

Census campaign will end soon – make sure you get counted before Sept. 30

There are many things in this world that we have no control over. One of the things we do have control of that will help improve our lives and the life of our Siletz community is the ability to respond to the Census. On that note, there is good and bad news.

The good news is that the Siletz Tribe has responded better than 83% of all of Tribes in the country. The bad news is that we've only responded at a 52.4% rate as of this writing. Indian Country is going to be undercounted again and it's our own fault this time. Those who have responded have shown concern for their community and are to be commended.

Thanks to all who have endured eight months of Census campaigning. It will soon be over. The Census response period will close at the end of September. At that time, a drawing will take place for those Siletz Tribal members who have reported that they have completed the Census.

There is more than $5,000 in prizes and gifts, including a Brass King Regal XLS LP gas grill and cover, Siletz Pendleton blankets, Kindle tablets, shirts and cooler bags. You can still participate a little while longer. Just complete the Census and send an email with the subject line "I Count" and your name, mailing address and phone number to CompleteCount-Committee@CTSI.nsn.us.

Complete the Census by 1) going online at my2020census.gov or by 2) phoning 844-330-2020. Census enumerators are supposed to come to households that have not completed the Census. They are short-staffed, however, and may miss some people. Please don't let this happen.

If you have questions, contact your area office. If you need computer assistance with your response, contact your area office. People there have been trained to answer your questions, though they can't fill out your questionnaires for you.

The Census is safe, simple and confidential. Your responses will not be shared with any other agency. The average response only takes about 10 minutes to complete.

Remember: You are Siletz and you count!

NMAI to host virtual ceremony to mark completion of National Native American Veterans Memorial

The Smithsonian's National Museum of the American Indian will host a virtual event Nov. 11, 2020, to mark the completion of the National Native American Veterans Memorial. The event will also acknowledge the service and sacrifice of Native veterans and their families. More information about the virtual event will be forthcoming.

The museum planned to host a dedication ceremony and veterans' procession to mark the memorial's completion but has postponed these events due to current health and safety guidelines. The museum will reschedule both events when it is safe to do so.

About the memorial

As commissioned by Congress, the National Museum of the American Indian will establish a National Native American Veterans Memorial on its grounds. This will be the first national landmark in Washington, D.C., to focus on the contributions of American Indians, Alaska Natives and Native Hawaiians who have served in the military.

The memorial design is by Harvey Pratt (Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes of Oklahoma), a multimedia artist, retired forensic artist and Marine Corps Vietnam veteran.

About the museum

In partnership with Native peoples and their allies, the National Museum of the American Indian fosters a richer shared human experience through a more informed understanding of Native peoples. The museum in Washington, D.C., is located on the National Mall at Fourth Street and Independence Avenue S.W.

Connect with the museum on Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and AmericanIndian.si.edu.

If you have not completed your federal Census, see the enclosed brochure with the survey packet on how you need to answer for Siletz Tribal members. Once you have reviewed the brochure, PLEASE go to www.census.gov and click "Respond," "Respond" and "Start Questionnaire," and then click on "If you do not have a Census ID, click here." You will enter your residential address and answer questions about those who were living in your household on April 1, 2020. You DO NOT have to have a Census ID to respond.

Native Arts and Cultures Foundation to gain ownership of Yale Union building in historic repatriation of property

PORTLAND, Ore. – The Native Arts and Cultures Foundation (NACF) and Yale Union (YU) are proud to announce the transfer of ownership of the land and historic Yale Union building at 800 SE 10th Ave. in Portland from YU to NACF.

“Together, the NACF board and staff believe that this free land and building transfer will set an example for recognizing the value of Native ownership of property in urban areas across the nation,” said NACF president/CEO Lulani Arquette. “It’s liberating and encouraging to witness this kind of support for First Peoples of this country. The potential for local community and national partnerships around shared interests through Indigenous arts and cultures is wide open. We are deeply grateful for this transformative opportunity afforded NACF by YU board and staff, and stand united with all to reclaim Native truth, engage anti-racism and address important issues we face today.”

NACF is a Native-led national organization committed to mobilizing Native artists, culture bearers, communities and leaders to influence positive social, cultural and environmental change. It focuses on strengthening Native arts, providing artists and the creative community with the resources and tools they need to be successful, and expanding awareness and access to Native knowledge and truth.

NACF accepts this special property with great appreciation for what came before. We honor and respect the elders past and present, and acknowledge the land this building sits on and the previous Native Tribes and peoples who inhabited the land.

“I am proud of what we have accomplished with Yale Union over the last decade. Having been able to fulfill our mission through the unearned privilege of property ownership, it’s now time that we hand over the keys!” said Flint Jamison, president, Yale Union Board of Directors. “I am inspired by NACF’s leadership, unwavering commitment to their mission and capacity to operate on a large scale. I am eager to listen and learn from them as they use the land and historic building to fulfill their vision.”

The Center for Native Arts and Cultures in inner Southeast Portland

The new national headquarters for NACF will be called the Center for Native Arts and Cultures, and the property will continue to be a site of contemporary artistic and cultural production. The building will benefit the local community and be a strong cultural asset for the city of Portland.

NACF has just completed a planning process that determines its national programming and includes a vision for how it plans to maximize opportunities in the new space. The building will be a vibrant gathering place for Indigenous artists and local partnerships. It will provide space to present and exhibit, places to practice culture and make art, and areas for cultural ceremony and celebration.

There will be opportunities for broad community learning, including workshops and seminars covering pertinent issues relative to decolonizing space, anti-racism and environmental justice.

The process to transfer Yale Union’s historic property to NACF began in mid-2018 with discussions between YU’s then executive director, Yoko Ott, and YU’s board president, Jamison, regarding the art institutions’ potential for proposing models of restorative social change. Ott then made initial contact with NACF’s Arquette, which led to NACF conducting a thorough feasibility study.

In December 2019, NACF’s Board of Directors approved to move forward with taking ownership of the property. Both NACF and YU would like to acknowledge Ott’s vision and leadership in initiating this transfer of ownership.

Yale Union background

Since opening in 2010, Yale Union has provided public programming and presented the work of hundreds of artists through the labor of its dedicated board and staff, and the incalculable support of its donors, volunteers, colleagues and friends.

Yale Union has created and fostered a cultural community by hosting countless events, providing subsidized studio space to dozens of local artists and facilitating numerous community programs. It has preserved its historic building and used its 9,400-square-foot exhibition space to present the work of internationally recognized and under-represented artists in Portland.

Through its publishing imprint, YU has published 10 books and it has housed a unique and publicly accessible art library.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Yale Union has suspended in-person events for 2020, but will collaborate with NACF to co-present artistic programming in 2021. Later that year, Yale Union will dissolve its nonprofit.

The property transfer to NACF will serve as a natural culmination of Yale Union’s decade-long mission to support artists, propose new modes of production and stimulate an ongoing public discourse around art. Yale Union’s board and staff sincerely thank all of those who helped in achieving its mission and building a community of artists around the Yale Union building and beyond.

Siletz Tribal Member Survey

Earn $100!

The survey for the individual Tribal member, including children, plus the two surveys for the household must be returned to be eligible to receive the $100.

On Monday, July 6, 2020 multiple surveys were mailed out; 1) one specific to COVID-19 (Coronavirus), 2) one is socio-economical, and 3) needs for each Tribal member. The envelope is addressed to the oldest person receiving mail at the same address. The number of surveys for Tribal members listed at the same mailing address are included in the packet. That number is listed after the name on the mailing label. An envelope was provided to return the surveys, postage needs to be applied before returning.

COVID-19 has affected every single person in one way or another. The Tribe wants to know how it has affected you, your family and household.

At the top of each survey, it lists if the survey is to be completed one per household or one per Tribal member.

For each survey, the Tribal Council has authorized $100 per completed survey, including those you complete on behalf of Siletz enrolled children living in your household.

To receive the incentive, all forms must be completed and returned. We will use roll numbers to track each survey returned, so please be sure to write the correct roll number(s) on each survey. Ensure your current contact information, including email and phone number, is on file with Enrollment by returning the Address & Contact Information Update form that is enclosed in the packet as well.

If you have not completed your Federal Census, see the enclosed brochure with the survey packet on how you need to answer for Siletz Tribal members. Once you have reviewed the brochure, PLEASE go to www.census.gov and click "Respond", "Respond", "Start Questionnaire" and then click on "If you do not have a Census ID, click here." The Lane-Butler family (l to r): Cassandra, Nathaniel, Callen, Taykoda and Allen

Lane-Butlers graduate from Tribal Home Visiting Program

Congratulations to Allen and Cassandra Lane-Butler for being Home Visiting's most recent graduates!

Allen and Cassandra joined the Home Visiting Program in September 2017, soon after the birth of their son Callen. They actively participated in the Home Visiting lessons and attended family events when possible, graduating this July when Callen turned 3 years old.

Over the course of the three years that Allen and Cassandra were engaged with Home Visiting, they made several changes benefiting their family. Their two older sons returned to their home full time, the family moved to a larger home with plenty of space for their family and both grew in confidence in their parenting skills and roles.

Allen and Cassandra both participated in the visits, entering in with interest, openness and a desire to learn. Their honesty and reflective responses showed wisdom and commitment to their family.

Allen commented that he valued the one-on-one communication and the lessons. The diaper wipes they got with each visit were an added bonus. Setting goals and doing the lessons gave them things to focus on and gain more awareness. When asked if he would recommend the Siletz Home Visiting Program to other Tribal families, Allen responded "Absolutely! Yes, indeed!"

Congratulations Allen and Cassandra! We wish you and your family the best!

How to access language materials online

Ch'ee-la xwii-t'i
(Greetings everyone)

To assist Tribal members during this time of social distancing and the interruption of our normal schedules, this tutorial on how to access language materials and recordings from the Tribal website has been developed. I hope you and your families are safe and healthy during this time. Hopefully many folks can access these materials from the safety of their homes.

Go to www.ctsi.nsn.us. Enter in your roll number and last four digits of your Social security number to log on to the Tribal member access area.

Click on "Our Heritage." On the drop down, click on "Language."

Lots of written and recorded materials are available in this section. The Nuu-wee-ya' (Our Words) Language Dictionary is on this page. You can click on the selection A to Z to look up written English language words and their Athabaskan equivalent.

Also on this page are Siletz Dee-ni Volumes 1, 2 & 3. Just click on "Study Materials" and scroll down. Volume 1 contains lessons on body parts, counting, relatives, foods and table talk.

In these lessons, the written word on the screen is accompanied by audio of the word's pronunciation. Volume 2 contains animals, birds, colors, fish, greetings and goodbyes, insects, and trees and brush. Volume 3 contains lessons on sentence structure and word order.

Each lesson has a complete practical alphabet sound chart. All three volumes have a word document and audio recording for each lesson. Tests are available if you want to use them.

To access the Siletz Talking Dictionary, click on Siletz Language website. Drop down three lines and click on www.siletzlanguage.org, go to the Talking Dictionary tab and click on it. The Siletz Talking Dictionary Page will appear.

Just below the words "Search for" is an empty white box. Type in the word you are searching for and click on the "search" button just below the box. The word and the Athabaskan equivalent will appear just below the search box. To hear the word being spoken, simply click on the red ear icon on the left side of the page.

You may have to wait a few seconds for the page and sound to load, depending on your connectivity. Some of the words also have pictures.

Also on the www.siletzlanguage.org website are 14 Language learning videos and many other culture-related videos, materials and curriculum.

History of Tobacco

Plantations in the American South

In 1609, English colonist John Rolfe arrived at Jamestown, Virginia, and became the first settler to successfully raise tobacco (commonly referred to at that time as "brown gold")^[17] for commercial use. Tobacco was used as currency by the Virginia settlers for years, and Rolfe was able to make his fortune in farming it for export at Varina Farms Plantation.

When he left for England with his wife Pocahontas, a daughter of Chief Powhatan, he had become wealthy. Returning to Jamestown, following Pocahontas' death in England, Rolfe continued in his efforts to improve the quality of commercial tobacco, and, by 1620, 40,000 pounds (18,000 kg) of tobacco were shipped to England. By the time John Rolfe died in 1622, Jamestown was thriving as a producer of tobacco, and its population had topped 4,000. Tobacco led to the importation of the colony's first black slaves in 1619.

Throughout the 17th and 18th centuries, tobacco continued to be the cash crop of the Virginia Colony, as well as The Carolinas. Large tobacco warehouses filled the areas near the wharves of new, thriving towns such as Dumfries on the Potomac, Richmond and Manchester at the Fall Line (head of navigation) on the James, and Petersburg on the Appomattox.

There were also tobacco plantations in Tennessee, like Wessynton in Cedar Hill, Tennessee.

The Siletz Tribal Charitable Contribution Fund has distributed $418,054.48 to 34 organizations as it continues its quarterly donations to nonprofit groups. Due to the coronavirus pandemic and current restrictions on gatherings of people, the reception originally scheduled for Aug. 7 was canceled.

Overall, the Tribe has honored its tradition of sharing within the community by distributing more than $18.6 million through the charitable fund and other Tribal resources. Chinook Winds has donated more than $6.5 million in cash and fund-raising items since it opened in 1995. The casino also provides in-kind donations of convention space for various fund-raisers as well as technical support, advertising and manpower for many events.

Run to the Rogue from the Past

1% of Oregonians have evidence of COVID-19 exposure, study finds; rate is 10 times higher than conventional testing shows

PORTLAND, Ore. — As of mid-June, 1% of Oregonians without COVID-19 had evidence of past infection of the virus in their blood, which is 10 times higher than the reported rate of infections obtained through conventional testing, according to a new study.

Oregon Health Authority epidemiologists who authored the study, which appeared Aug. 14 in the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report (MMWR), found that nine of 897 blood specimens collected from 19 health care facilities around Oregon between May 11 and June 15, 2020, contained antibodies against the virus that causes COVID-19.

The study also suggested that rates of infection increased with age, with no antibodies detected in the blood of pediatric patients age 17 and younger. The rate was 0.4-0.5% in those ages 18-64; and 1.6-2.1% in those 65 and older.

The results indicate a "substantial" proportion of Oregon residents have undiagnosed and unreported infection from COVID-19.

"We suspected that a much larger segment of Oregon's population has been exposed to and infected with COVID-19 than traditional diagnostic testing shows," said Paul Cieslak, M.D., a study co-author and OHA medical director for communicable diseases and immunizations. "But these results also tell us that the great majority of Oregonians remain susceptible to this virus."

The first case of COVID-19 in Oregon was diagnosed Feb. 28, 2020. Through

May 31, 4,243 people in Oregon, or about one of every 1,000 people, had tested positive for COVID-19.

Because this rate doesn't account for people who were infected but did not seek testing — such as those with mild or no symptoms, or people unable to access testing — the rate is believed to be lower than the state's actual infection count.

Seroprevalence surveys like this one — testing blood samples to look for antibodies — may estimate the rate of infection more accurately than conventional testing by identifying all people who have had previous infections with COVID-19, including those who didn't show symptoms or did not seek care.

"Because most of us are still susceptible," said Cieslak, "we need to keep practicing physical distancing and masking until we have effective vaccines, treatments or other means of mitigating illness."

The antibody test shows that people whose blood was tested for antibodies were exposed to COVID-19 at some point, even if they never had symptoms. But Cieslak emphasized it's not a good test to get if you think you have COVID-19, because antibodies don't appear in your blood until two to three weeks after exposure to the virus. Plus, he explained, "We don't know if antibodies to COVID-19 mean you are protected, so you still need to wear a face covering, maintain physical distancing and keep washing your hands."

For more information on antibody testing, visit the CDC website at cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/testing/serology-overview.html.

Health officials urge parents to get their children caught up on vaccines now

Parents are understandably nervous about taking their children and teens to their doctors' offices right now. As a result, children in Oregon are falling behind on their childhood vaccinations.

"How students attend school is changing because of COVID-19," says Stacy de Assis Matthews, school immunization coordinator at the Oregon Health Authority. "We want to make sure students are fully vaccinated so they are protected in whatever form their school looks like — in a classroom, in a small group cohort or online at home with their family."

Families have the power to protect their children against serious, potentially life-threatening diseases. Parents should talk to their child's doctor or nurse about whether they have missed any routine vaccines.

Before rescheduling any upcoming childhood vaccination or well-visit appointments, call the child's health care provider to find out if the appointment can remain as scheduled and what precautions they are taking to keep everyone safe from COVID-19.

- Many health care providers' offices are taking special precautions, such as ensuring children who are well are kept separate from sick children.
- Many providers are limiting the number of people who can go with a child to their appointment and are taking temperatures of all family members before allowing them into the building.
- Some providers are providing drive-up vaccine programs.

With so many people out of work and without health insurance, it's important to know you can still keep your child safe. The Vaccines for Children (VFC) program offers free vaccines to families who cannot afford to pay for their children's vaccines. Call 211 to find out more about VFC.

If your children need health insurance, they may be eligible for the Oregon Health Plan. It is open to all children and teens younger than 19, regardless of immigration status, who meet income and other criteria.

Trained community partners across the state can help you fill out an application. It's free. Visit OHP.Oregon.gov to find community partners in your area.

What to Expect If You Have Been Diagnosed With COVID-19

- » To protect your privacy, the caller will not mention your name to your contacts.

They will share information about how to:

Oregon, let's answer the call.

National Native organizations issue joint statement on Census Bureau change to 2020 Census operations

The U.S. Census Bureau has announced that it is ending its Census 2020 field operations on Sept. 30, 2020, despite severely low response rates in historically undercounted areas, including in many Tribal areas across the country.

The National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), the Native American Rights Fund (NARF) and the National Urban Indian Family Coalition (NUIFC) are deeply alarmed and concerned with this unwarranted and irresponsible decision.

An accurate Census count is essential to ensure fair and accurate representation of all Americans, including this country's First Americans, because Census data is used for reapportionment of congressional seats and in redistricting to elect representatives at every level of government. Ending the 2020 Census count early during a global pandemic is not only bad policy, it puts at risk the ability of our communities to access social safety net and other benefits that a complete Census count affords Americans wherever they are.

Our Tribal nations and Tribal communities have been ravaged by COVID-19 and an extension of the Census enumeration period was a humane lifeline during an unprecedented global health catastrophe that provided critically needed additional time to Tribal nations to ensure that all of everyone in their communities are counted.

For millions of American Indians and Alaska Natives, whether they live on rural reservations or in America's large cities, an inaccurate Census count will decimate our ability to advocate for necessary services for our most vulnerable communities. An incomplete count also undermines our representative system of government in violation of the U.S. Constitution and in derogation of the federal government's trust responsibilities to Tribal nations.

NCAI, NARF and NUIFC strongly support a complete Census count and call on the U.S. Congress to take urgent legislative action to include an extension of the Census field operation timelines in the next COVID-19 package.

About NCAI

Founded in 1944, the National Congress of American Indians is the oldest, largest and most representative American Indian and Alaska Native organization in the country.

NCAI advocates on behalf of Tribal governments and communities, promoting strong Tribal-federal government-to-government policies and promoting a better understanding among the general public regarding American Indian and Alaska Native governments, people and rights.

For more information, visit ncai.org.

About NARF

Founded in 1970, NARF is the oldest and largest nonprofit dedicated to asserting and defending the rights of Indian Tribes, Tribal organizations and individual Indians nationwide.

For the past 48 years, NARF has represented more than 275 Tribes in 31 states in such areas as Tribal jurisdiction, federal recognition, land claims, hunting and fishing rights, religious liberties and voting rights.

For more information, visit narf.org.

About NUIFC

Created in 2003, NUIFC advocates for American Indian families living in urban areas by creating partnerships with Tribes as well as other American Indian organizations and by conducting research to better understand the barriers, issues and opportunities facing urban American Indian families.

NUIFC works to ensure access to traditionally excluded organizations and families, and to focus attention on the needs of urban Indians.

VMM supports training to increase the number of American Indians and Alaska Natives producing quality public broadcasting programs. A key strategy for this work is the development of strong partnerships with Tribal nations, Indian organizations and Native communities.

Reaching the general public and the global market is the ultimate goal for the dissemination of Native-produced media that shares Native perspectives with the world. Gwich'in Tribes condemn Trump administration's approval of oil and gas development in Arctic Refuge

On Aug. 17, Secretary of the Interior David Bernhardt signed the record of decision approving oil and gas development in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge's Coastal Plain. This approval represents the latest move by the Trump administration to rapidly develop lands significant to the Neets' aii Gwich'in Tribes.

The Native Village of Venetie Tribal Government, Arctic Village Council and Venetie Village Council (collectively "the Tribes") are unequivocally opposed to development in the Coastal Plain and will continue to fight to protect the Coastal Plain and their way of life.

In 2017, Congress enacted tax reform legislation that included a provision opening the Coastal Plain to oil and gas development. In less than a year, the Trump administration slapped together an environmental impact statement based on pre-existing data and research from other regions in Alaska. The environmental impact statement goes so far as to remove specific references to Gwich'in cultural and subsistence resources in an effort to downplay the negative effects development would cause.

Approval of the Coastal Plain oil and gas leasing program comes at a time when the Tribes are tirelessly working to protect the health and well-being of their communities from increasing threats such as climate change and the spread of COVID-19. The decision to rush ahead with oil and gas development despite the COVID-19 pandemic forces the Tribes to choose between devoting limited time and resources to protecting their communities or protecting their way of life from the catastrophic effects of development in the Coastal Plain.

In response to the approval of the record of decision, Native Village of Venetie Tribal Government First Chief Margorie Gemmill stated: "The Coastal Plain is one of the most important natural, cultural, and subsistence resources to the Neets' aii Gwich'in of Arctic Village and Venetie and to the Gwich'in people as a whole. The cultural identity of the Gwich'in people as caribou people is intertwined with the Porcupine Caribou Herd's calving areas in the Coastal Plain. Any impacts to the Porcupine Caribou Herd from changes in migration patterns, lower fertility rates and loss of habitat will have significant adverse social, cultural, spiritual and subsistence impacts on our people. This process must be stopped. We call on all our allies to join the Gwich'in in opposing this attack on our way of life."

To the editor:

A big thank you to all the Siletz Tribal ladies who participated in the #MaskUp video project: Sahaylee Mason, Tasha Rilatos, Scout Jay, Penelope Gomez, Marlene Stuart, Shantel Hostler, Kaye Stainbrook, Kaylee Polk-Myers, Tamiya Yanez, Lexi Jackson, Lilianna Garcia, Isabella Gomez, Neveah Jackson, Kendall and Beyonka Bell-Tellez, Selene Rilatos and Lexi Christensen.

During this time of a global pandemic, we are all struggling in different ways. For me, I continue to create art to help me cope and express myself during this weird and difficult time.

If you are reading this Siletz News, please remember you are not alone. If you are not sure who to call, pick up the phone and call the Tribe for assistance. There are many programs to help you during this COVID19 pandemic.

I encourage you to create art and share it on social media or facetime with a friend or family member. The #MaskUp video of Siletz Tribal girls and women who wore regalia with a mask can be found on the Facebook CTSI page. I also put together a TicToc of the photos of the ladies at <https://vm.tiktok.com/J6EUFJP/>.

When I made my video, I really looked past the mask and understood that by wearing the mask, I am helping save our traditions. We can save our elders and our people by wearing the mask. Do your part and wear a mask.

With Love and prayers to everyone.

Hvmchi,
Tiffany Stuart
