The Editor Tells of the "Beaver Family"

After asking Johnnie just why he thought we had a Beaver family, the both of us got together to figure out its true value. I for one came to the definite conclusion that it was a sort of catch-all for any and everything about Oregon State that would be of interest, but wouldn't fit any other place special. So, what you find here is that. Mostly it's just a letter from the editor to you fellow Oregon Staters. I trust you will approve.

All over the country people seem to be worrying about having a roof over their respective heads. OSC is no different. To ease the present women's housing situation, the state board at its December meeting approved plans for a new women's dormitory at OSC and specified that bids would be opened January 22.

In case you are wondering who the two handsome gentlemen on the cover are, we'd better give you the names. To your left is Colonel Maylon B. Scott; on the right, Lieutenant Colonel Glen M. Webster. The story on these two appears later in this issue.

Many Alums will remember Dr. B. T. Simms, who for 25 years was head of the veterinary medicine department. He has recently been named chief of the bureau of animal industry at Washington, D. C. Simms left here in 1938 to direct the federal regional disease laboratory in Auburn, Alabama.

In looking through the pages of this issue, we hope you will notice a small announcement concerning season tickets for basketball games. We're sorry, but there "ain't" any. We wish we could offer you nice seats in a new modern basketball pavilion seating some 10,000 persons, but since we haven't this, we have to give the students first choice.

Kiyoshi Yumibe, a Hood River American-born Japanese, was recently commended by the 10th United States corps headquarters at Mindanao, Philippines, for his translation of captured enemy documents. Oregon Staters may remember Yumibe as a dairy husbandry major, who worked in the dairy department while in college.

Johnnie has stressed in his greeting to you that we would like to hear from you especially. I know that there are a lot of you who have settled down to pretty steady jobs or who are raising families and think you have little time or little news to write of yourselves. But stop a minute. As you read these pages and catch a glimpse of a name you'd almost forgotten, don't you begin to think back to old times. Well, then, why not let us know about yourself so that some of your friends will have some fun remembering the good ol' days?

General engineering students will be happy to hear that G. W. Holcomb, professor in engineering, has been awarded a wartime service certificate from the state division of vocational education for his service on the state advisory committee for war training programs.

The appointment of Delbert Moore, professor of music and conductor of the symphony orchestra since 1935, to replace H. L. "Cap'n" Beard was announced early in the term. Beard is retiring because of illness, but will continue to teach classes in mathematics.

After much juggling and rewriting of stories we are finally able to tell you the honest truth about what's doin' with the navy at Oregon State. Seems that originally orders from headquarters terminated the V-12 training on the campus one term earlier . . . the end of winter term. Then just a few days ago word was received that money had been allotted to complete the originally contracted period. None of this, however, affected the naval reserve officers' training program on the campus. Details for the NROTC program have not as yet been announced, but Captain J. J. Carey, professor of naval science and tactics, will remain on duty to establish the civilian program.

Service Awards Given Oregon State Men

Several more former Oregon Staters have received commendations from the armed services for outstanding service. Among those listed is Lt. Col. Donald E. Johnson, '37, who was awarded a bronze star for outstanding work in the intelligence staff in the mid-Pacific area.

Master Sgt. Chester D. Hole, '38, received the medal for meritorious service in connection with military operations against the enemy. He was assigned to the staff engineering section of the 20th air force at Guam.

A bronze star medal for meritorious service with the 12th Armored division, Seventh army, in Germany was awarded to Lieutenant Edward Doyle Smith, '40.

A second Silver Star has been awarded Captain Robert E. Phelps, '40, for gallantry in action against the Japanese near Mount Baytangan, Luzon, Philippines on May 24, 1945. His first award was for gallantry in action in February of this year.

First Lt. Robert E. Kyle, '41, one of 16 allied airmen decorated with Belgian wings by that government in appreciation of services, also wears two oak leaf clusters, a purple heart, the presidential unit citation, five battle stars and two invasion arrowheads on his overseas ribbons.

The distinguished flying cross and air medal with three oak leaf clusters has been posthumously awarded to First Lt. Rhea N. King, '41. His wife received the awards at a ceremony held at the Portland army base.

Captain Walter B. Hinkle, '42, has received a letter of commendation "for outstanding and meritorious service with the Chinese combat command." His wife, Elizabeth Anne Simpkin, '42, is living in Oakland at present.

Fenner Takes Alumni Job

John B. Fenner, '40, has been appointed manager of the Oregon State college alumni association to replace Warren A. Reid, who recently resigned after returning from service in the navy, to accept a position with the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York in Portland.

Fenner, a major in the army, is now on terminal leave after five years during which time he acquired an extensive war record at Casablanca, Tunisia, Sicily, Salerno, Anzio and in France, Germany and Austria. Entering the service as a second lieutenant in December, 1940, shortly after his graduation, Fenner started as a platoon leader in a rifle company in the 15th infantry, Third Division.

Later he became attached to the French forces to instruct them in American methods of supply. He was then selected by Eisenhower's headquarters for liaison with the French.

While in school Fenner was active in college work, being manager of the Beaver, affiliated with Blue Key, senior men's honor society; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, social fraternity; Sigma Delta Psi, athletic honor fraternity; and Alpha Delta Sigma, advertising honor society.

Following graduation until the time of his induction he served as a salesman for James, Kern & Abbott, Portland printers.

Fenner married Dorothy Harstad, '39, on October 12, 1940, in Milton Freewater. At the time he went overseas with the army, she enlisted in the WAC's and trained at Fort Des Moines and Oglethorpe. She was a sergeant with the signal corps intelligence at the time of her discharge on October 12, 1945.

Miss Eunice Courtright, '25, has been acting manager of the Alumni association since 1942 when Reid left to enter the navy. She first worked in the alumni office in 1925, becoming records clerk in 1935. She recently resigned her position with the association to become a representative of the Equitable Life Assurance society of the United States in Corvallis.

Seating Capacity Limited

No reserved seats will be sold at Oregon State's home conference basketball game this winter, Athletic Director Percy P. Lacey has announced. This move is necessary to protect the students who are entitled to admission to all athletic contests on the campus. Over 3000 students were enrolled in school fall term and a substantial increase is expected winter term. The men's gymnasium seats only 2400. Students will be given until 7:30 to get seats. Any seats left after 7:30 will be sold as general admission until the capacity of the gym is reached. All conference games will start at 8 o'clock.

FOR DECEMBER

Eunice explains a few details to Johnnie.

Died in Service and Missing in Action

FELDMAN—Master Sergeant Daniel Feldman, '45, died in an army hospital at Naples, October 23 from hepatitis, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Feldman, 3425 Southeast Lincoln street, Portland. Other survivor is his sister, Mrs. Velda Schar, Portland.

Suffering from pneumonia and Malta fever, Sgt. Feldman was hospitalized at the beginning of the Po valley campaign last spring. He was discharged from the hospital in May and transferred from the 10th mountain division to the 178th field artillery battalion.

CLOAKE—Major Wallace Cloake, '40, is still missing in action, first reported September 18, 1943, when he was a pilot in the famed Marine squadron, the "Hell Hawks" of the Guadalcanal campaign. He was last reported over Vella La Vella, Solomon Islands.

Information came from his mother, Mrs. E. G. Cloake, Route 2, Box 193, Roseburg.

TUTTLE—Lt. Hubbard Tuttle, '37, died in San Diego November 13 after several months illness. Lt. Tuttle was a former Corvallis high school coach and was an outstanding basketball player at Oregon State from 1935 to 1937. He left Corvallis in 1940 to enter the navy air corps in which he had served until his death. He had been awarded the Air Medal.

VAN CLEVE—Lt. David Van Cleve, '44, was killed in a plane crash in Hondo, Texas, October 19. Lt. Van Cleve is survived by his widow, the former Esther Lockren, '41, and a daughter, Trudi Jo, born November 27, 1945.

NICOLEN—Lt. Dwight Nicolen, '43, husband of Mrs. Margaret Twining Nicolen, 2600 San Marcos Drive, Pasadena, Calif., died October 15 on Leyte, P. I., presumably as the result of an airplane accident.

Lieutenant Nicolen entered the service two and a half years ago and received his commission at Ft. Sill, Okla., in December, 1943. He served at Ft. Sill, Camp Roberts and Camp Bowie before going overseas last January. He was serving with the 426th Armored Field Artillery battalion.

Surviving besides his widow is his five-months-old daughter Beatrice whom he had never seen; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Nicolen, Pasadena.

CLINTON—Lt. (jg) Leland Jack Clinton, '41, lost his life July 30, 1945, while in service on the cruiser, Indianapolis, according to his father, Theodore L. Clinton, McKinley Route, Coquille. Further information is not available at the moment.

Lieutenant Clinton was a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon social fraternity.

KENNEDY—S/Sgt. Robert William Kennedy, '45, was killed in action near Ommersheim, Germany, March 20, 1945, and buried in the U. S. Military cemetery at St. Avoird, France, according to information received from his mother, Mrs. R. B. Kennedy, 513 Kendrick avenue, Glendive, Mont.

Strand Offers Thanks To Two Woman Editors Of Oregon State Yank

"If OSC had a decoration for merit and distinguished service, I'm sure the first two would go to the publishers of Oregon State Yank. For the administration of the institution I extend our hearty thanks for a job well done."

These are the words of President A. L. Strand as he congratulated Elaine Kollins Sewell and Jane Steagall, '41, who have just edited the final issue of Oregon State's wartime publication.

The history of the Oregon State Yank magazine is one of a battle of supply's attempt to meet demand. Originating as a Christmas greeting to some 1200 OSC men overseas, the first sheet contained just four pages off-set with news of Beavers in the service and stories of college activities and sports gossip. Financed entirely by the two women, the first issue was to be their gift to their friends in the service. However, the thanks received through letters from those men who received the first edition and the enclosed checks which asked for more issues, proved to the two editors that another edition should be attempted.

The story continues from there with a record of additions of pages and an ever-increasing mailing list. By the time of the first anniversary issue in November of 1944, the mailing list had reached 2500 and the paper now contained 16 pages. A new feature was added in this issue. "So Proudly We Hail," a page which devoted itself to those Oregon Staters who had given their lives for their country.

Unique in its manner of publication, The Oregon State Yank had no editorial offices, advertisers, staff meetings, style sheets or salaried employees. Jane Steagall, who was employed as assistant advertising manager at Lipman Wolfe in Portland, handled the printing problems while Elaine Sewell, in her home in Wichita, Kansas, kept an accurate mailing list and handled the addressing of all copies.

Servicemen were not the only ones who donated generously to the continued publication of the Yank. Bob Robinson, '32, of the Robinson Morris Engravers in Portland, donated all cuts that appeared in the issues. Oregon State college students gave all receipts from activities during a Yank Weekend on the campus in February 1944. Many friends of the college and former students also gave donations to help the two women defray the expenses of the publication.

Typical of the comments from servicemen who received this representative of Oregon State, is this quotation from a letter written by an army lieutenant in the European theater.

"I just got a smell of new mown grass from Oregon State campus and met a lot of swell fellows I used to know. It all came from a paper called the Oregon State Yank."

Selected by CBS to introduce the surrender broadcast aboard the USS Missouri, Webley Edwards, '27 in commerce, returned recently to OSC to address a student convocation. Edwards was CBS commentator at Admiral Nimitz' headquarters at the beginning of the war, going with Nimitz to Guam when he was transferred from his base at Honolulu. In April of this year he represented CBS at the United Nations conference in San Francisco.

ELAINE

"Elaine the fair, Elaine the lovable, Elaine the lily maid"—How wondrous well
The modern maid 'tis our delight to know.
Black hair, blue eyes—as blue as Galilee—
And smiles as sparkling as a sun-drenched sea.

And if she will, how she can use those eyes
And flash those smiles to win a glad surprise.

Her speech is gentle, yet so eloquent
It grips the heart with utter ravishment
And thus refreshes any current theme
She broaches as the essence of her dream.

At college, students, she was bright and keen,

In journalism quite the shining queen,
Acquiring trophies coveted by all
For tasks of first importance, great and small.

A Kappa and a Theta Sigma Phi,
Her scholarship in any field was high,
While in activities her charm and zeal
Gave her accented popular appeal.
The Beaver and Barometer were two Chief projects that she helped to carry through,

Each serving as a proving ground to train
Her skillful hand and eke her fertile brain,
And thus equip her for the tasks of life
As civic leader and home-making wife.

For note, betimes, a student engineer
Whose orb revolved within her special sphere

Oregon Staters On Staff Of Research Laboratory

Working to discover countermeasures to render the enemy's radar equipment useless, thus saving many American lives, many former Oregon State students and professors have been members of the staff of the Office of Scientific Research and Development Radio Research laboratory at Harvard University.

Jack Carter Riley, '43 in EE, was associated with the test and standards division at the radio research laboratory and is now an engineer at Air Technical service command. He served with the RR1 from June 1943 until October of '45.

Robert Albert Bruns, '42, formerly an instructor in electrical engineering at Oregon State, was a member of a research group at RR1 which developed test instrument and special devices. He is now radio engineer for the U. S. navy radio and sound laboratory, San Diego, California.

William Herbert Huggins, '41 in EE, did essential development work on radar search receivers and jamming transmitter components at the RR1 from April 1944 until December of '45.

Working on research and development of radar search receivers for RR1, Sam V. Griffin, '43, will now be associated with the Naval Research and Sound Laboratory at San Diego.

Now a student at Oregon State, Glendon R. Bridgeford, '43, was associated with a group at RR1 responsible for the development of jamming transmitters.

John Joseph Wittkopf, '43, was with the group at RR1 which put RCm equipments into practical operation in the field. For six months he was attached to the 20th Bomber Command, as a technical observer in the CBI theater.

Found her attractions always so intense,
His ardent passion growing so immense,
He thought the wisest thing that could be done

Would be to join their orbits into one;
This course agreeing also with her view,
She's Mrs. Sewell now to me and you.

Promoter and co-editor of "YANK,"
Enlisted Beavers of whatever rank
She chronicles each quarter in the news
With their achievements in campaign and cruise,

Recording honors won, or records made,
And, with regret, "the last full measure"
paid,
A history of persons and of deeds
That every Beaver prizes as he reads,
Aware that this contemporary sheet
Will prove a future source-book hard to beat.

'Tis thus her versatility achieves
A vision rich with golden harvest sheaves,
A glimpse along the colonnade of time
Revealing golden carillons that chime.

Maylon Scott Replaces Webster as Commandant

Lt. Col. Glen M. Webster has been succeeded as Commandant of Oregon State college's ROTC unit and SCU 3900 by Col. Maylon Scott, a graduate of Oregon State with a brilliant military career.

Webster, who reported to Fort Lewis separation center in late November, will return to his reserve officer status and with his family will move to Pasadena, California, where he will resume his work as an executive of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

Colonel Scott, who has just returned to the States after more than two years in the Pacific, participated in action against the enemy on Attu, Kiska, Bougainville, Saipan and Iwo Jima.

Oregon Staters of past years will be familiar with Scott for on two previous occasions he was assigned to ROTC duty here. On his first assignment as a lieutenant in 1919 he met and married Stephanie Strain, '20. Then in 1928 at the time of his reassignment to Oregon State, he took college work and at the end of four years study qualified for a degree with a major in military science.

The Scotts have three children, two boys who graduated from the United States Naval academy and who are now on duty with the fleet, and a daughter, Sylvia Ann, a freshman at the University of Oregon, where the family has been residing while the Colonel was in the Pacific.

At the time of Pearl Harbor, Col. Scott was in charge of the personnel section of the Fourth army under General DeWitt in the Western Defense command. In October, 1943, he took over duties as Deputy Chief of Staff of the Fourth army, and in March, 1944, became Deputy Chief of Staff for General Millard Harmon, commanding general of the South Pacific area.

In August, 1944, following the reorganization of the South Pacific area, he assumed the duties of deputy commander of the South Pacific Base command with headquarters on New Caledonia. He remained there until January, 1945, when he was assigned to duty as Chief of Staff of Iwo Jima Task force. After hostilities ended in the Pacific, he was assigned as commanding officer of the personnel center on Saipan, first personnel center established in the West Pacific where high-point men were assembled for return to the U. S. for discharge.

Col. Scott received the Legion of Merit for work at Attu and Kiska. The citation stated that the outcome of operations on those islands was due in a large part to his outstanding service in procuring adequate shipping, distribution and loading supplies and equipment for the task forces engaged in those missions. Scott also holds the Bronze Medal with two oak leaf clusters.

Col. Webster's career as commandant of Oregon State college has been very successful as evidenced by the fact that advanced ASTudents have been retained on Oregon State campus longer than in any other unit of the Ninth Service command. Webster was on the campus at the time the AST unit was activated in March, 1943.

Two advanced ROTC men prepare a bridge for demolition during training for commissions in the Engineers.

29 Pre-fabricated Houses Brought from Richland

Twenty-nine pre-fabricated houses brought from Richland, Washington, center of the atomic bomb project, will be ready for occupancy by veterans and families the latter part of January here on the campus. The first of these will be occupied by January 10.

These houses are the first of several the campus hopes to secure to ease the housing situation for college students. They are being placed in lots south of the Poultry building after having been transported in two sections from Richland. The houses are equipped with all furnishings except personal belongings such as kitchenware, bedding and linens. There are twenty-one one-bedroom houses, seven three-bedroom houses, and two two-bedroom houses.

At present the houses are being connected with sewers, electricity, and water although as yet no walks or formal grounds have been set up; however, as soon as the entire group arrives and is installed, the landscaping will be done.

Further plans to aid the college housing situation as explained by E. B. Lemon, dean of administration, includes for next year similar housing units which will house about 500 men. These houses will be made into bedroom accommodations set around a central cafeteria, and will be operated under a dormitory plan similar to that now used on the campus.

Orange Hoop Prospects Bright For Official Conference Opener

By Irwin Harris, Director
Athletic News Bureau

It's hardly news any more to say that Oregon State will have a strong basketball team. For only once in 17 years has a Slat Gill coached Orange hoop quintet finished in the cellar of the Northern division, one of the toughest basketball circuits in the nation. Year after year the Beavers are powerful contenders for the division championship and this coming season promises to be no exception.

Back from last year's potent Beaver club that lost its first three league games and then came back to stay in the running for the pennant until the final clash of the campaign are six lettermen. These six men played a leading role in bringing the Orange 10 conference victories against only six losses.

Returning lettermen are Ted Henningsen, 6 foot, 6 inch forward; George Sertic, two-year letter winner and forward; Ephraim "Red" Rocha, 6 foot, 8 inch all-Northern division center as a sophomore last winter; Bernie McGrath, last year's floor captain and one of the best defensive guards in the conference; John Moore, speed merchant guard; and Jack "Howitzer" Simms, long shot specialist. In addition, there are a number of promising newcomers to the squad.

But this is only half the story on the optimistic side of the picture. Four other letterman veterans, two of them first stringers in pre-war years, will become eligible at the start of winter quarter in time to take part in all the conference games. They are Glen Warren, 6 foot, 6 inch two-year letterman forward; Erland "Andy" Anderson, 6 foot, 4 inch center or forward; Larry West, fiery little guard; and Dick Strait, 6 foot, 3 inch forward.

All except Strait received honorable discharges from the services too late to enter school fall term while Strait was ineligible fall term because he slipped up on his scholastic work last spring. Warren and Anderson played first string on the strong 1943 Beaver quintet; West was a starter on last year's club; and Strait saw lots of action as a substitute last season. Warren's height should help considerably under the backboards.

Two outstanding prospects with no previous college experience also become eligible the first of the year. They are Ron Esping and Cliff Crandall, a pair of 6 foot, 2 inch guards. Esping has been in school fall term but dropped a course, leaving him with too few credits to be eligible for intercollegiate athletics. Esping won all-city honors under George Hibbard at Jefferson high of Portland last season. He is a good ball handler and shows promise of developing into a dead-eye shot.

Crandall is the most recent of a long line of A-1 brand hoop products from Astoria high school. He won all-state honors while playing for the Fishermen before entering the service. Although he enrolled at Oregon State in the fall of 1943, Uncle Sam plucked him off before the basketball season rolled around. Now he is ready to fire at baskets again and has a good chance of breaking into the starting lineup. A fine shot, he also is a good ball handler and defensive man.

Promising newcomers who have seen a great deal of action in the pre-season contests include Jerry Krafve, freshman from Washington high of Portland; Charles "Ole" Johnson, discharged air corps veteran from Newberg and a forward; Jaisohn Hyun, 5 foot, 6 inches speedster from the navy R.O.T.C. ranks; John "Red" Kane, marine veteran and transfer from San Mateo, Cal., junior college; and Chuck Urness, left hander from Jefferson high of Portland.

Krafve, who twice won all-state honors in high school, is rated a great prospect by Gill and has been a regular starter in practice games. He is 6 feet, 3 inches tall and has the natural ability to become an outstanding college player. Kane also has worked into the starting five. He is a clever ball handler and a good shot.

Other consistent starters have been Henningsen, forward; Rocha, center; and Mc-Grath, guard. The Orangemen won three out of their first four warm-up games, beating Seattle coast guard 39-37 and 49-31 and Fee's Rollerdrome of Portland, 51-50, while losing only to Northwest Insulators of Portland, 38-35. Rocha poured in 47 points in the four games while Henningsen was right on his heels with 46. McGrath and Krafve each racked up 25.

Highlight of the pre-season campaign is the Beavers' first eastern road trip since the 1943 season. Coach Gill, Manager Al Peters and 10 players left Portland on the streamliner City of Portland on Wednesday, December 19. First stop was to be in Chicago where Oregon State plays De Paul university, one of the top hoop outfits in the nation. On Christmas night Gill's men take on City College of New York in Madison Square Garden. Final game on the tour will be against the University of Nebraska at Lincoln, December 29.

The Beavers open their conference schedule against Idaho at Corvallis on January 4 and 5. Following the Idaho series, Gill's men play three games in a row against arch rival Oregon, two of which are slated for Eugene.

Gill expects a close conference race with all five members in the running. Oregon, with nine lettermen back from last year's championship team, will be the favorite. If Washington State gets Gale Bishop, one of the best hoopsters in the nation, the Cougars probably will slide ahead of the Webfoots as the favored club.

"Big Jim" Dixon Returns To Campus After 3 Years

A giant figure of a man returned to the OSC campus a couple of months ago, and some members of the Oregon State student body still stare and wonder who he is.

It's understandable, for "big Jim" Dixon hasn't been around for over three years, and many OSC freshmen were 14 years old when he first entered the Navy in June of 1942. In fact, these same freshmen were yet to be born when Jim first became an assistant Beaver coach in 1927.

The oldtimers remember Dixon, though. He was an all-coast and all-American tackle for Oregon State, and opposing coaches can't forget what Dixon-coached Beaver forward walls have done to them in past seasons. Jim was discharged in time for the Staters' last four football games, and was a welcome addition to the coaching staff.

Starting as a full lieutenant, Dixon's first Navy assignment was at St. Mary's pre-flight, where he taught hand-to-hand tactics to future Naval aviators. Then, in December of 1944, he was sent to Alameda for a month's training in gunnery and aviation operations preparatory to combat service. From there he went to the South Pacific—where he served as executive officer with a service outfit for land-based Navy aircraft.

Later big Jim was promoted to Lieutenant Commander and made the commanding officer of Acorn 25. He stayed with this outfit until it was decommissioned in April 1945, when he returned to the states and the teaching of commando tactics—this time at Georgia pre-flight.

Oregon Staters Return For 1945 Homecoming

Many of you Oregon Staters who weren't able to come back for Homecoming this year may have wondered just who was around from the old crowd. The best way we can let you know is to print the names of those who came into the office and signed the alumni register. We are sorry if not all of you have been listed, but perhaps you didn't happen to stop by in the mad rush after the game.

YOU, TOO?

"Been going to write you for a long time, but . . .

You, too? This busy Christmas season is surely a fine time to make one note do the work of many. We're all interested in what you're doing and who you've seen recently. We do appreciate your checks, but like that ancient Phoenician philosopher ungrammatically expostulated, "Money Ain't Everythin'." So won't you take five minutes right now and send us some news?

'Pure Oil News' Carries Story On Kenneth Covell

An account of the engineering career and accomplishments of Kenneth Covell, '24, appeared in the September issue of Pure Oil News and his picture was featured on its cover. Quoting from The News:

"Kenneth A. Covell, chief production engineer of The Pure Oil company, has passed through the several stages over twenty years which qualify him for his job. First, he attended Oregon State college where he was graduated in mechanical engineering. His first job was with Cities Service Oil company—a 'junior engineer.' His early experience included cleaning tanks, roustabouting and working on a standard tool clean out machine in the Electra, Texas, field. Pipe line construction and production engineering in the Seminole field followed for the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil company, a Cities Service subsidiary. Six years as chief production engineer for that company followed.

"In November, 1932, Mr. Covell came to Pure Oil, and he spent three years in the Chicago office on production engineering work. He went to Tulsa as division production engineer and to the Fort Worth division on a like assignment. Ten more years were used on these two jobs. On

New Weekly Program, 'Campus Headlines' Aired Over KEX-KOAC Hookup

Oregon Staters will be interested in a new weekly radio program, Campus Headlines, which is being presented alternately by the University of Oregon and Oregon State college over stations KOAC and KEX in a simultaneous broadcast.

This program, an entirely new feature, is carried over the two stations every Wednesday night from 9:05 to 9:30 with the first program being broadcast from the University on November 28. The broadcast originates in the KOAC studios on either campus and is carried by direct wire to the KEX transmitter in Portland, making it possible for more persons in that locality and throughout the state to listen.

When this type of program was first being considered by KEX, it sent to the campuses officials to meet with administrative members and students to discuss problems and arrangements. The initial programs were broadcast direct from KOAC with no wire connection with the Portland station. This made it possible for KEX staff members to listen in and for program directors and students to work out details of script, mechanics and direction.

"Campus Headlines" is considered a sustaining program broadcast for the purpose of acquainting citizens of the state with college activities. Emphasis will be placed on college activities and life in keeping with the typical dignity of each institution. Student musical and dramatic talent will be employed.

Opening theme used by the Oregon State college group was "Christmas at the Naval Hospital," featuring the Euterpe Singers under the direction of Professor Paul Petri. The program format in each case carries the college song of each institution followed by college headlines from the Barometer or Emerald paper. After the brief summary of news flashes, one specific item is dramatized as the remainder of the program.

Allan Miller, program director for KOAC, takes final charge of the show with the staff of KEX supervising the script writing and the speech department at Oregon State aiding in the final polishing.

Called by Death

Jensen Dies of Heart Attack After 38 Years of Service

W. A. Jensen, executive secretary of Oregon State college for a third of a century and a member of the college staff for 38 years, died at his home in Corvallis, Oregon, Monday night, December 10. His death was the result of a heart attack.

He had not been active in college administrative affairs since 1940 when he first suffered a heart attack, but he maintained his interest in campus activities and was completing a history of the college during World War I at the time of his death.

Mr. Jensen was brought to Oregon State college in 1907 by Dr. William J. Kerr, in Dr. Kerr's first year as president of the college. He served as Dr. Kerr's "right hand man" all through the latter's 25-year tenure as president and played an important part in the rise of the college from a school of 700 students to one of the greatest land-grant institutions in the nation.

Before joining the college staff he had been in charge of the secretarial science department at Utah State college, his alma mater, for three years. He also had worked for a steel company in Chicago and an oil company in California previously.

During the 33 years that he served as executive secretary, Mr. Jensen became better acquainted than perhaps anyone on the staff with the history, traditions, administrative organization and personnel of the college and visitors frequently were amazed at the store of knowledge he had about the institution and its fundamental mission.

The college itself recognized his administrative efficiency in 1932 when it conferred an honorary master of science degree on him as a "master of administrative technique and educational efficiency."

He was born December 3, 1881, at Hyde Park, Utah. He was active in the Masonic lodge here and was a member of the Knights Templar and Al Kader Temple of the Shrine. He was also a member of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society, Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity, the Presbyterian church and the Corvallis Rotary club.

He leaves a daughter, Miss Frances Jensen, at home; two brothers, Martin H. Jensen of Helena, Mont., and Moses Jensen of Hyde Park, Utah; and two sisters, Mrs. Stensa Jensen Crannery of Newport Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Sylvia Jensen Compson of Los Angeles.

For many years the Jensen home, first on Arnold Way and later on 31st street before the illness of Mr. Jensen and the death of Mrs. Jensen in July, 1944, was one of the distinctive social centers of Corvallis. Friends of Mr. Jensen ascribed his success to his habit of persistent unruffled industry, his unbiased judgment, his sympathetic but accurate estimate of values and of people and his understanding through long and intimate association of the administrative policies of the college.

His loyalty to the college and his associates was indicated more than 10 years ago when on one occasion he said: "Educational institutions with such a background of service as Oregon State never go backward. They always progress. This college will go on fulfilling its function as defined by the federal and state enabling acts that provided for its establishment and maintenance. May we all, students, faculty, alumni and friends, do our part to contribute to that dignity, greatness and peace which this college so much deserves and desires."

January 1, 1945, he began his latest assignment as chief production engineer for the company.

"Since his new job was announced, he has disposed of his Ft. Worth home and has acquired a place in which to live in the vicinity of Chicago—no small accomplishment these days. At last he is located in Winnetka, 510 Ash street, where he, Mrs. Covell, Tommy and Dottie reside. The oldest son, Kenneth, is with a navy training unit at Ames, Iowa."

Flashbacks for Fall Term Show Campus Highlighted By Diverse Activities

With the pending close of the fall term at Oregon State a slight review of campus activities might not be out of order. So here's a quick resume of Barometer headlines of the past term.

FLO SIMS WINS BOND CONTEST

OSC students purchased $103,710.45 in bonds in the Eighth Victory bond drive while faculty members added $97,076.25 to the campus total. Queen title went to Flo Sims, senior in business and industry and candidate of the Kappa Kappa Gamma house. Miss Sims will represent Benton county in the state-wide contest for Victory Queen.

TODD DUNCAN BOOKED TO SING CONCERT MONDAY

The final concert artist for the fall term will be Negro baritone, Todd Duncan, whose musical program features works of Handel, Brahms and Schubert.

1944-45 BEAVER RATED HIGHEST 'ALL-AMERICAN'

Oregon State Beaver for 1944-45 received All-American rating, according to information received this week by Marion Kierzek, last year's Beaver editor.

PLACARD ANNOUNCES CARD-PLAYING BAN

Eiler's, famous OSC eating place in the Memorial Union, brought forth a ban on the card-playing epidemic which has raged through OSC this fall. Students, not easily discouraged, now have migrated to the M.U. lounge with their bridge games.

MRS. SEWELL YANK EDITOR AT SILVER TEA

Members of Theta Sigma Phi gave a tea honoring the two editors of the OREGON STATE "Yank" magazine, Jane Steagall, '41, and Elaine Kollins Sewell, '41. Donations of silver were used to defray the final expenses of the publication.

SIGMA CHI'S TO OPEN HOUSE WINTER TERM

Sigma Chi members have given notice to the college of intention of opening their fraternity house winter term for use by members and pledges. Until this time, the house has been used as a war-time housing unit for co-eds. Sigma Chi is the only additional fraternity to open its house this term.

'SNAFU' CAST COMPLETES PLANS FOR PRODUCTION

"Snafu," a comedy popular in professional circles this year, is the play scheduled to be presented by the speech department as its major production for this term. E. S. Courtwright will direct the performance.

Johnston Memorial Stadium Erected By the 84th Division

Johnston Stadium, first memorial erected by the 84th Division in Germany, was dedicated to the memory of Major James V. "Jimmy" Johnston, '39, firey little commanding officer of the Second Battalion, 334th Infantry, who died in action leading his men to victory in Germany.

In April's issue of the Oregon Stater, Major Johnston was mentioned in connection with AP war correspondent Wes Gallagher's account of his death. Gallagher wrote that in a few weeks Jimmy had become a legend with the 84th infantry division. Johnston always carried a .45, a German P-38 on his shoulder and a Springfield rifle. He died in one of the division's last battles before reaching the Rhine.

While the late Major Johnston's men stood at attention during the memorial service, a bugler blew to the colors and the flag was raised. Major General A. R. Bolling called the men around him and told them of Johnston's gallantry.

"It was Major Johnston who led the Second Battalion in the Division's first night attack near Geilenkirchen. Everyone thought it was impossible, but he did it and the mission was a success."

Advanced ROTC Course Will Be Reactivated At OSC First of Winter Term

The advanced course in ROTC will be reactivated at Oregon State college the beginning of winter term with a quota that is second largest to any on the west coast, according to word received by Colonel Maylon E. Scott, commandant at Oregon State. The University of California is the only institution having a higher quota in this command.

Those eligible for the advanced course must be those students having completed two years of basic ROTC training, those previously enrolled in advanced ROTC or those returning veterans having not less than a year of active service. They must have two academic years to complete towards graduation or a similar period in which to complete work for a graduate degree.

Reserve commissions in either field artillery, infantry or engineer units are available on completion of this training.

The allowances for men in advanced ROTC has been increased considerably over that of pre-war years. Sixty-five cents a day or $19.59 a month is allotted in addition to officer-type uniforms, field overcoats and shoes, which may be kept during the training period.

Those selected for enrollment will be civilians not less than 19 or more than 26 years of age, who are physically qualified for reserve officers commission and who have a minimum AGCT score of 110. Returning veterans will receive ROTC allotments in addition to benefits authorized under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

SCU TO END DECEMBER 31

Complete curtailment of the army specialized training program at Oregon State college will take place on the 31st of this month when the remaining 290 men will be disbanded. Those students under 17 years of age will be sent to the University of Utah to complete their college training while the others become a part of the Ninth Service command.

A Clean Slate, Please

We are new. We'd certainly appreciate starting out with a clean slate. If we owe any of you anything, if we have any type of unfinished business whatsoever, we are very anxious to clear it up right away so that we may get off to a fine start. So will you be a little patient with us and drop us a note telling us just what is unfinished between us.

Air Force Rates OSC High for ROTC Program

Indicating the possibility of a third training program for reserve officers to be established on this campus, the United States air force has rated Oregon State college among the highest ranking institutions for acceptability in establishing such a program.

President A. L. Strand received notification of OSC's rating from Lt. Col. Bryson R. Bailey, chief of Area IX, comprising states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada and Utah, early in December. This selection followed the inspection of campus facilities and nearby air fields by a team of men including Colonel Bailey.

If such a reserve program is established on the campus, students accepted in the air force ROTC would receive flight training and reserve commissions in the air corps at the end of their college work.

The other two programs for training of reserve officers now in existence at Oregon State are the regular ROTC program with its units in infantry, artillery and engineers long existant on this campus and the newly established Naval ROTC, just organized on this campus last fall.

B. F. Ruffner, professor of aeronautical engineering, will organize the flight training program to begin at OSC in April.

Flight Training Program Scheduled for OSC in April

In its December meeting the state board of higher education approved a new flight training program at Oregon State. This program will get under way about April 1 provided the Corvallis airport is available at that time, according to B. F. Ruffner, professor of aeronautical engineering.

Actual flight training will be given by a private flying school operator, who will be contracted for the job, while courses already included in the engineering curriculum will be used for the ground work, Ruffner said.

The Corvallis airport which is about three miles south of the city limits was recently declared surplus by the army. Because of its proximity, it will provide an ideal arrangement for the training course, Ruffner believes.

According to present plans as many as 200 students will be taken care of in the course which will consist of three terms of training with one lecture a week, one hour of laboratory work and one hour of flying. Both men and women who pass a physical examination required for private pilots will be eligible to enter the program.

Fees for the course as approved by the state board are $80 a term. The flying operator is expected to provide the planes for the training.

For heroic action in connection with military operations against the enemy on April 11, 1945, in Germany, First Lt. Richard C. Lind, '43, was presented the Bronze Star Medal.

The distinguished flying cross and the air medal with four oak leaf clusters was awarded posthumously to First Lt. Keith S. Shepherd, '44. The air medal has been awarded to First Lt. Jack L. Detour, '46.

Do You Understand What's Behind Organization of Alumni Association

There's lots being done by your alumni association, but frankly, before I started working for you as alumni manager I was somewhat hazy about the whole alumni set-up. I have sensed from talking to Staters who have dropped into the office that some of you don't completely understand the association either. So let's take five minutes (three minutes actual reading time) and study this organization of ours.

Our alumni association is composed of men and women who have gone to Oregon State college for varying lengths of time, gained some knowledge, made lots of friends and absorbed that intangible Oregon State spirit. As an association we boost Oregon State and the cause of higher education and we render service by making it easier for all alumni to maintain contact with the college and Stater friends. Speaking frankly, here are two more practical benefits. First, as you help boost Oregon State up the educational ladder, you are also boosting the prestige of your education gained here. Secondly, maintaining these contacts may prove of immense value to you, not only socially, but you want to remember that Oregon Staters like to do business with Oregon Staters.

Boosting Oregon State and furthering the cause of higher education may best be accomplished by extending the influence of our association through personal contact. This means selling Oregon State. Selling Oregon State to prospective students, selling Oregon State to the legislature, selling to all whose friendly interest will help Oregon State. This includes re-selling the people of Oregon on the fact that Oregon State belongs to them. It exists to serve them by competently educating their children and by aiding them through practical experimentation and help in developing Oregon agriculture and industry. Who should do this selling? All of us Staters. I don't mean the door-to-door style campaigning, but each of us should be constantly on the alert to put in a plug for our college. Maybe you have Stater friends who are not members of the alumni association. If you do not care to discuss the association with them but feel that they might be interested, drop us a note and our office will send them a few copies of THE OREGON STATER and give them a chance to look us over. As your manager I am charged with doing a major part of the personal contacting for the association. With the amount of personal contacting that each of you can do in your normal daily activities plus the amount I shall try to do we should be able to adequately cover this important phase.

Now as to our service to each of you. You want to keep in touch with the school and with the friends you made while here. They want to keep in touch with you. The alumni office is our association's communication center and makes this possible. An extensive filing system is maintained in our M.U. office which lists information for each Oregon Stater, such information as address, occupation, guardian, marital status, years attended Oregon State, which school, etc. As you notify us, or we find out from some other source, of changes in the above information, your record is immediately brought up to date. By the way, if you have had changes in any of this information recently, please drop us a line as soon as possible because these records are the official college records. And while you are doing that, slip in a little news of yourself. Your friends are interested.

THE OREGON STATER provides the principal medium for keeping you posted about the college and your friends. It would be fine if there were time enough for all of us to meet for a real visit, but since that is impossible we'll have to get together through the columns of our magazine. You've enjoyed THE OREGON STATER in the past and we have some plans under way now for making it even more interesting. Remember the magazine is yours. It speaks for all of you and to all of you. If you have any ideas regarding its improvement, please let us know.

It is inevitable that the subject of finances should come up—but please relax. Why is it that at the mere mention of money so many alumni freeze up and figure someone is going to high-pressure them? I know why and so do you. It's because in many institutions for higher learning the alumni association has as its principal function the raising of money through alumni donations. Oregon State is lucky. Our association is partially supported through state funds because we maintain official college records. Our other source of income is from yearly dues. Combine these two and there's enough money available to carry on our program. Dues of three dollars yearly (which also guarantee you a yearly subscription to THE OREGON STATER) seem reasonable. If dues of three dollars seem a little steep to a majority of you, we can re-study them—although many of our alumni have asked us why we don't raise them. The answer is simple. We have enough money as long as we can continue to receive your active support. We hope that our program will attract even more Oregon Staters so that we can continue to expand and render additional services to the college and individual alumnus. Value received is a successful motto in business, and there is no reason why it should not be applied to your alumni association.

There we have it. The Oregon State college alumni association is a group of Staters keeping in touch with the college and their college friends, cooperating with one another, and boosting the best interest of Oregon State wherever possible. Our services are accomplished through personal contacts, maintenance of careful records, publication of THE OREGON STATER and the payment of annual dues. These are the normal continuing activities. There are some special ones such as reunions, homecomings, etc., that we shall discuss in later issues.

These are the things I have discovered about our association. To me, they add up to a sensible worthwhile organization. I sincerely hope you come to the same conclusion.

Coleman Goes to Europe As Part of 'Sports Clinic'

Last summer an idea was conceived for a "sports clinic" to help the men in our European occupation forces to readjust themselves to playing, coaching and officiating. Ralph O. Coleman, baseball coach and director of intramural athletics at Oregon State, was one of 15 men from different parts of the United States asked to participate.

On the first of August, "Coley" started on this very interesting 60-day leave from OSC, flying first to New York and then to Paris.

In Paris, headquarters for the clinic were set up, and arrangements made to send clinic men all over the European theater. With parts of the clinic scattered in a dozen different places, 40 man classes were started for the various army groups.

Some of the coaches taught basketball, football and other sports. Coleman's main job was officiating, although he also helped with the clinic administration.

Before shoving off for home the 1st of October, Coley saw quite a bit of the country. In Berlin he witnessed a track meet with the British, Americans and French all competing. In Frankfort he watched Don Findlay, former Oregon State track star, in competition.

Coleman got a big kick out of the flying (the clinic men used c-47's most of the time), but he's glad to be home.

Alumni 'Round the World

The Folks at Home . . .

1906-1910

In early October Mrs. John Allen, wife of the late JOHN F. ALLEN, '95, Corvallis druggist, sold her home on Third street in Corvallis to go to San Francisco to reside near her sons. ARTHUR ALLEN, '22, and JOHN F. ALLEN, JR., '32, are associated with Morgan and Allen, jewelers, of which firm Arthur is treasurer. The latter's daughter, Betty, has registered as a freshman at Oregon State this fall.

Mrs. Allen declares that she will be back in Corvallis for the summer months each year.

A fine letter from CHARLES OSBORNE, '97, general superintendent of the Portland General Electric company, came in a month or so ago and was out of sight when it came to writing news for you "Folks at Home." However, the letter is still timely so we will give it to you, word for word, and hope that more of you will get the idea of helping us fill this column. It's difficult to have a round-the-world beat, to get the news from fifty thousand Oregon Staters scattered hither and yon.

"Sometimes we old timers get pleasure reading about persons who (some years ago) attended the good old college. When reading a recent issue of The Oregon Stater I noticed the name of HENRY DESBOROUGH, '94. I recall in 1898-99 I was in the Klondike and as I was walking along the main street in Dawson I met him. He and I played on the same football team in 1893-94, and, believe me, he was a real football player.

"A few years back I met Pap Hayseed (HARVEY McALISTER, '97). He was also a member of our team. I well remember RALPH TERRELL, '97, and BRADY BURNETT, '93, when Bill Bloss was our coach. He was not only a coach, but he was a real football player.

"I left Oregon in 1898. After a short stay in California, where I purchased five dogs and trained them for several weeks, I left for Alaska to try my luck in the gold fields.

"In 1902 I returned to Portland. In August of that year I started to work for the Portland General Electric company, and here I have been ever since. (At the top, the editor notes.) Many students of Oregon State College have worked for the Portland General Electric company in the past forty years.

"JOE HENKLE, who is now assistant general superintendent, graduated from OSC in 1905. His training while at the college has been a wonderful help in advancing him from helper in the wiring crew to his present position where he is responsible for several hundred employees. Joe is quite a golfer—sometimes. He, with three other older employes, play nine holes of golf three times a week after working hours when the weather will permit.

"PHILIP ALGER, '98, who attended college the same time as the writer, and who was my buddy, died July 25, 1945. His workshop was in the old Mechanical Hall, which has long since been destroyed by fire or torn down. His wife, ELSIE LACY ALGER, '99, still lives at 4133 Southeast 32nd street, Portland."

Why not write something for the next Stater. Just give us the facts and you needn't worry about the journalistic style. We will supply that if necessary.

JAMES D. ZURCHER, '03, was in Portland recently to speak at a luncheon meeting of the Portland Realty board. He is chairman of the people's committee to defend life insurance and savings and is now living in New York city.

Georgia Gray, '45, is now stationed at the United States naval hospital in Shoemaker, California, with the American Red Cross.

RALPH V. WRIGHT, '15, wrote us recently to tell of his new mailing address—Route 1, Box 361, Lafayette, Calif.—and to say that he had been transferred not long ago from the Federal Land bank of Berkeley to the Production Credit corporation to become its regional representative in the six Southern California counties. He says the Farm Credit Administration has a very high standing down that way therefore he very much enjoys working for the organization. His headquarters are still in Berkeley, and his home at Lafayette is not far away.

F. A. MOTZ, '17, agricultural attache with the headquarters forces in Austria, writes from Vienna of his experiences. Arriving in London he was introduced to the V-2 bombs before being ordered to Italy. Then he accompanied the first echelon to Salzburg, Austria, then to Vienna. He has made several trips through Germany and France where he noted particularly the lack of food and fuel in the urban centers.

With a daughter now a sophomore on the Oregon State campus, GEORGE A. "GAP" POWELL, '21, and BERNICE HAINES POWELL, '21, seem to be finding it possible to get to the campus again for Homecomings and other days at which parents are special guests. This year both came from their home at 101 Quincy street, Long Beach, and hope that within another year their son will be out of the service and beginning his sophomore year at Oregon State. Oil business still occupies Gap's attention—he has his own petroleum distributing business at 2545 East 24th street, Los Angeles.

HAROLD CARTER, '21, professor of civil engineering at Utah State college since 1936, resigned his position there this summer in favor of another at the University of Utah, Salt Lake city, and reports that he and Mrs. Carter and their two-year-old son are enjoying their new location. A recent visitor at the Carter home was CARL RODOLF, '21, civil engineer with the Southern Pacific company in San Francisco.

CECILE LOGAN, '23, wife of G. ALLEN BROWN, '23, has notified us of their new home location at 5226 Southeast Ivon street, Portland 6. She is moving their possessions while her husband, general manager of Challenge Creameries, is on a three-weeks trip to Chicago and Washington.

A surprise visitor at the alumni office at Homecoming was MAJOR BERNARD HAFENFELD, '29, former assistant graduate manager at OSC, who had just arrived in the states after 30 months in the Aleutians as a controller. Now he is on his way south to meet his wife, the former Barbara Crozier of Balboa Island, Calif., and to see his son, Richard, 3, who was born several months after Bern went on duty in the Aleutians. For five years prior to entry into the service, Bern was secretary-treasurer of Cortaro Farms Company at Marana, Ariz., just outside of Tucson, a twenty thousand acre irrigated property having cotton as its principal crop, operating its own cotton gins and supplying water and ginning cotton for the neighboring farmers as well. The ranch also supports a large herd of beef cattle as well as other farm projects.

It was a grand surprise for CHARLES FOX, '27, and VIVIAN ORCUTT FOX, '28, Portlanders, to read in the October Oregon Stater that they were parents of "a daughter, Patricia L., born July 11." Fox circulated the facts back to us through friends—that he and Vivian have only one daughter who is now 15 years old. Sorry, folks, there are just too many Charles Fox families in Portland and we thought you had moved to a new location possibly to accommodate the new member of the family. We discussed the situation at the time.

P. H. "Mack" McGAUHEY, '27, head of the civil engineering department at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va., has been serving as General Engineer for the state of Virginia on the design and construction of a sewage disposal plant and water works additions at V. P. I. He is also chairman of the Virginia section of the American Water Works association. Mrs. McGauhey will be remembered as MARGUERITE GEROW, '29.

URAM H. MESSENGER, '26, wrote to tell us that his son, CHARLES H., '49, has entered Oregon State this last fall to major in chemistry. Since Messenger's graduation, he has been 19 years with Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company.

1930-1936

MARSHALL P. WELLES, '30, sends us a letter from North Hills, Pennsylvania, where he moved after having lived in Pasadena, California. He is a doctor. . . . VERDA SHOUTHERN CORNUTT, '33, tells of her husband, CLIFFORD E. CORNUTT, who is a road man for R. M. Wade & Co., farm machinery house. He travels the Willamette Valley and south to the California line. Also the two of them operate their 40-acre farm located 8 miles from Portland near Damascus. They have two daughters, Carolyn, age 6, and Claudia, age 2½.

VERNON ROSEBRAUGH, '38, lieutenant with the Seabees now released, will be assistant engineer in the hydraulics department at Bonneville beginning December 18. His mailing address is 7020 Northeast Everett street, Portland. . . . LT. BERNARD ORELL, '39, '41 Master of Forestry, who has been stationed at Camp Adair a second time, told us at Homecoming that he was ordered to Fort Lewis but hoped it wouldn't be too long until he could be home again and working at his job with the state department of forestry at Salem. He and Mrs. Orell live at 1030 Lefelle street, Salem. . . . J. MELVIN YADON, '40, is glad to be back in Oregon after several years in the 14th Naval district as civilian engineer on loan to the navy by Westinghouse to design all air stations in the district. He saw while in Honolulu and elsewhere several OSC men at advanced bases, in the central Pacific. Until he has returned to employment with Westinghouse, he will receive his mail at 101 Fort Road, Klamath Falls.

MARJORIE FAIRCLO BRISSENDEN, '41, writes to tell us that husband "Bill," '40, assumed command of the Marine detachment at the Naval Repair Base in San Diego after his return in April from Guam, Iwo and other Pacific bases. She also sends news of CAPTAIN VIRGIL KENNEDY, '40, USMCR, and his wife JEAN TOMISON KENNEDY, '42. Kennedy was discharged in September and his new job is assistant extension economist of the University of Idaho. . . . LT. MARGARET REDELINGS, '40, on terminal leave until December, was at March Field for a year after being with the Eighth Air Force in England. She was commanding officer of WAC battalion at March field before she left.

MRS. STANLEY C. ROLFSNESS (MARY MAXINE ALLEN, '36), writes from Bonners Ferry, Idaho, that there will be no need of a service subscription to the OREGON STATER for husband STAN, '37, that he is on his way home after 33 months overseas. . . . AL HUNTER, '40, and wife PHYLLIS FERGUSON, '42, were through. He was just separated from the army and the two are planning to settle in Portland. Also RALPH FLOBERG, '40, with wife came into the office. He, too, is just out of the army and still scouting for a position but hopes to settle in Portland. . . . DICK HIGHLAND, '40, was in the office recently and plans to do graduate work at Oregon State next term.

DOUG HOLE, '38, sends word that he is back in the Northwest again and discharged. In January he will be living in Asotin, Washington, where he will work as Work Unit leader of the Asotin county soil conservation district. . . . Lt. (jg) CARL RAYNAR, '40, writes from his berth on the USS Metcalf that he is now anchored in Tsingtao Harbor, China, and scheduled to remain there until sometime next spring. He told of seeing GUILLERMA PONCE, '39, in Manila last summer. He is with the 1002nd Engineers forestry battalion there. . . . B. A. WEIR, '37, gives us a change of address as he has been moved to the Dibble General hospital at Menlo Park, California, for further surgery. He tells of his brother BILL, '40, who was released from active duty as a captain in October and who is back at the University of Wisconsin where he is working for a doctorate in livestock nutrition.

The Returning Veteran

... PROBLEM OR OPPORTUNITY?

At the rate of more than 150,000 a month, young men from the Armed Services are returning to civilian life. Eventually over 11,000,000 of our nation's finest will be back with us.

Absorbing these men into the economic life of the nation is going to present difficulties. Adjustments and rearrangements will have to be made and help and encouragement offered.

But the problem part of this national readjustment has been over-emphasized . . . The opportunity part has not been emphasized enough! For the returning veteran is the hope of all of us for a better America than we have ever known before. The future of our nation is in his hands.

Experienced beyond his years

His youth, strength and energy, backed up by experience beyond his years; his imagination, initiative and capacity for leadership; his idealism, seasoned by a hard-won grasp of realities, and his common sense—these precious things, as they flow into the stream of our nation's life, hold extraordinary promise.

Consider the impact on our thinking of millions of men like this! Big industrial organizations, small business enterprises, farms, government, the arts and sciences—all will benefit from the return to the home front of these clear-eyed, straight-thinking, vigorous young men—the finest specimens of our entire population.

With these young men of America back with us, establishing families and building homes, we will have little to fear for the American way of life, much to hope for in economic and social progress.

Do you wonder that the returning veteran doesn't want to be treated as a hero? . . . That he doesn't want sentimentality; and, above all, doesn't want to be regarded as a "problem." All he asks is an opportunity to show what he can do. And he is going to get that opportunity!

At Equitable—jobs as good, or better

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States has 2,039 of its employees and agents serving in the Armed Forces. They will return to jobs as good or better than the ones they left. A number already have! Equitable veterans will receive "refresher" courses to bring them up-to-date on the newest developments in life insurance and in Equitable services. More than that, Equitable plans to provide them with opportunities to advance themselves, because we know that by so doing we will help Equitable serve its policyholders and insure continuing progress in broadening the Society's services to the American public.
