Maine,
With half the risk and twice the gain of Prairee-airy Land.

Away down near the Texas line, two men sold me a salted mine,
The salt they used was very fine, it made the strongest kind of brine,
Down in the shaft I strung some lines and planted nine dill pickle vines,
I sold that mine to Mr. Héinz, he's mining fifty-seven kinds,
The mine filled up you see, it's salty as can be,
With each two tons of dills or three, we got salt codfish C. O. D.

CHORUS.

In Prairee Land, Prairee Land till the Tenderfoot gets wise,
While he buys they tell him lies of Prairee Land, the real dime novel brand,
The mines out there are never bare, but on the square I do declare,
I'll sell my share, it's all hot air, the Prairee-airy Land.
