First Nation historic site signs put up in Yachats area of Oregon coast

YACHATS, Ore. – The installation of five signs commemorating the history of the First Nation people who lived in the Yachats area is complete, according to View the Future, a forward-looking organization based in Yachats.

VtF raised more than $6,000 in donations and also obtained a grant from the Oregon Community Foundation's Oregon Parks Foundation Fund for the signs.

The last two signs were recently installed on the Amanda Trail, which starts just south of Yachats and connects to the trail to Cape Perpetua. The Ya'Xaik (pronounced Yah' khik, gargled h) people lived in the Yachats area and were related to the Alsi to the north.

Joanne Kittel, chair of View the Future, has researched and written, with Tribal assistance, about the Ya'Xaik people who lived in this area for thousands of years before Europeans arrived.

"Their rich and enduring culture is a testament to their ingenuity, talent and sensitivity to the sustainability of their environment. I hope people will visit the Amanda and Ya'Xaik Trails and learn more about the Ya'Xaik People," said Kittel.

Many of the donations were made in honor of Ben Christensen, a former professor of Spanish literature at the University of California at San Diego who retired in Yachats with his wife, Kathee. Ben was passionately involved in supporting trails in the Yachats area and educating locals and visitors about local First Nation history.

On Aug. 1, 2015, he was working with a crew on the Amanda Trail when he suffered a massive heart attack. Despite the efforts of crew members and EMTs from the Yachats Rural Fire Protection District, Ben died on the trail he so loved. Kathee and their family decided to carry on with the First Nation signs project in Ben's memory.

Five signs were developed and designed through the collaborative efforts of Kittel, who co-authored The Yachats Indians, Origins of the Yachats Name and the Prison Camp Years; Diane Disse, a writer, graphic designer and former educator at the Lincoln County Historical

Restoration

Our 40th Restoration Celebration was one of the best ever! The Tribe and casino staff were assisted by volunteers in decorating, preparation, organizing, making gifts and preparing a great buffet for this grand event.

Everyone enjoyed a wonderful presentation from Mel Tonasket, now retired, who led his Tribe and the National Congress of American Indians for many years. His Tribe, the Colville Tribe in the state of Washington, heartily fought termination when other Tribes were being terminated. A wonderful Tribal leader named Lucy Covington convinced Mel to run for a Tribal Council position to assist her in fighting termination.

Mel captured the audience's attention as he described his experience working for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and other Tribal leaders. He was presented with the Tribe's new 40th Anniversary blanket.

We received a congratulatory letter from John Echohawk, executive director of the Native American Rights Fund, who played an integral part in the Tribe's Restoration. We also received a wonderful letter from Charles Wilkinson that is printed on page 8. Charles wasn't able to be with us this year, but made his presence known by his memorable words.

Christmas and New Year's

We are blessed to be able to celebrate memorable events sponsored by the Tribe. Our thoughts and prayers are with those who are no longer with us, many of whom made the Tribe what it is today.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

Two areas now open for Tribal member firewood cutting

The Natural Resources Department now has two areas open for Tribal member personal use firewood cutting.

The Logsdan Road unit (located just east of Siletz) is open seven days a week. It has a mixture of alder, hemlock and some fir. The Sam Creek #4 unit (9½ miles from Siletz) is open by appointment on weekends only. It has larger fir and spruce on three landings.

Permits are required and can be obtained at the Tribal Natural Resources office in the Tribal admin building in Siletz from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on weekdays. Maps and directions are also available at the same location.

Permits will be issued to Siletz Tribal members only, who will need to show their Tribal ID card and provide the license number of the vehicle they will use to haul the wood. Out-of-the-Siletz-area woodcutters can call the numbers below to have a permit mailed to them.

The permits are for Tribal member woodcutting for personal use only. This firewood cannot be sold. The person named on the permit must be present when cutting and hauling the firewood.

Tribal members wishing to cut wood for Tribal elders must present a signed note from the elder stating that the individual is authorized to cut firewood on their behalf when requesting a permit. The note must include the elder's Tribal ID number.

Permits are good for four weeks and allow up to two cords of wood to be cut on each permit. Each Tribal member is allowed up to five cords total per year from Tribal firewood units.

For more information, stop by the Natural Resources office or call Natural Resources Manager Mike Kennedy at 800-922-1399, ext. 1232, or 541-444-8232.

Funded orthodontic treatment screenings set for 2018

The 2018 Funded Orthodontic Treatment Program is fast approaching! All interested parties should contact the dental department to be placed on a list.

The screening dates are April 16-17 and May 16-17, 2018. The program and amount of accepted applicants will be dependent on the funding for that year.

Applicants are selected by case severity, motivation of the patient and guardian, reliable transportation, routine dental checkups and the oral hygiene history of the patient, to name a few. We want the best results possible for the patient and thus place emphasis on these items in order to achieve it.

The unbiased selection process is performed under the guidance of an orthodontic specialist and participants are chosen through a committee.

This is open to all ages who are CHS-eligible only. You must have a scheduled screening appointment during one of the four screening days to be considered.

Each year's selection process is independent from previous years and does not carry over. Selected and treated individuals can only be selected once for the duration of the program. All applicants will be notified by mail if they have been chosen.

Please contact the Siletz Dental Clinic at 541-444-9681 or 800-648-0449, ext. 1681, to be put on the list.

How does your mouth support your overall health?

By Nancy Ludwig, MS, RDN, LD,
Siletz Tribal Head Start Nutrition

As part of my role as a consultant nutritionist to Siletz Tribal Head Start, I offer information for families. Our food choices affect our oral health in many ways. In addition, our oral health affects how well our body can digest and absorb nutrients. The mouth is where nutrition starts.

We need teeth that chew so we can break down our foods to absorb nutrients. Certain foods promote tooth decay. Other foods support healthy teeth and protect against bacterial growth.

Poor oral health can be the underlying cause of cardiovascular disease. Specific oral symptoms provide clues to specific health conditions. Nutrient deficiencies or excesses can be seen in the mouth.

The oral-microbiome is an up-and-coming field of study, which in time may cause a rethinking of some of the detergent-like toothpastes and rinses currently available.

We need teeth that chew so we can break down our foods to absorb nutrients. Digestion begins in the mouth. Chewing allows enzymes to break the food down further so nutrients can be absorbed and provide what we need to grow and repair.

Often people are not concerned about their teeth until it is too late. Once decay or infection causes loss of teeth, the ability to chew is impaired. Dental work and dentures can be expensive and often don't fully solve chewing problems.

When food textures need to be modified to eat, nutrition is generally impaired from lack of variety. Furthermore, because the act of chewing provides health benefits, some health advocates even recommend chewing liquids!

Certain foods promote tooth decay. Other foods support healthy teeth and protect against bacterial growth. The foods and beverages we consume provide food for bacteria. Bacteria love to eat sugars and carbohydrates. Sweet sticky foods, such as candy, provide more contact time on the teeth to promote bacterial growth and eventually tooth decay.

Even milk can be a food source for bacteria in the mouth. Baby bottle syndrome occurs when a bottle is propped into the baby's mouth and milk stays in the mouth, causing decay.

Foods that do not contain sugar or starch protect against tooth decay. It is useful to choose snacks that do not promote tooth decay. Examples include protein foods, especially those that contain fat, such as cheese, nuts, hard-boiled eggs, meat or fish jerky.

Xylitol is a sugar alcohol that can replace sugar in food products, gum or toothpaste. It is claimed to protect the teeth. Whether or not this is true, it is not a natural product and if excess sugar alcohols are consumed, they can cause GI upset. It's best to limit sugary foods and brush teeth after eating them.

Poor oral health can be the underlying cause of cardiovascular disease. You could think of it this way – plaque in the mouth may predict plaque in blood vessels.

Inflammation, infection and gum disease or periodontitis are also associated with cardiovascular disease (hardening of the arteries). Periodontitis is a chronic infection by oral bacteria that affects the supporting structures of the teeth. A mechanism has been proposed whereby the burden of bacterial pathogens, antigens, endotoxins and inflammatory cytokines of periodontitis contributes to the process of atherogenesis and thromboembolic events.

In response to infection and inflammation, susceptible individuals may exhibit greater expression of local and systemic mediators and may thereby be at increased risk for a myocardial infarction or stroke. Further information can be found at joponline.org/doi/abs/10.1902/annals.1996.1.1.821 or circ.ahajournals.org/content/112/1/19?etoc.

Specific oral symptoms provide clues to specific health conditions, such as celiac. When children have poor tooth enamel, it may be an early sign of celiac. Furthermore, frequent canker sores can be a symptom of celiac. Even for someone with known celiac, canker sores may a sign of gluten exposure.

Nutrient deficiencies or excesses can be seen in the mouth. Fluoride is an interesting nutrient that supports strong teeth but can cause pitting and discoloration when ingested in excess. When fluoride is found in water, it is often difficult to know how much fluoride is being consumed. The risk of getting too much fluoride is the reason for strict guidelines around not swallowing fluoride toothpaste or rinses.

Other nutrients, especially calcium and the other minerals that support bone health, also support strong teeth.

The oral microbiome is an up-and-coming field of study, which in time may cause a rethinking of some of the detergent-like toothpastes and rinses currently available.

The human oral cavity contains a number of different habitats, including the teeth, gingival sulcus, tongue, cheeks, hard and soft palates, and tonsils, which are colonized by bacteria. The microorganisms found in the human oral cavity have been referred to as the oral microflora, oral microbiota or more recently as the oral microbiome.

These microorganisms literally share our body space and have been all but ignored as determinants of health and disease. The oral cavity is a major gateway to the human body.

Microorganisms from the oral cavity have been shown to cause a number of oral infectious diseases in addition to caries (tooth decay). Research points to possible links with periodontitis (gum disease), endodontic (root canal) infections, alveolar osteitis (dry socket) and tonsillitis.

Evidence is also accumulating to link oral bacteria to systemic diseases, including cardiovascular disease, stroke, preterm birth, diabetes and pneumonia. For more information, visit jb.asm.org/content/192/19/5002.full?site=JBacteriol&utm_source=TrendMDJBacteriol&utm_medium=TrendMDJBacteriol&utm_campaign=trendmdalljournals_0.

In summary, the condition of your mouth affects more than your smile or the enjoyment of your food. After reading this article I hope you can see that it also influences your overall health. Traditional foods support oral health as the diet is low in sugars and carbohydrates with ample vegetables, meats, fish and fats.

As the Head Start consultant nutritionist, I am available to support families by discussing nutrition-related concerns via telephone. There is no charge for Head Start families.

Oregon leads US in seniors hospitalized for opioids

- Oregonians age 65 and up are landing in the hospital for opioid overdoses, abuse and dependence at a greater rate than any other state.
- A dozen other states, including Washington and California, show seniors with high hospitalization rates for opioids, including Vicodin, Oxycontin and Percocet.
- Oregon's rate has tripled in the past decade. We have outpaced the country for three straight years, climbing to a peak of 700 hospitalizations per 100,000 elderly in 2015. That translates to 4,500 elders.

WHY??

- In 1995, Oregon passed a pain treatment act that protected providers from discipline when they prescribed opioids for severe pain.
- In 1996, the American Pain Society launched a nationwide campaign that called on providers to ask people about their pain and to TREAT!
- State medical groups and even federal drug regulators encouraged the use of opioids for pain.
- Oregon providers, often on the leading edge in palliative care, were generous in prescribing.

Healthy Eating Tips for the Holidays

1. Get moving

Regular sustained aerobic activity is one of the most effective ways to maintain or lose weight. But check with your doctor before you start.

2. Cheat a little, but only once a day

If you must indulge in a holiday treat, allow yourself 1 small serving. Savor the texture and aroma. Then compensate later on by reducing your calorie intake or burning a few extra calories through exercise.

3. Don't forget to eat your fruits and veggies!

Aim for 5-7 or more servings of fruits and vegetables each day. They'll satisfy your stomach without adding empty calories. And the fiber will help you feel full.

4. Clear all temptations

Clear your office and home of tempting holiday goodies. When you bake, keep a small amount for your family. Then give the rest away. (And share any gifts of food.)

5. Say no politely

You're not obliged to eat high-calorie foods, even when they're home-made and your host encourages you. Learn to say no politely.

6. Focus on family and friends

Conversation is calorie-free and standing burns more calories than sitting. So get out and mingle!

Additional images came from Kentta, the Siuslaw National Forest, the Lincoln County Historical Society and the Little Log Church of Yachats.

Once the research was finished, the text written, the images selected and the signs fabricated, they were installed by students in the masonry program at Angell Job Corps, under the supervision of instructor, Joel Hatzenbihler. Wally

The other three signs, installed by the City of Yachats Public Works Department, are on the Ya'Xaik Trail, which climbs through the coastal forest from the east end of Diversity Lane to the east side of the Gerdemann Botanical Preserve.

From there, hikers can walk through the garden, emerging on Highway 101 at the Earthworks retail complex and across Highway 101 onto the Overleaf public footpath to the 804 North Trail (trail locations can be found on yachatstrails.org).

Coming to Siletz in January:

A Gottman-inspired Couples Retreat is currently under preparations for Friday, January 12, 2018. It's the start of a new year, New Year's resolutions are under way, why not work on your relationship while you're feeling that motivation?

About the Gottman method:

This is an evidence-based practice that helps couples work on their relationships. It starts with an extensive survey that provides detailed information to the therapist and is used to create the ultimate and unique treatment plan for the couple. Topics explored include a) The Four Horsemen (the four factors most likely to cause friction in a relationship): Criticism, Defensiveness, Contempt and Stonewalling; b) Aftermath of a Fight; and c) Love Maps.

What is a Gottman-inspired Couples Retreat?

- 1) An opportunity to reconnect with your partner and work on little issues before they become big.
- 2) A day to relax, enjoy your time with your partner, eat good food and learn how to take your relationship to the next level.
- 3) An opportunity to learn new tools from Gottman's proven methods to help your relationship become what you and your partner agree you want.

How do we register to go?

All couples wanting to attend the retreat will need to be registered by myself,

Rachel Adams, the mental health specialist for the PAO and SAO. Once registered, couples will be asked to complete a survey online. Once the survey is completed, couples approved for registration will be given further instructions.

Transportation to Siletz?

It is currently under research to see if transportation can be made available to all registered couples from both the Portland and Salem area offices.

Child Care?

Child care is not likely at this time, but is still under research as well.

Traditional Coping

While Gottman's methods are tried and true, the Siletz peoples are still encouraged to participate in traditional methods of healing. It is a good time to attend a sweat and pray for clarity on new goals to set. As always, drum circles, talking circles and smudging are different ways to stay connected with our ancestors and pay tribute to our roots. Some people find peace in calling on Creator for clarity and health.

Healthy Traditions

December Minus Tide Harvesting

Minus tides provide access to delicious indigenous foods like clams, mussels, seaweed, sea rose, urchins, and more.

The Healthy Traditions project has been working closely with the Natural Resources Department to continue planning and implementing projects that will provide increased opportunities for Tribal members to gather cultural resources. Many of these projects are in the form of habitat restoration, which works to restore a damaged or destroyed ecosystem through restoring the natural processes (such as removing a dike to reintroduce tidal influence to a site), or through the reintroduction of plants and habitat structures (such as planting native species in a meadow).

The Tribe is surveying for salmon spawning habitat to include in a larger model determining what part of the habitat is most critical to spawning salmon. Ultimately these hydrological models will describe 60 miles of the Siletz River and identify key areas where conservation and habitat enhancement should occur to support salmon stocks through future climate change scenarios. By conserving salmon habitat, the Tribe hopes to enhance the number of salmon in the Siletz River.

Healthy Traditions and Natural Resources are also working to increase Tribal access to Wapato tubers and Camas bulbs for cultural events. Staff collected over 200 bulbs of Wapato and 400 bulbs of Camas from the Willamette Valley, with the intent to plant them out at the Hatchery property. Also in the Willamette Valley, staff have been continuing to work with private land owners interested in restoring native habitats on their property. The restoration of these sites, which focus on oak savannah habitats, would increase access to traditional Tribal food resources such as camas and acorns.

Another project that Healthy Traditions and Natural Resources Department are collaborating on is the restoration of native Olympia oysters to the Yaquina Bay. Staff worked with Oregon Oyster Farms to place 900 bags of oyster shell in the Yaquina Bay with the hope that native Olympia oysters will settle on these shells and provide a source population for the Bay. Native oysters have been decimated over the past century, so the initiation of a source population is the first step to restoring Yaquina Bay Olympia oyster populations.

Through habitat restoration, not only are we able to work towards healing the land, but work to develop and maintain important traditional and cultural resources for the future.

Mission Statement

The CTSI Healthy Traditions project seeks to improve the health of Siletz Tribal members through educational activities which promote the use of traditional foods through hunting, gathering, gardening, cooking, food preservation and protecting our natural resources.

A Salute to Siletz Restoration

By Charles Wilkinson

I wish so much that I could be with you today but cannot. You are very much in my thoughts and I would like to pass along these observations about Siletz Restoration.

This whole coast was originally Indian country and had been for many thousands of years. Then came the white people and they came on strong. The Tribes resisted.

Perhaps the most notable leader was Tye John. He was an enormously able and inspirational figure. He could make his points clearly and powerfully to the new arrivals, rally his own people and, if necessary, employ his military genius in combat. The widely respected Oregon historian of the 19th century, Francis Fuller Victor, called him "The Iron Chief." Tye John is rightly included in any list of the great historic Tribal leaders, such as Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce.

The United States wanted to put all the Tribes on one reservation on the coast and many Indian people, including Tye John, resisted. In the spring of 1855, combat broke out in Jacksonville, in the upper reaches of the Rogue River watershed, when American renegades senselessly slaughtered an estimated 100 Indian people in a peaceful encampment. Native people, led by Tye John, retaliated and the Rogue River War was on.

The Tribal warriors moved down the river toward the coast. Their military superiority led them to four straight victorious battles. One American officer called the Indian fighters "the monarchs of the woods." But cavalry reinforcements were coming up the coast from the south and down the coast from the north. Numbers alone, not military capability, were beginning to tip the balance.

Indian and federal military delegations met at Oak flat near the mouth of the Illinois River, the finishing place of the Tribe's Run to the Rogue. Colonel Buchanan made a long statement on why it was necessary for the Tribes to surrender and move all of their villages and belongings to a reservation on the coast.

Tye John listened intently but still believed that he and his men could prevail in battle. He would not be confined to a reservation. He issued words – laced with sovereignty, love of the land, culture and staying power – that are as good as any that have been put forth in the history of Oregon:

"You are a great chief. So am I. This is my country; I was in it when those trees were very small, not higher than my head. My heart is sick with fighting, but I want to live in my country. If the white people are willing, I will go back to Deer Creek and live among them as I used to do. They can visit my camp and I will visit theirs; but I will not lay down my arms and go with you on the reserve. I will fight. Goodbye."

The final, furious, Battle of Big Bend commenced a week later. At first, the Tribes held the upper hand. After 30 hours, the Americans were exhausted and ready to give in. But then troops arrived from San Francisco and the Army had the upper hand. The resistance was over. Indian people were force-marched north by miserable voyages on jam-backed vessels, by inland under brutal conditions, and up the coast on the brutal Trail of Tears riven by beatings, murders and rapes.

If justice had prevailed, the Siletz Reservation – 103 miles of the Oregon Coast, one of the greatest of all Tribal reservations – would've made a splendid homeland for the Tribe. But the white people wanted it, all of it, and within 40 short years had managed to do exactly that, leaving the Tribe with almost none of the land promised to them by treaty.

Charles Wilkinson

That was not enough. The United States adopted a policy of hard-edged, forced assimilation. All traditional culture was prohibited, Nee Dosh included. They torched all the proud cedar dance houses. They prohibited the languages. They sent the children off to schools where the culture was scrubbed off them. They allowed no self-determination. The BIA was the real government. All that was Siletz had been targeted for extinction. Then they called termination just to make it clear.

But there was something that the assimilationists had not counted on.

For Tye John's words still hung in the air. They hung over every river, meadow, forest and coastal formation. Yes, Tye John's message of sovereignty, love of the land, culture and staying power was everywhere. Indian people could hear, and feel, those messages and that spirit in the air. But for long generations, the people were kept down and they had no way to break out.

Then came the 1970s and you had leadership. Oh, did you ever have leadership 40 years ago. Yes, Art Bensell and Joe Lane, as Tribal chairs, and Pauline Ricks, Ed Ben, Robert Rilatos, Alta Courville, Dolores Pigsley, Sister Francella Griggs, Dolly Fisher, Bob Tom and Katherine Harrison were indispensable, but there were many others who made all manner of contributions. Together they took Tye John's words and spirit to Washington, D.C., and people listened.

And that powerful sense of tradition and commitment carries over to today. Forty years later, you can remain proud of a government that is stable, visionary and productive. My admiration for what you have accomplished since the 1977 statute is unbounded. You have achieved a great many measurable things: the largest government in the county, the largest business in the county, housing, the magnificent health clinic, the community school and much else. You also have made deeply cultural advances: Land acquisition, the Dance House, Nee Dosh, the language program, the basketry, the Run to the Rogue.

You have, then, put an exclamation point after restoration. Its original meaning was restoration of the federal-Siletz Tribal relationship. You have done that but have made it much more. You have reversed the assimilationist assault by looking back to your truest origins and restoring land, history, sovereignty and culture. There is a great deal to be celebrated today and that will be true at every restoration anniversary celebration in all the years to come.

For Tye John's words still ride on the currents high above Siletz country and always will.

Always,
Charles
