Vet Center reopens

The Veteran's Referral Center reopened earlier this month in the Administration Building. The center provides services to OSU's 370 student veterans, such as help with financial aid, GI benefits, vocational rehabilitation, and scholarships. The center is run by veterans to help other veterans. Story, page 3.

Beavers win 12-3

The Beavers came back from a Saturday loss to Portland State to beat the Vikings 12-3 on Sunday. OSU won before a capacity home crowd of 1,091. The Beavers had 15 hits for the game led by R.A. Neitzel and Aaron Anderson who had 3 hits each. The win increases OSU's record to 8-12. Story page 5.

Gymnasts win big

The OSU gymnastics team had a nearly perfect match, beating the University of Washington in Seattle on Friday. The Beavers' 190.15 score was their best showing yet on the road and the third best in university history. Linda Pierce placed first on the uneven bars and balance beam with a score of 9.8 on bars and 9.7 on beam. Story, page 3.

Crew team loses

The OSU crew team lost to the University of Victoria for the ninth straight year in Vancouver, British Columbia. UVic won 11-5 to claim the Karl Drlica trophy. The trophy is awarded to the team with the most victories for the day. Victoria spent the morning building a 6-2 lead over the Beavers. The OSU women's teams scored all of the points for the Beavers. Story, page 3.

NOW wants law

The National Organization of Women (NOW) in Idaho want to get an initiative on the ballot that would ensure a woman's right to make her own decisions about abortion. Idaho's governor just vetoed a bill that would have been the most restrictive anti-abortion law in the United States. NOW is currently gathering signatures to get their initiative on the ballot. Story, page 12.

Buffalo stops transit

All mass transit in Buffalo, N.Y. has been shut down do to lack of stable funding. The shutdown makes Buffalo the largest city in the United States without a mass transit system. The stoppage is expected to really take effect Monday morning when the 135,000 people served by the transit system have to find alternative routes to work and school. Story, page 12.

Humanities research at OSU

Center offers 'cross-fertilization of ideas'

By DAVID KURLE

of the Daily Barometer

The OSU Center for the Humanities may have a new building, but the center is not new to OSU, as it has been in existence since 1977, according to Peter Copek, director of the center.

The center began as the Humanities Development Program in 1977 and was aimed at providing more courses in the humanities to undergraduates at OSU, Copek said.

The mission of the center has expanded since then.

"Our fundamental mission is to improve the quality of research and teaching in the humanities at Oregon State University," Copek said.

The center brings speakers and other scholars to OSU to make contact with students and faculty.

"There are many opportunities for OSU students to meet and discuss issues with important scholars," he said.

The center also appoints research fellows to the university. The center appoints fellows outside the university and six fellows a year from among faculty at OSU. Most of the fellows are working on publishing books and articles about the subject they are researching.

"It's a center where people come to meet," said Khachig Tololyan, a research fellow from Wesleyan University in Connecticut.

"First, the center gives me time to work on my research and it puts me into contact with people I wouldn't meet on the East Coast," Tololyan said.

"It becomes a crossroads for communication," he said. "I would call this a cross-fertilization of ideas."

Tololyan said the center is good for OSU because it enables research fellows from other places to spread the reputation of the university.

"When people like me become alumni of the center, they lecture all over the world and the reputation of the university spreads," he said. "You get more bang for the buck from this sort of thing than from anything else."

The OSU Center for Humanities is one of 60 or 70 such centers in the United States, according to Copek.

"It's not unique, but not every university has one," he said. "We are already recognized as one of the better centers of moderate size in the country."

The center grew out of the Humanities Development Program, when it was decided to develop a more research-based program. The program applied for and received a challenge grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) in 1984 and has been slowly building since then, Copek said.

The center is funded basically by endowments from the NEH. An endowment is money that the NEH gives to the center, which is put into the bank. The center then operates off the interest that the money earns.

"Most of our funding comes from earnings on an endowment we have built over the last five years," Copek said.

The center is currently operating on an endowment of $2.8 million from the NEH and private contributors, according to Copek.

According to the center's newsletter, published winter term, the total endowments amount to about $3.2 million.

"Besides students, the major beneficiaries of the center are the faculty, especially those who receive fellowships from the center," he said. "We have a host of visitors that are here for a day, two days, a week or two weeks. We have one public program a week sponsored by the center."

"All of our programs are running to the capacity of our budget," Copek said.

Copek said he would be glad to take suggestions, especially from students, on what the center is doing.

"If students have any suggestions about how their educational experience in the humanities can be improved they can call me directly at the center," he said.

The center is in a period of consolidation to see what it wants to do next, according to Copek.

"We haven't discussed major issues of growth yet," he said. "We want to see it work for a year or so and pay attention to what we've built rather than quickly going on to something new."

Nominations due for employee award

Nominations for the second annual OSU Exemplary Employee Award are now being accepted by the Department of Human Resources with the deadline at 5 p.m. April 15.

This award will recognize the outstanding service of OSU employees. The winner or winners will be presented with a plaque and a cash award to be given during the annual University Day at the beginning of fall term.

Nominations are made by supervisors or co-workers through the supervisor. The supervisors' nomination form, available through the Department of Human Resources, must be accompanied by a maximum of three letters of support.

Employees eligible for nomination are those who are classified and management service employees who have been at the university for a minimum of one year or work half-time.

The recipient of the award is chosen by the OSU Employee Recognition Committee from the nominations submitted.

Last year's award went to John Bell, a trades/maintenance worker with the Department of Student Housing and Residential Programs and Kathleen Martin, an assistant to the adviser of the College of Liberal Arts.

Center aids OSU student veterans

Veterans Center reopens in Admin Building

By KEN KIM-SZE CHEUNG
of the Daily Barometer

The Veteran's Referral Center, which was closed after last year because of internal problems, reopened earlier this month.

According to Ray Leidich, director of the Academic Services Center and the faculty director for the Veteran's Referral Center, the center was closed last year because of a lack of supervision and other problems.

Leidich said the previous director moved away and had to supervise the center from long distance. Because this proved too difficult, the center was closed, he said.

The Veteran's Referral Center, located in Room A100 of the Administrative Services Building, is an organization of student veterans serving other student veterans. It reopened late last term after a veteran approached Leidich about the possibility of reopening the center.

The center provides referral information relating to the specific needs of the veteran community. This information includes vocational rehabilitation, GI benefits, and financial aid and scholarships. The center also arranges tutorial assistance and counseling for veterans.

Hector Jimenez, a sophomore in business, is the student director of the center.

Jimenez said only a few veterans have been in the center because people do not know it has reopened. There are 370 students at OSU who receive veteran's benefits.

Jimenez said the center is needed to deal with the problems of student veterans.

"As a veteran, a lot of the time I had problems trying to get my benefits started," Jimenez said. "I didn't know who to contact. Financial aid for me has been a big problem. A lot of veterans get off of active duty and because they were on active duty when they filled out the financial aid forms, a lot of the time they are told they are not eligible for any kind of aid, which is not true.

"Some veterans that go to school here are Vietnam veterans and they are under certain types of stress and sometimes they like to talk to someone who was in the service and understands the kind of things they went through," Jimenez said.

The center operates with a budget of only $1035. The center's funding comes from two sources, $335 from the Federal Veterans Administration and $700 from student incidental fees. The federal funds are used for wages of the student director and incidental fees go toward office expenses.

The student director position is a work study position. Leidich said Jimenez is contracted to work 100 hours at the federal minimum wage, which is $3.35 per hour.

According to Keith McCreight, director of financial aid, the veteran work study program operates independent of the college work study program, which currently uses Oregon's $4.25 an hour as the minimum wage.

Jimenez said he is not working at the center for the money. "I do the job mainly for the satisfaction of helping other student veterans," he said.

Volunteers to clean shelters and handicapped housing

By KOSHTRA TOLLE
of the Daily Barometer

Volunteers will be painting and cleaning up homeless shelters and housing for the handicapped in Corvallis from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on April 7.

The work-a-thon is organized by the Oregon State Public Interest Research Group (OSPIRG) and OSU's Finley Hall. The work is being spread out over seven work sites in Corvallis, according to OSPIRG representative Erica Douglas.

More than 100 volunteers have gathered sponsors, including one fraternity with 50 volunteers and most of Finley Hall, Douglas said.

The main organizer is Anne Huling, who is involved in OSPIRG and lives in Finley Hall.

Douglas said she helped organize the event because she was frustrated by the number of overseas hunger programs there are when there is a large hunger problem in the United States.

The group's goal is to raise $2,000 and "have fun raising the money and getting people involved," Douglas said. She added that Huling and other OSPIRG members feel strongly about the hunger problem, which made them decide to follow 200 college campus' example and start the Hunger/Clean-up Project.

Nationally, more than 10,000 people volunteer yearly for this project, and $140,000 is raised. Fifty percent of the proceeds from the Corvallis project go to the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness. The other half goes to Community Outreach and food and homeless shelters locally, Douglas said.

There are no physical limitations to volunteering, Douglas said. The work will consist of painting, yard work and cleaning. The Parks Department and supervisors at work sites will hand out tools and direct volunteers.

Jo Anne Trow, OSU vice president for student affairs, will speak to volunteers in the Memorial Union Quad at 9:30 a.m. on April 7. There will be a barbecue at Avery Park following the clean-up.

Writer to read from recent work

Harold Jaffe, fiction writer and co-editor of the literary review "Fiction International," will read from his recent writing on Thursday, April 5, at 4:30 p.m. in MU 206.

Jaffe, who teaches creative writing at San Diego State University, has written six books of fiction. His most recent work, "Eros in the time of AIDS," will be published in June.

Other published books by Jaffe include, "Madonna and Other Spectacles" (1988),

"Beasts" (1986), "Dos Indios" (1983), "Morning Crazy Horse" (1982) and "Mole's Pity" (1979). He has been published in more than two dozen journals and anthologies.

Jaffe has received numerous awards, including the National Endowment for the Arts awards in fiction in 1983 and 1988.

The reading is sponsored by the OSU Conventions and Lectures Committee. The event is free and open to the public.

Food safety expert to speak on Tuesday

Food safety issues of the 1990s will be discussed in a public lecture Tuesday, April 3 at 7:30 p.m. in MU 105.

Food safety expert Michael P. Doyle will deliver the James M. Craig Memorial Lecture in applied and environmental microbiology. Doyle is a professor of food microbiology at the Food Research Institute at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Doyle is an expert on Listeria as a food-borne pathogen, according to Morrie Craig, associate professor of veterinary medicine at OSU. Craig helps sponsor the lecture series in honor of his late father, who was a microbiologist.

Listeria was identified as the contaminant in batches of cheese that caused public health problems in Southern California, New York, Wisconsin and elsewhere, according to Craig.

Doyle also will present the Craig seminar at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 4 in Nash Hall 206. He will speak on "Unraveling the Significance of Listeria monocytogenes as a Food-Borne Pathogen."

Doyle's research has focused on pathogen mechanisms and detection and ways to control or eliminate pathogens from foods. Microbiologists use several detection methods developed by his research group.

He has served as a scientific adviser to the World Health Organization and is a member of the U.S. National Advisory Committee on Microbiological Criteria for Foods. He has written more than 100 scientific articles and edited the book, "Food-Borne Bacterial Pathogens."

Four finalists for director chosen

The search committee for the position of director of the Memorial Union and educational activities has identified four finalists who will be interviewed by students, faculty, staff and administrators during the next two weeks.

According to search committee chairman J. Roger Penn, associate vice president and dean of students, the MU director has overall responsibility for a number of facilities and programs. Those responsibilities include the MU, MU East, Student Activities program, recreational sports and student media.

The director also teaches and advises in the College Student Services Administration Graduate Program, which offers master's and doctoral degrees through the College of Education.

The four finalists for the position are William C. Edwards, director of the Student Center at the University of South Dakota; Charles W. Miller, director of the Danna Center and Student Activities at Loyola University in New Orleans; Judith A. Bryant, director of the Office of Recreation and the Aquatic Center at the University of Tennessee; and Bernard J. Pitts, director and executive secretary of the University Union at California State University-Hayward.

The director position is available because of the retirement of George W. Stevens, assistant vice president of the Memorial Union. Stevens will be retiring in June after a long and distinguished career at the university.

Penn noted that the interview process for each candidate will take place over two days.

"This is a very important position for the university and we want extensive student, faculty and staff involvement in the interviews," Penn said.

Interviews for the candidates are open to any interested students, faculty, staff, and/or administrators. The interview dates are as follows:

William C. Edwards — MU Council Room on Thursday, April 5, from 1:15-2 p.m.

Charles W. Miller — MU Board Room on Monday, April 9, from 11:30 a.m.-12:15 p.m.

Judith A. Bryant — MU Board Room on Thursday, April 12, from 11:30 a.m.-12:15 p.m.

Bernard J. Pitts — MU Board Room on Monday, April 16, from 11:30 a.m.-12:15 p.m.

Beavers blast Portland State 12-3 for first Pac-10 victory

By SHAWN SCHOEFFLER

of the Daily Barometer

After dropping its first Pac-10 Northern Division game Saturday to Portland State, the Oregon State baseball team bounced back to pummel the same Viking team 12-3 Sunday afternoon at Coleman Field in front of 1,091 fans.

The win improved the Beavers' record to 8-12 overall and evened their league record at 1-1 on the young season. Oregon State has played better baseball of late, after falling to 0-8 at the beginning of the season.

The Beavers had a great day at the plate as they pounded out 15 hits, with eight of the nine starters getting at least one hit. OSU was led by R.A. Neitzel and Aaron Anderson, who had three hits apiece, while Larry Vlastic, Jon Yonemitsu and Anderson had two RBI apiece.

Unlike Saturday when the Vikings took the early lead before winning 12-5, the Beavers jumped ahead in the first inning, scoring two runs on three hits.

Neitzel, who went hitless in Saturday's game, started the rally by nailing a double to right-center and advanced to third on a ground-out to second base by Anderson.

Scott Sanders then knocked in Neitzel on a single to left field. Paul Sanders walked and Ben Johnson drove Scott Sanders home on a single to right.

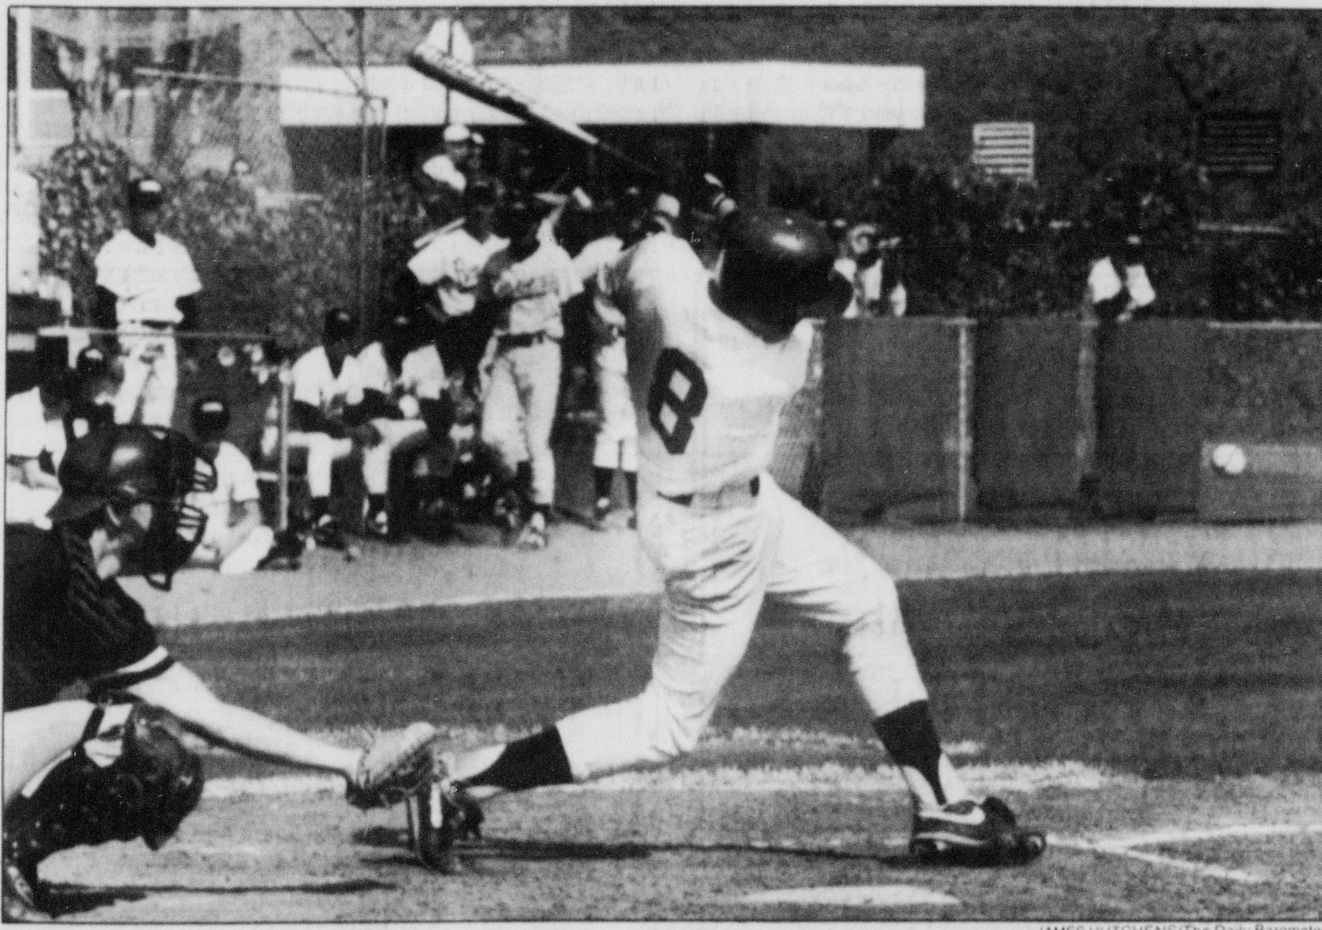

The Beavers got all the runs they would need in the fourth inning as OSU football players Scott Sanders and Vlastic did most of the damage. Sanders ripped an RBI double and Vlastic, who had struck out his two previous times at bat on curve balls, ripped a hanging curve to left field for a two-run single.

Vlastic's single extended his hitting streak to 16 games.

Oregon State received excellent pitching from Dave Schoppe and Jeff Otis. Schoppe scattered eight hits through the first five and two-thirds innings to earn his second win of the season against two losses.

Otis held the Vikings the rest of the game, earning his second save of the year without giving up an earned run. He also stopped the Viking rally in the sixth inning when he started a double play on a grounder back to the mound.

In Saturday's game, Portland State center fielder Dane Walker caused the Beavers problems as he hit an inside-the-park grand slam and drove in seven runs to lead the Vikings to a 12-5 victory at Civic Stadium in Portland.

Left-handers Steve Bevens, Dave Gogal and Rick Schimmel joined Walker to account for 11 of the Vikings' 13 hits.

PSU starter Mark Peterson handcuffed the top of the Beavers' order, but the bottom five had 11 of OSU's 12 hits. Paul Sanders singled, doubled and tripled, scoring each time. Anderson also had three hits and Ben Johnson added two hits, including his first homer of the year, a two-run shot over the left field fence.

Oregon State plays two non-league games, at George Fox Tuesday and at home against Linfield Wednesday, to start the week. The Beavers return to league action Saturday with a doubleheader at Eastern Washington and a doubleheader Sunday at Washington State.

Gymnasts nearly perfect on road, score 190.15

By ROD PORSCHE

of the Daily Barometer

The OSU gymnastics team came close to perfection Friday night.

The Beavers earned their best road score of the year and the third best in school history in a 190.15-186.85 victory over the University of Washington in Seattle.

"We were 10 seconds away from a perfect meet," coach Jim Turpin said. "Joy (Selig) had one fall on her kick over at the end of her beam routine, but other than that the ladies put on a terrific show. The crowd was definitely on our side and we just knocked everything down for them."

Linda Pierce, a Seattle native, put on another fantastic performance in front of her hometown fans. Pierce placed first with a 9.8 on the uneven bars and also took top honors on beam with a 9.7.

"Every time Linda comes back here, she owns this town," Turpin said. "She was just fabulous, as were most of our routines."

Pierce also competed in the vaulting event for the first time this year and scored 9.3.

"It felt really good to get back into vaulting. I was a little nervous beforehand, but it went really well," Pierce said. "I think maybe I was scored a little high (on beam and bars) because I was in Seattle, but the bar routine felt pretty good. I had a little wobble on the beam, but besides that it felt really good, too."

"There were so many people there from Oregon State it was really unbelievable. And also I know quite a few people from Seattle and they showed up and they were loud," Pierce said.

Selig won the all-around competition with a 38.20, despite her fall on beam. Jennifer McMullin took second, scoring 37.95, and Amy Durham allowed for an OSU sweep, scoring 37.75. Selig also placed first on floor (9.75) and vault (9.65).

Another bright spot was the performance of Julie Tanabe. The vaulting specialist had a career-best 9.5 and placed second on vault behind Selig. People may already be familiar with Tanabe, as she's also a member of the OSU cheerleading squad.

"I kind of had a hard time concentrating before, because so many things were going on with school and cheerleading," Tanabe said. "Now I can center on what to do (in gymnastics), I've got a little less stress."

Oregon State is currently ranked seventh nationally. Rankings are decided by a team's top five scores over the course of a season, with at least two away scores and two home scores counting. The Beavers are counting away scores of 188.75 and this weekend's score of 190.15. Their three home counters are 189.65, 190.35 and 190.85. Oregon State's national qualifying score is now 189.95, more than four-tenths higher because of the Beavers' performance on Friday.

"I couldn't be happier. This meet improves our qualifying score to the point where we are in striking range of UCLA," Turpin said.

UCLA is ranked sixth nationally, just ahead of OSU, with a qualifying score of 190.46.

The Beavers seem to be peaking at just the right time, as the NCAA Western Regional competition is next Saturday at UCLA.

"We need to hit all of our routines and hit them well, because it (regionals) is at UCLA. There probably won't be as many (OSU) fans and they'll probably be judging a little harder," Pierce said.

Performing well at regionals is critical because the team score is doubled and berths for the national tournament are decided by the new qualifying score.

If the Beavers can overtake UCLA as the sixth place team in the country, they'll have a much better chance of winning the national title. The top six teams compete during the evening session while the seventh-12th place teams participate in the afternoon session. Scores seem to be higher in the evening session.

"Jim (coach Turpin) is really pushing for that, he really wants us to be in the top six," Tanabe said. If Oregon State became one of the top six teams, they'd have another edge: they're hosting nationals. Having the championships at Gill Coliseum on April 19 and 20, with the crowd behind them, may be enough for the Beavers to knock off the favorite, the Utah Utes. But first they must concentrate on having a solid performance at regionals this Saturday.

Victoria victorious over Beavers in B.C.

By DENNIS NELSON

of the Daily Barometer

The University of Victoria crew team claimed the Karl Drlica Trophy for the ninth straight year, defeating Oregon State 11-5 Saturday afternoon on Beaver Lake in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Victoria, the 1989 Canadian Collegiate Champion, has won the trophy every year since the regatta was started in 1981 and features the crews from OSU, UVic, and the University of British Columbia. The trophy is awarded to the team that wins the most races on the day.

In the morning, Victoria jumped out to a 6-2 lead over the Beavers in the 500 meter sprint races. OSU managed a little better in the afternoon 1850 meter races as they claimed three victories on the longer racing course.

The OSU women scored all six points for the Beavers, as they split their 10 races with UVic. It marked the first time in the regatta's history that the Lady Beavers were able to keep up with their northern rivals.

OSU women's head coach Roger Payne was pleased with the women's results, especially because the Victoria women's crew team was named the Amateur Women's Team of the Year for the providence of British Columbia.

Leading the way for the Beaver women were the novice 8 and 4 boats, which claimed victories in both the sprint races and the longer 1850 meter races. The OSU women's JV 8 boat won their 1850 meter race to claim the other Beaver victory.

OSU's men's crew struggled as they dropped all of six of their races. The men struggled to keep up the pace in the shorter sprint races, but came back to post better times in the longer.

Stanford downs Auburn 88-81, wins first NCAA women's title

By MEDE NIX

United Press International

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Sonja Henning scored 21 points and Katy Steding added 18 by hitting a record six 3-point shots Sunday to lead Stanford to its first NCAA women's championship with an 88-81 victory over the Auburn.

Stanford (32-1) hit 11 of 26 3-pointers and overcame an 11-point deficit and 11 turnovers in the first half to win the title and send Auburn (28-7) to its third straight defeat in a championship game.

The old individual record for 3-pointers in the women's final was two. Steding shattered that to make the all-tournament team, while teammate Jennifer Azzi scored 17 points and was named most valuable player of the Final Four.

Auburn's Carolyn Jones scored a game-high 24 points and also made the all-tournament team.

After a 41-41 halftime tie, Auburn opened up a three-point lead before Steding's 3-pointer touched off a nine-point Stanford run that gave the Cardinal a 52-46 lead with 15:57 left.

Auburn cut its deficit to four points with 12:01 left on Evelyn Thompson's two free throws, but the Tigers never pulled any closer.

Julie Zeilstra's three-point play, another 3-point basket by Steding and a basket by Henning gave Stanford a 12-point lead with seven minutes remaining.

The Tigers, who used their full-court press to great advantage in the first half, were unable to cause trouble in the second half.

The Cardinal committed only two second-half turnovers and built a rebounding margin of 49-36. Stanford scored 18 points off 19 offensive rebounds.

Stanford used a nine-point run at the end of the first half to pull into a 41-41 tie.

The Cardinal led 22-11 with 12 minutes left in the half, with the help of five 3-point shots.

Then Auburn got its press untracked to force turnovers. The Tigers took their first lead, 28-27, with seven minutes left in the half on a basket by Jones.

Stanford committed seven turnovers and scored only four points — all on free throws — during a seven-minute stretch. Auburn scored 13 points off Stanford turnovers in the first half.

Auburn led 41-32 with 1:30 left before the Cardinal scored the next nine points.

Other Tigers in double figures were Chantel Tremiere with 17, C.C. Hayden with 15 and Evelyn Thompson with 10.

Tremiere was also named to the all-tournament team, along with Venus Lacy of Louisiana Tech.

Oregon State softball continues to struggle on road

By TIM MARSHALL
of the Daily Barometer

Oregon State's women's softball team continued to struggle on the road this past weekend as they dropped two doubleheaders in Arizona.

On Friday afternoon, OSU lost a doubleheader, 18-0 and 6-0, to Arizona in Tucson. The Wildcats roughed up Oregon State starter Jana Nasser for eight runs in the first inning as they cruised to the easy victory. Arizona combined for 29 hits in the two games while the Beavers only managed to record five hits on the day.

The Wildcats won the second game 6-0 behind the outstanding pitching of Ginnie Scheller, who held Oregon State to one hit while striking out two and walking one. Freshman outfielder Deana Vendegnia recorded OSU's lone hit in the nightcap.

On Saturday evening in Tempe, Ariz., the 16th-ranked Arizona State Sun Devils swept a doubleheader from Oregon State 8-4 and 3-0. In the opener, both teams recorded 10 hits, but the Sun Devils were able to cash in on more of their scoring opportunities.

In the second game ASU shut out the Beavers behind the strong pitching of Terri Carnicelli, who limited Oregon State to two hits over seven innings. At one point in the game, Carnicelli retired 10 OSU hitters in a row.

Oregon State also faced UNLV in a Sunday afternoon doubleheader, but results were unavailable at press time.

The Beavers, 3-21 overall (0-8 Pac-10), finally play at home when they face Linfield in a Saturday doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. On Sunday, OSU will host Western Oregon in another doubleheader scheduled for 1 p.m.

CBS Sports declines to renew Musburger's contract

United Press International

DENVER — Brent Musburger's contract with CBS Sports will not be renewed and his last appearance on the network will be at the NCAA men's basketball championship, the network announced Sunday.

"CBS Sports announced today that it had declined to renew Brent Musburger's employment agreement, which expires within the next few months," said a statement issued by CBS Sports president Neal Pilson.

"Brent has made an important contribution to the success of CBS Sports during the past 15 years," Pilson said. "We have great respect for Brent and we wish him well."

A CBS spokeswoman would not elaborate on the reasons for the decision.

Musburger is scheduled to make his final network appearance Monday night at the NCAA basketball championship in Denver.

Musburger joined CBS Sports in 1975 as host of "The NFL Today."

"We were a little disappointed with the men's results," said OSU men's head coach Dave Emigh. "This week we worked on distance and Victoria emphasized speed work, and it showed in the 500 meter sprint races. They were faster than we were, but we feel our speed will increase as we approach the Pac-10s."

Last year, the annual regatta had to be cancelled because of bad weather in British Columbia.

Harrah's!

Summer is rapidly approaching. You're probably wondering how to combine the fun of summer with the reality of working....

At Harrah's Reno the summer is the most exciting time of the year! The area's recreational activities abound with golf, tennis, water skiing, boating, hiking, fishing, or just relaxing in the High Sierra sun on the beaches of Lake Tahoe, less than an hours drive from Reno. And work is just as much fun, with the continuous thrill of greeting new guests and meeting the day's challenges.

We are looking for enthusiastic, outgoing applicants who would enjoy serving our guests. Harrah's Personnel Representatives will be on campus to interview for summer positions in the gaming and food services departments. You are invited to complete and application and sign up for an interview in your Career Planning and Placement Center.

Carbajal defends title

United Press International
STATELINE, NEV. — NABF junior flyweight champion Michael Carbajal won a unanimous 10-round decision over a tenacious Raul Acosta Sunday, dominating the smaller opponent but never knocking him down in a nationally televised bout at Caesar's Lake Tahoe Resort.
Carbajal, a 1988 Olympic Silver medalist, stung Acosta with several rights, but the challenger went inside and frustrated the champ. After a cautious first round by both fighters, the 10-round contest was marked by sustained toe-to-toe flurries the rest of the way.
In the last two rounds, the fighters exchanged blows at a dizzying pace. Carbajal, seeking a knockout, gave up working on Acosta's body and took aim at the challenger's head.
"He had a real good chin," Carbajal said. "I thought I had him going in the ninth and the last round, but he wouldn't go down. He was tough."

Earnhardt wins TransSouth 500

United Press International
DARLINGTON, S.C. — Dale Earnhardt sidestepped trouble throughout Sunday's TranSouth 500 and then held off Mark Martin in the closing laps to claim his sixth NASCAR Winston Cup career victory at Darlington Raceway.
Earnhardt, driving a Chevrolet, finished less than a second ahead of Martin on the 1.366-mile track in a race that had 10 caution flags for 51 of the 367 laps.
The final caution period began on lap 361 after Mike Alexander's Buick spun off turn four and smacked the inside retaining wall. The race restarted with three laps remaining.
"Consistency and good work by the guys in the pits won us this race. We stayed out of trouble and raced the track," Earnhardt said after winning his second consecutive race at Darlington and his fourth TranSouth 500.
"The car would get loose at times and it would push at times. We just played it cool and drove a safe race."
Twice during the event wrecks could have eliminated Earnhardt but each time the three-time series champion survived the incidents almost unscathed.

Disabled students find miracle cure for administration

The OSU administration building is filled with handicapped people. From the third floor upward, the deaf, the dumb and the comatose occupy its office spaces.

Try registering a complaint sometime, or on a whim, go and say hello to our university president. Your words will fall on deaf ears and your questions will be met with silence.

But hallelujah, a cure's been found! Ironically, these miracle workers, these saviors of bureaucratic blight, are disabled citizens themselves.

The Disabled Students Organization (DSO) of Oregon State University stumbled upon this discovery when confronted with the idiotic logic of the bureaucratic mind. The mind that decided the third floor of a completely inaccessible building would be a good spot to locate the offices of the Special Services Program (SSP).

SSP, a federally funded program that is supposed to support low-income, first-generation and handicapped students, first opened its doors in 1980. A decade ago, some bureaucrat in the admin building probably looked at his list of accessible office space and decided to place them in Waldo Hall. A building that was later scheduled for demolition.

DSO registered their complaints to the university administration and were told that because Waldo was being considered for demolition, it would not be prudent to spend the money to install an elevator. According to Larry Smith, president of DSO, when asked where they planned to move the SSP offices, the administration replied that since it could take years for the process to actually occur, they hadn't even thought about it.

It appeared that the wheels of bureaucracy needed some rust remover. Smith, who said he "doesn't like taking dirty laundry outside the house," went through all the proper channels. From the OSU administration, through the Chancellor's office, and even up to Governor Goldschmidt himself, there was no action taken on DSO's grievances.

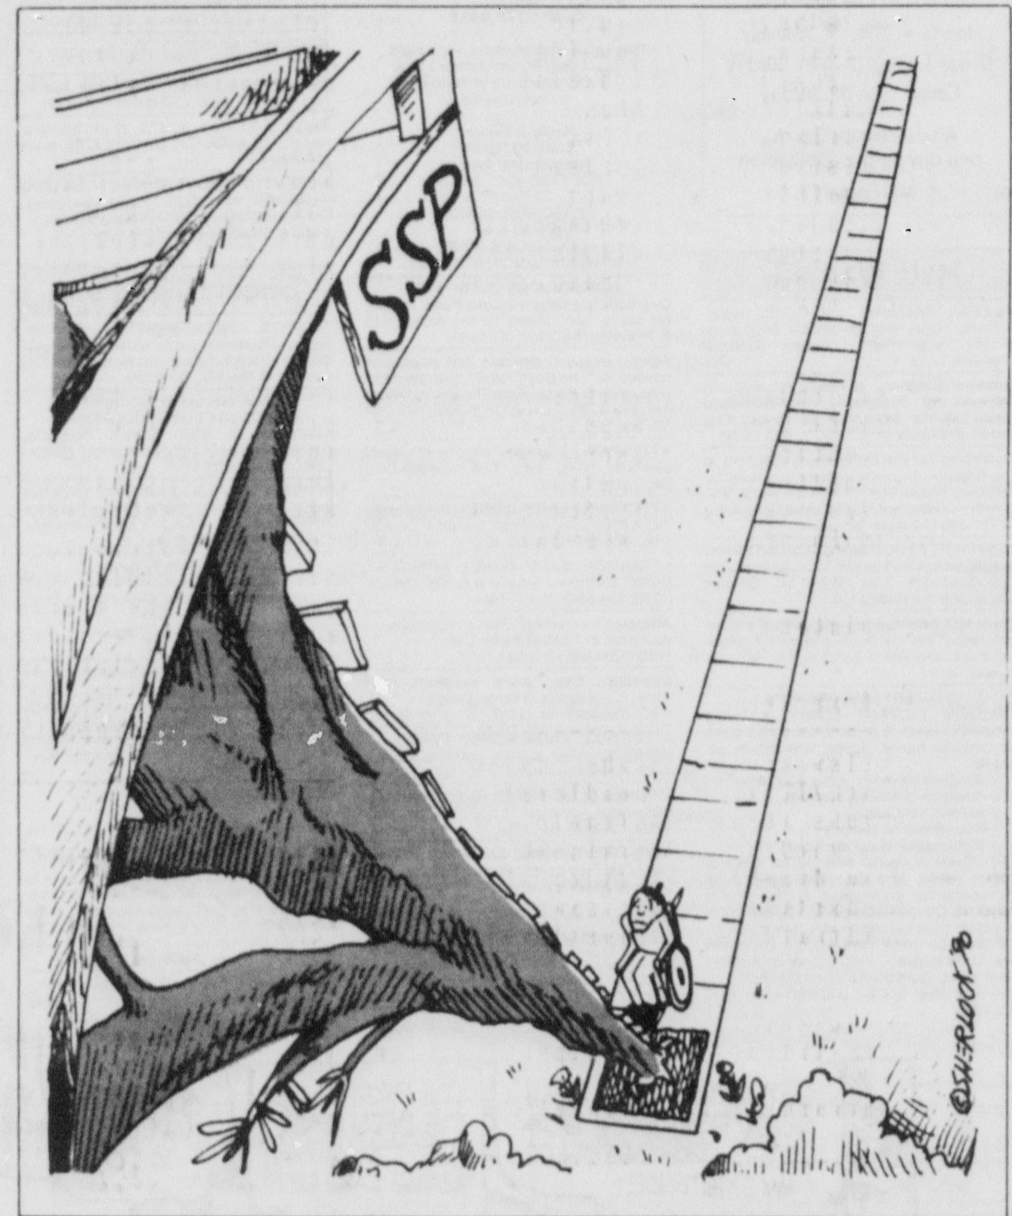

But DSO didn't give up. They knew what most of us should have known all along.

Money talks. Faced with the possibility of losing over $62.2 million in federally funded grants and contracts — following a threat by the DSO to file complaints with the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Education — the deaf started listening, the dumb starting thinking, and the comatose woke up.

Last week, OSU officials announced that they would spend between $160,000 to $200,000 to make Waldo Hall accessible to all handicapped students. What do you know, students can make a difference!

But can they? Recently, some individuals in the upper floors of the administration building complained to the Daily Barometer that the story on this topic, which ran in Friday's edition, was inaccurate and that OSU officials decided many months ago to make the improvements, prior to any threats from the Disabled Students.

However, a copy of the minutes from an advisory committee meeting to discuss handicapped access to Waldo Hall, dated Feb. 6, indicates that no decision had been made at that point. Or, if one had been made, they failed to inform those present of their decision.

Whatever the case may be, it wasn't until DSO went public in the Corvallis Gazette-Times, March 16, that the ball started rolling. Praise be, the administrators have been healed!

At least temporarily.

At long last, the feds are taking action against papayas

At long last, the federal government is taking action. I found this out thanks to alert reader Dawn Price, who sent me a notice from the Standardization Section of the Fresh Products Branch of the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The moment I saw this notice, I said to myself: "I wonder what those wild and crazy dudes down at the Standardization Section of the Fresh Products Branch of the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture are up to now!"

The answer is: They are standardizing papayas. I am not making this up. They have churned out several dense pages of proposed papaya standards, featuring subsections and sub-subsections and statements such as this:

"Fairly well formed" means the papaya may be moderately lopsided, flattened, elongated or otherwise lacking symmetry, but the fruit shall not be sufficiently misshapen to materially detract from its appearance."

I know how you're reacting to this news, as a taxpayer and a consumer. You're saying to yourself: "It's about time, after so many tragic deaths directly linked to misshapen papayas, that the men and women of the Standardization Section of the Fresh Products Branch of the Fruit and Vegetable Division of the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture have decided to take action. BUT ARE THEY GOING FAR ENOUGH?"

I regret to report that the answer is: No. Because there is a serious problem here, a problem that poses a threat potentially even more dangerous than the epidemic of Swine Flu shots that swept the nation during the administration of Gerald "R." Ford (Aug. 9-12, 1974).

The problem is that in certain Hispanic cultures, particularly the Cuban culture, "papaya" is an OBSCENE WORD. Really. If you don't believe me, walk up to your boss and say, "You big papaya head!" Chances are he'll stare at you blankly, but if there are any Cuban-Americans around, they'll be laughing like hell.

And hell is exactly where this nation is headed, when the federal government starts standardizing obscene fruit names. This is just one more example of the rising tide of pornographic filth and smut — not just in the area of fresh produce, but also in books, movies, "rock" music, Care Bear episodes, cloud formations, etc. — that threatens to destroy the moral foundation garment of this nation.

What can we do? We call all write angry letters to our congresshumans demanding that the Department of Agriculture change the official name of the papaya to something more suitable, such as "Geraldo," or even — this would be a nice tribute — "The Rev. Jerry Falwell Fruit." But that is not all. We should also demand that Sen. Jesse Helms (R-Spider Family) hold televised hearings that would probe deeply into the whole alarming issue of obscenity in federally standardized produce, with an eye toward answering some troubling questions, such as:

1. What about the expression, "Get a load of the mangos on that tomato?"
2. WHAT ABOUT CUCUMBERS?

Registration screwups not student's fault

To the editor:

When I arrived at Gill Coliseum to pick up my schedule on March 26, I was told that my schedule could not be found. I went to see if my name was on any lists because of fines, but I wasn't. I was advised to go see if my dean's office had my schedule. They told me to go to the Registrar's Office.

After standing in line for half an hour, I was told that I had not registered for the spring term. I assured them I had registered and asked them to find me in the computer. Registration had lost my schedule; in fact, they said I never registered.

The next day I was told to do late registration, and to go to all the classes I needed to get a signatures from the departments. I spent five hours learning the most useful skills on campus, standing patiently in long lines.

I am angry that this happened to me. I couldn't get classes that I need, and I am taking ones I don't need just to fill my schedule. I don't feel that I should be penalized for mistakes made in the Registrar's Office. If there is going to be pre-registration, it ought to work. I was made to feel that it was my fault. I didn't even receive an apology. Staff members were rude. I pay a lot of money; I deserve better than this. Anybody does.

I'm sure that I speak for all of you when I say that, until we get some answers, ALL vegetables should be required to wear some kind of modest little garments. Come on, citizens! Let's not sit back and do nothing while this nation gets flushed down the Toilet of Low Morals! Let's actually help pull the handle! And let's remember these words, which appear on a sign that somebody nailed to a telephone pole near where I get my car fixed:

DEFINITELY NO BEER - PEPSI IN HELL.

I would only add - and I am sure that the Rev. Fruit would back me up here - that this statement also applies to both Classic AND Coke II.

I like Mike....

To the editor:

Let's get one thing straight - the incumbent Representative to the U.S. Congress, Denny Smith of Oregon's fifth district, is a student's worst enemy.

With five institutions of higher learning in his district, he has virtually ignored and knowingly dismissed those he is supposed to represent who pay tuition. That means you students and your parents.

You may say, "I don't get tuition assistance, so this editorial doesn't concern me." That is exactly why it does concern YOU. Smith's abysmal education voting record is one reason why you aren't getting assistance and have problems paying tuition or put a burden on your hard-working parents.

Check the facts - Denny Smith is so far separated from those in his district that it is laughable. This ultra-conservative has an environmental record that is surely one of the worst in Washington, yet his military spending record is stellar. When Mr. Smith goes to Washington, he forgets that Oregon prides itself is on its impressive wilderness and is a shining example to the rest of the nation, enjoyed by all who travel here. Oh yeah, Smith, the defense industry in this state is comparatively next-to-nothing.

Well, when Smith's opponent in the upcoming congressional race, the highly qualified, responsive and caring Mike Kopetski goes to Washington in Smith's stead this next session, be assured that he will be a representative and will not forget what issues and interests must be spoken for in his home district.

Transit authority broke, over 1000 workers idled Buffalo shuts down bus and train service, thousands need ride

By DICK USIAK

United Press International

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The city's cash-strapped transit authority shut down bus and train service Sunday, forcing thousands to plan alternate routes to work and school, leaving Buffalo the largest city in the nation without mass transit.

The transit system, which serves about 135,000 weekday riders, including some 20,000 public school students, stopped running at about 1 a.m., hours after the Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority commissioners voted 6-2 Saturday night in favor of the shutdown.

The stoppage idled about 1,100 workers and came after months of attempts by Erie County and Buffalo officials to find a way to provide the authority with a dedicated source of funding. NFTA had been threatening for six months to close down the system for lack of funds.

The shutdown affects bus service in Erie and Niagara counties and service on Buffalo's light rail rapid transit line.

"It's like a ton of bricks have been dropped on your back all at once," said Joseph Rogalski, the operator of the last light rail rapid transit train, which began its final run shortly after midnight. "It's going to be the longest 6 miles yet."

The stoppage is expected to have a severe impact when the work week begins Monday.

Elementary school students in the city are carried by a private bus firm but high school students who normally use NFTA buses will be forced to find other ways to get to their schools.

Further complicating the situation, several highway repair projects have altered normal traffic patterns in the Buffalo area.

"We urge the community to talk to the opponents (of the tax) as firmly, as loudly, and as quickly as possible so we can resolve this," NFTA chairman Robert Gioia said following the vote Saturday night.

New pro-choice initiative by NOW will bring new law to Idaho voters

United Press International

BOISE — A drive to put an abortion initiative on the Idaho ballot has passed the halfway point, a spokeswoman for the National Organization for Women said Sunday.

Despite the veto of an anti-abortion bill by Gov. Cecil Andrus on Friday, "We're certainly far from done," said Lois Warner of the Treasure Valley Chapter.

The next goal is 38,743 signatures on an initiative to set a new abortion law before the voters. The bill Andrus vetoed would have put in place the toughest anti-abortion legislation of any state. In contrast, the initiative says the state shall not interfere with a woman's right to make personal reproductive decisions.

The governor next is expected to sign a bill abolishing the so-called "trigger law"— thus ending all criminal penalties for abortion.

The drive by NOW and other organizations for an initiative is the only one announced so far. The Legislature considered a referendum, but dropped the idea just before the 1990 session adjourned Friday.

Warner said if the governor vetoed the trigger law as he promised, abortion legislation in Idaho would be back to square one. However, she said NOW is aware that anti-abortion forces already are talking of 1991.

"It was announced that a new bill will come forth in the next legislative session by the other side," she said. "We're still faced with that. We're certainly far from done."

With the trigger law repealed, the only laws on the books about abortion would be old statutes that attorneys call unenforceable in terms of recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings.

The initiative says: "The state shall not interfere with a woman's right to make personal reproductive decisions, including but not limited to the decision to become pregnant, to carry a pregnancy to full term, to prevent pregnancy or to terminate a pregnancy during the first 26 weeks of pregnancy. No governmental action shall prevent a woman from terminating a pregnancy to protect her life or health. Nothing in this provision shall restrict a person's religious freedom."
