Extra-curricular Activity Program Here Faces Crisis

Less than 28 per cent of the 1750 students registered at the end of the second day of the spring term have paid the five dollar student body fee which supports all campus activities other than regular instructional work.

This is the report made last night dell, general-manager of the Associated Student organization. The result is that the student body here hundred twenty-one freshmen regis now faced with the prospect of as extra-curricular activities are concerned unless the situation changes within the week, say those in charge of student affairs. Reports from the University of Oregon indicate that the situation much the same there.

Students Challenge Board

The present debacle in student association finances is an outgrowth of an agitation started some months ago on the University of Oregon campus by a small Morris Eisenbrey Appointed man in education, by 259 to 189 right of the state board of higher education to force uniform collection of the student body fee,

This group, led by Dick Neuberger, former editor of the Emerald, took the protest directly to a meet ing of the board in Portland, from where it was returned to the campus for investigation. Then the protest was given the dignity of a special hearing before a committee of the board, after which it was summarily denied by the entire board on recommendation of the

FEES MUST BE PAID

CORVALLIS, OREGON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1934

Through no fault of her own, Oregon State college has been drawn into a most serious matter of optional fee payment which, by right, should never have affected this institution in the slightest degree. It is unfortunate that the matter had to come up at this particular time, but apparently no term may begin in the state system unless some misunderstanding exists either among the students, faculty or the institutions themselves.

With regard to the optional fee payment plan, the idea quite naturally originated at the University of Oregon. No. the Barometer is not placing the blame at the feet of the university, for it believes that the elements in that student body responsible for this move are more or less apart from the average university student. It does seem unfair to higher education, however, that a small group of bolsheviks, and we feel we may call them such, for that certainly typifies them, should throw a monkey wrench into a smoothly running system of higher education, which, for the first time in many months was beginning to assume a state of peace. But such is the case, and there seems to be nothing at present that can be done to relieve the situation except for every loval Oregon State backer to study the situation, keeping in mind at all times that it is his duty to support the Associated Student organization at this institution irrespective of what a group of radicals at some other institution may suggest.

That those who are sponsoring or have sponsored this move are beaming radiantly in their latest success there is little doubt, for a group such as this takes great delight not only in the personal glory attached to the cause, but also in the pleasure they get out of opposing everything that is for the betterment of the majority. Furthermore, it is unfortunate that the state board allowed itself to become the victim of this group of trouble makers. Certainly it was within its hands to meet the situation, but nothing was done, and the matter was allowed to drift until we see it today after it has thrown both the state's major educational institutions into a state of turmoil.

To substantiate a little more fully the various arguments set forth elsewhere in today's Barometer, let us draw an (Continued on Page Two)

Mrs. Magna is considered one of the most forceful speakers and leading personalities of the country. Deeply interested in educational work, she is described as being representative of the younger women in D. A. R. and a staunch advocate of practical patriotism applied in schools and colleges.

A lover of flying, her progressive ideas are evidenced by the fact that she travels only by air, chartering a private plane and pilot when no regular passenger lines are available.

HOUSING REGULATIONS RELEASED BY DUBACH

Dr. U. G. Dubach, dean of men, has called to the attention of students two important rules of the housing committee on the Oregon State campus.

The rules pointed out by Dean Dubach are as follows: first, all freshman and sophomore men must live in the dormitory or in fraternities unless exempted by the housing committee; second, all unmarried students must live in private homes, dormitories or fraternities or sororities.

"If there is doubt in your mind about your case, please call at once iam Holley, Ernest Lindros, Henry and arrange for a hearing before the housing committee in order to save your time and convenience as well as that of the committee," Dean Dubach said.

The housing committee is composed of Kate W. Jameson, dean of women; Dean Dubach; Melissa Hunter, director of dormitories, and Curtis Kelley, assistant professor of business administration and chairman of the committee.

Our Purpose . . .

Students registering Monday were somewhat surprised to find a short notice posted in the library informing them that they would not be required to pay their $5 student body fee nor their fifty cent class fee if they did not desire to do so. As a result of this, exactly 28 per cent of the student body had paid the fee last night at the end of the second day of registration. The Barometer feels that this comparatively small percentage is due, not to the fact that the students wanted to spend the extra $5, but rather to the fact that few of them realized at that time just exactly what payment and failure of payment of the fee means to the maintenance of student activities and the ultimate future of the institution.

The Barometer has enough faith in the Oregon State student body to believe that if the majority of students of this institution clearly realize how this money is apportioned and expended-decidedly to their own advantage, they would pay the extra fee without the slightest hesitation.

In this issue the Barometer has attempted to touch upon every phase of student activity insofar as it is affected by the Associated Student organization. Furthermore, it is the hope of the Barometer that students, after gaining a clear understanding of every branch of the student government and how they are financed, will see the matter in an entirely different light and not only will pay the extra fee, but will also feel that they are following the correct procedure as true Oregon State

And it is for this purpose that this special edition of the Barometer has been issued. If we accomplish that aim of enlightening the student body on the matter, we will feel that we have rendered the institution a distinct service.

analogy. Cannot the Oregon State student body numbering nearly 2000 be considered similar to a city of the same size? Then suppose, for comparison, that city officials of a town of the same population, came to the conclusion that their city taxes were working too much of a hardship on a few of the residents of their own city. In order to relieve the "blind, crippled and financially disabled" as our radical friends at the university are striving to do, from paying taxes, they merely decree that beginning on a certain date only those who are able to pay taxes will be asked to do so. What becomes of those who do not pay? Oh, they go right on enjoying the privileges and protection assured by those who pay

The Barometer is fully cognizant of the fact that there was no agitation on the part of Oregon State students with reference to the fee payment on this campus. As a matter of fact the Barometer believes that had not the notice requested by the state board been posted, there would have been little question raised by any of the students at this institution, who hesitated in paying because they were afraid that others would not pay and they would therefore be left without any benefits from their membership in the Associated Students. This is a natural feeling to be sure, and points out definitely that the matter should be settled at once.

Because of this the Barometer believes the matter is worthy of the immediate consideration of the state board, for if allowed to slide until April 16, the next scheduled meeting of the board, undue harm may re-

In the meantime it is the duty of every Oregon State student to show to the board, by paying the extra fee, that they are in sympathy with the promotion of student activities at this institution. For only with such an indication can the board members be brought to realize that Oregon State students believe in the activities of the institution and are ready to support them, regardless of outside influences.

Monday and Tuesday 28 per cent of the student body paid the $5 fee for the support of student activities for the remainder of the 1933-34 school year. Do those who didn't pay that fee expect to sit by and enjoy the privileges paid for by this 28 per cent? If they do they are taking a great deal for granted. Such, most certainly will not be the case, for only those who officially belong to the Associated Students of Oregon State college are eligible to partake in any extra-curricular activity sponsored by that organization which includes, baseball, track, glee clubs, forensics, tennis, publication work and numerous other branches of student activity.

So it must be evident that failure on the part of the student body to pay this fee will mean that drastic steps will be necessitated in all lines of student activity including the curtailment, if not the elimination of all spring sports, the suspension of the publication of the Barometer on its present daily basis and many other activities included in the budget of the Associated Students.

It must be remembered also that the budget appearing elsewhere in today's Barometer was approved last fall by the student board of control based on estimated income and expenditures for the entire school yearnot merely for two terms, and any variance from this program would naturally throw this budget out of balance. Approval of the budget quite naturally involved the signing of contracts, etc., for the school year, and as it now stands the Associated Students are holding the sack on these agreements, which unless fulfilled will involve many undesirable entanglements.

Because of these reasons and many others it is imperative that the students of Oregon State become familiar with the budget, realizing the necessity of the proper procedure in this case and making every possible effort to see that the fee is paid. Unless a much larger percentage of the student body visualizes this need and makes this necessary effort, Oregon State will fall into an inferior class of institution-certainly a condition not to be desired.

Here is an opportunity the like of which seldom presents itself to an Oregon State student body. Let's get behind it and save not only the activities themselves but the name of Oregon State college.
