WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army announced Monday the first withdrawal of regular forces sent to Mississippi and Tennessee a week ago because of integration riots at the University of Mississippi.

Schirra Has Suggestion For Next Flight: "Just Move Up Its Launching Date"

By CHARLES STAFFORD HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Walter M. Schirra Jr., America's most widely traveled space pilot, says he came back from his "textbook flight" six times around the world with one suggestion for the next U.S. space venture: Just move up its launching date.

lack something. In an aside to a freckle-faced, 12-year-old boy in the audience, Schirra confessed: "I'm sorry, Marty, my son, I did not see any green cheese."

Schirra's flight was the longest flown by an American astronaut, though a short journey by comparison to the 64- and 48-orbit flights of the Soviet cosmonauts, Andrian Nikolayev and Pavel Popovich. It was a link between the three-orbit flights of John H. Glenn Jr. and Malcolm Scott Carpenter and one-day, 18-orbit mission planned for early next year, possibly in late February or early March.

During the hour refreshments will be served and entertainment will be provided by OSU students. Angela Cotel will present a pantomime, and Sally Frahm will play a piano solo. Campus leaders will be present to talk to the new students and acquaint them with OSU and the various activities available to them. Dress will be campus.

He left it off until Christopher Kraft, Project Mercury flight director, told him: "I think you have proved our point, old buddy."

Behind them came the other astronauts, with the exception of Alan B. Shepard Jr., not yet returned from his post during the orbital mission aboard the Pacific tracking ship Rose Knot.

Amendment Changes

Tonight in student senate three topics will be discussed and voted upon. Adoption of ASOSU Election and Service Committee by-laws, a constitution of classes applicable to each class and an amendment to the ASOSU constitution will head the agenda.

Adoption of the Election and Service Committee by laws with the election committee rules appears to be in order. The responsibilities of this committee include conducting all ASOSU elections, making all physical preparations for each senate meeting and to assist the student body office where needed.

The by-laws define the duties, members, officers and other important items which such documents cover. Attached to the by-laws are election committee rules. These rules define the proper procedure for carrying out elections for both student body offices and class offices. They appear to be in order and will probably pass as is.

The next item concerns a constitution of classes which identifies officers and their duties, elections, meetings, finances and rules of order. Two points of consideration in this proposed constitution of classes involves membership and amendments. Article III on membership reads, "The membership in each class shall be such as shown by the records in the office of the Registrar."

We wonder if some confusion might result in the future with respect to elections for senior class officers due to this clause. It would be possible for a student at the close of his junior year to be lacking some institutional requirement such as composition writing (Wr 111) or an hour of physical education or hygiene. Though he may have a sufficient number of hours to his credit, he would not be considered a senior by the Registrar until this institutional requirement were made up.

This leaves some question as to whether he would be eligible to hold a senior class office since the requirement probably couldn't be made up until the following fall term. We feel that student membership in a class should be more specifically defined so that a student with enough hours may run for office regardless of institutional class requirements. Perhaps a sophomore would be defined as having at least 36 hours, junior at least 90 hours and senior at least 135 hours. This would also allow those students in forestry and engineering (who need 147 hours to be considered a senior by the Registrar) an equal consideration with students in other schools to run for a class office.

The second point of consideration in the constitution of classes deals with amendments. In order for a class to amend its own constitution it must first allow the ASOSU parliamentarian to review the amendment; next all four class councils must pass this amendment before it can be referred to student senate; a majority affirmative vote on the amendment by senate shall cause the amendment to be in effect.

This means that to pass an amendment which pertains to only one class, all four classes must legislate on the matter before it goes to senate. It also means that members of the group which will be affected by the amendment will not have the opportunity to vote upon the change themselves. This will be done by senate.

Though we feel this system is adequate, it is causing three other classes to involve themselves with some matters which may not affect them and it is taking some power from the classes and giving it to senate by not letting class members vote on their own amendments.

The last topic deals with an amendment to the ASOSU constitution. Article VIII pertaining to amendments now says that a majority vote of senate or a petition signed by at least 20 per cent of the associated students will bring an amendment to an all-school ballot election.

The proposed amendment reduces to ten per cent the number of students needed on a petition to bring a constitutional change to a vote of the student body. The proposal also gives senate the power to amend all articles and sections of the constitution by a two-thirds vote except Article VIII and any amendment that is less than two years old that has been passed by a vote of the associated students.

This is an excellent change, except that the per cent of student body needed on a petition should be even less than ten per cent. As it stands now with 10,000 students, 2000 signatures are needed to bring a vote to the students. As OSU increases in population, the number of signatures will also increase. It would be difficult to get even one thousand valid names. If only five per cent of the student body were needed to call for a vote only five hundred signatures would be necessary. This is a more reasonable figure.

Secondly, if senate has the power to pass amendments, students should have the authority to quickly over-ride them if they so choose. A five per cent petition would help this.

These are the issues which will be discussed and voted upon in senate tonight. If any student feels one way or another on these topics, he should contact his school senator, class president or living group senator and tell his feelings on the particular topic. Notes can be left in the mail boxes in the student body offices, MU 106, if personal contact cannot be made.

Supreme Court Refuses to Review Case On Free Books to Parochial Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused Monday to review a decision Oregon may not provide free text books to church or parochial schools.

The decision was given by the Oregon Supreme Court in interpreting a section of the state's constitution. The section says "no money may be drawn from the treasury for the benefit of any religious or theological institution."

Ivan B. Carlson, whose five children attended St. John the Apostle school in Oregon City, Ore., appealed to the highest tribunal to overturn the state court.

The school is operated by the Roman Catholic church and provides both secular and religious instruction.

Carlson's appeal contended the Oregon Supreme Court decision violated the first amendment to the federal constitution "by imposing a financial burden on the exercise of the parents' religious right to select religiously-oriented schools for their children's education."

In 1941 the Oregon Legislature provided for free use of secular textbooks by children attending

Cigar Smokers Tire Of Hearing Remarks

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks a cigar smoker gets tired of hearing: "I can smell it all over the house."

"What are you smoking—a rope?"

"Gee, Elmer, do you mind finishing your cigar outside on the patio? My wife just bought these draperies, and..."

"She says if they were good enough for his grandfather they're good enough for him—but that cigar smells like one his grandfather left him in his will."

"I know I didn't used to object to it, Elmer, but that was before we were married."

"No, that's him over there—the one causing the blue fog."

"There is no use of your looking around for your humidor, Elmer. I buried it today while you were at work."

"I'm afraid you'll have to start taking a cheaper brand, sir. We're about out of clear Havana."

"Please don't put it out in the house. Why not take it out in the back yard and beat it to death with a stick?"

"My husband says General Grant smoked them, and so does President Kennedy. So I told him, 'When you get elected President and we move into the White House, I'll let you smoke all you want of them there.'"

"Doctor, are you absolutely sure there is no major disease I can tell him is caused by cigars?"

"I heard somewhere that psychiatrists say cigar smoking is a sign of oral infantilism. They're just big overgrown babies—trying to return to the cradle."

"I don't know why they should taste funny. All I did was dip the ends of them in perfume—so they'd have a pleasanter aroma."

"Yes, you can play with daddy's cigars, children. Mommy'll give you a penny for each one you break."

"I think he has the idea they make him look like a television western hero. But he gets mad when I call him Chief Big Cloud."

"The worst thing about the population explosion is that whenever anybody has a baby the father gives Elmer another cigar. If that isn't a good argument for birth control, I never heard one."

"You understand I don't mind a man lighting up a cigar in the office. Elmer—but the secretaries complain it makes them ill. Why don't you just wait and smoke them at home? Surely your wife doesn't mind."

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

JFK Campaigns to Get More Democrats Elected

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy's campaign to get more Democrats elected to Congress in November raises a natural question: How did he do with this present one run by Democrats?

The answer has to be mixed. In this Congress, where Democrats far outnumber Republicans, hardly any big item he asked got through unaltered. Yet, over-all Congress put through a number of his major requests. It also killed some major ones.

It has been a tardy, dawdling Congress. Until a few weeks ago Kennedy seemed due for a robust flattening. Then, with members anxious to get home for the elections, Congress picked up speed and did important work.

It is still here, though, winding up, after the longest session since 1951 in the Korean War. That year it quit Oct. 20.

Power Called Lethal
In a democratic society like this it would be astonishing, perhaps lethal, if Congress were so submissive to the executive it gave him precisely and without question everything he asked.

This one didn't with Kennedy. He got much or most of what he wanted, he had to accept compromise measures.

In a very broad sense Kennedy handled both houses of Congress, not like the scrappy and head-knocking President Truman, but like President Eisenhower. He leaned over backward to avoid personal conflicts even with those in the Capitol who were wrecking some of his programs totally or tearing big holes in them.

But his administration put in a lot of work behind the scenes, with his aides working on individual members of Congress, sometimes with pathetic results.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, Arkansas Democrat and chairman of the very powerful House Ways and Means Committee, was totally against Kennedy's medical care program for the aged. That was it. The program died.

There were efforts Kennedy could have made—like broadcasts to try to rally popular support for his program, hoping the people would put pressure on senators and representatives. He did little of this.

He tried it once on the medical care program but talked off the cuff and the talk was far from his best.

It's true, as he's saying now in his campaigning around the country, that the Republicans in Congress repeatedly harpooned many of his programs.

But so did a lot of his own party members, particularly Southern Democrats who teamed up with Republicans again and again to frustrate him.

If the Democrats had stuck together, voting as a party, they could have drowned the out-be in the making for the United States next year. And they think this might involve other nations.

Deflation Called a Bugaboo Of Stock Market Observers

By SAM DAWSON

AP Business News Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—Deflation is the new bugaboo of a small but growing group of stock market and business observers.

A few months back a more vocal group was worrying about inflation—sharp rises in the prices of goods and marked cheapening of the dollar.

Some of them still are, mainly because the prospect of an increasing treasury deficit could pressure monetary inflation.

But more are now talking about the prospect of deflation. That is, a drop in commodity prices and those of basic industrial products, and still weaker stock prices that might forecast, and nurture, a recession that could become world wide.

Just as the inflationary scare has yet to show any signs of materializing, so deflationary fears here and abroad may be only brooding of trouble.

Weakness of stock markets in the United States, followed by declining markets in many other financial centers, has set the stage for the deflation specter. A bear market brings all sorts of pessimists out of the wings under the gaze of a disillusioned public.

More factual is a long period in which most commodity prices have remained below their former highs. Some industrial prices are being cut. Example: weakness in some steel product prices.

Farther afield, those who talk of a chance of deflation ahead base it on fears a new recession may

Smith, Vaughn Scholarship, $50.

Secretary Attends Honorary Meeting

Mrs. Kathryn Smith, placement secretary for the school of education, attended a triannual convention of Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honorary, in Madison, Wisconsin, the first part of September this year.

Phi Kappa Phi, founded at Oregon State University in 1924, is unique among honor societies in that it is not limited to certain fields.

Students from all over the world in any field of study are eligible for election if they meet the requirements set up. At Oregon State University a minimum of 3.25 for graduating seniors is required and an average above 3.75 will qualify a graduate student. Also three faculty members may be elected each year.

Achievement Recognized

Students who have shown highest achievement for nearly three years may be elected spring term of their junior year and be initiated when they are seniors. Elections to Phi Kappa Phi are not purely academic, though. Also considered are the person's character and qualities of manhood and womanhood.

Mrs. Smith, the delegate from the local chapter to the convention, holds the office of secretary-treasurer of the Corvallis chapter. She felt this trip was interesting because out of the 81 chapters of Phi Kappa Phi in the world, 32 were represented.

Describes Campus

"The weather was delightful and the campus was beautiful," continued Mrs. Smith.

She went on to remark upon how close the buildings were built to each other on the Wisconsin campus. She explained that they were built in this fashion due to the extremely cold weather in the winter.

Another interesting note brought out in the interview was that on this Wisconsin campus the fraternities and dorms are all built around a lake, with each one having its own private boat dock.

Mint Disease Under Study Now At OSU

Chemical soil treatments which may allow mint production to return to fields heavily infested with verticillium will be now under intensive study at Oregon State University and may be one answer in the fight by Oregon's mint industry against the disease.

Dr. C. E. Horner, plant pathologist with the OSU Agricultural Experiment Station, reports that by applying certain agricultural chemicals to the soil, it appears possible to clear infested land of verticillium so that mint may once again be grown on a short-term basis.

Verticillium wilt is a soil borne disease caused by a fungus that can lay dormant in a field for several years and then suddenly become active when a susceptible host plant, such as mint, is planted and stimulates the germination of the seed-like resting bodies of the fungus. Only a few crops are affected by the mint strain of the disease.

8,000 Acres Affected

Verticillium wilt, which first became serious in Oregon in 1953, has taken about 8,000 acres out of mint production so far and is infesting more land each year. It is responsible for driving the mint industry from the East Coast to the Midwest and finally to the Pacific Northwest. Mint cannot survive in a heavily infested field.

At present, the disease is destroying between 1500 and 2000 acres of mint a year and there is no end in sight because no means of stopping it has been found, Dr. Horner explained. Oregon is maintaining its mint production, about a $5 million a year industry, by planting new land to mint each year.

On small-scale field plots at Corvallis, OSU researchers have found that by applying about 200 pounds of active chemical material per acre, they could achieve a degree of control which would allow the land to produce mint for at least three years before the soil becomes heavily infested once more.

Test Results Favorable

During the just ended 1962 season, similar tests were made on larger fields leased from growers, with favorable results. The materials being tested are mylone, vapam, vorlex and telone, Dr. Horner said. Oil from the test fields is now being evaluated for flavor and chemical residue.

WHAT KIND OF MAN HANDLES A BUSINESS VENTURE BEST?

A midwestern college audience recently heard this answer in a talk by A.T. & T. Board Chairman, Frederick R. Kappel

"To us this is an important question because we hire nearly 3000 college graduates yearly. To get an answer we went to our own files and examined the records of nearly 17,000 people. We checked each man's comparative success against what he achieved in college.

"As a group, the scholars won handsly. Of the men who stood among the top third in salary for their level of experience, more than half were also in the top third of their college class. Only a quarter were in the bottom third.

"And contrary to age-old beliefs, extracurricular activities proved a lesser indicator unless the individual had an outstanding achievement. Mere 'joining' was not enough.

"The study indicates, at least as far as the Bell System goes, that there's little opportunity for college students who practice 'diplomaship'—the belief that a diploma automatically leads to job success. Such thinking will not make telephone service what we know it can be.

"The men we want are men with intelligence plus those other attributes that give you the feel, the sense that they will make things move and move well—men who want to excel and are determined to work at it.

"Nothing short of excellence will do."

Oregon State Upsets Indians, 27-0

Baker to Burke Shines Again!

By SCOTT THOMPSON
Sports Editor

Oregon State's upset minded gridders pulled what could be one of the major turn-about on the west coast Saturday when they flew past the Stanford Indians, 27-0. Going into the tussle, the Indians were two touch-down favorites to everyone except the Beavers.

The Terry Baker to Vern Burke passing combo once again proved to be the difference as it did in the Iowa State contest.

Baker completed 11 out of 15 attempts for the record, but his average could have been much better if several of his pin-point passes had been handled the way they usually are. Besides showing his usual great throwing form, the Beaver signal-caller ran for 49 yards in 11 attempts and two touchdowns.

Baker Adds To Total
Adding to a great day, Baker snuck across for a two-point conversion on Oregon State's initial score.

Burke who was covered by two defenders for most of the battle, hauled in eight aerials for 107 yards to remain the national leader in this department. Actually he caught nine tosses, but once he landed out of bounds so the pass was ruled incomplete.

RACING
PARIS — Saltikoff, a 40-1 shot, led a parade of French horses over the finish line in the $27,000 Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe as America's Carry Back came home tenth in the field of 24.

NEW YORK — Pams Ego ($26) ridden by Manuel Ycaza, won the $110,500 Frittelle Stakes at Belmont Park after Smart Deb and Affectionately gave way through the stretch.

CHICAGO — Sky Gem ($7.20) took the lead from the front-running Salesman Prior at the head of the stretch and went on to win the $30,300 Hawthorne Juvenile Stakes.

ALBANY, Calif. — Sea Orbit ($4.40) romped to a three-length victory in the $16,000 William G. Gilmore Handicap at Golden Gate Fields.

half. This was a 91-yard drive that ended when the great Mr. "B" snuck over from the one on a fourth down and goal try. The touchdown came with just 18 seconds remaining in the half.

Tim Ankerson made the extra point and the Orangemen went into the dressing room with a 15-point lead.

The Beaver's last two touch-

FULLBACK BROOKER M. WASHINGTON is shown diving up the middle for a short gain against the Stanford Indians. Later in the game Washington broke loose for a 38-yard run only to fumble the ball on the two. OSU won the tussle 27-0. (Photo by Stone).

downs came in the final three minutes of action after the foe had traded punts for most of the third and fourth quarters.

Dan Espalin intercepted a Stanford pass on the Indian 13 and raced into the promised land untouched. Ankerson's kick was wide to the right and the men from Corvallis led 21-0.

Queen Shines
Just before the game end, when Oregon State had sent in their substitutes, the Orange and Black scored again. This time it was a 15-yard pass from Sophomore Gordon Queen to another Sophomore Len Frketch for another score.

Queen tried to run the ball across for the try after, but was stopped a yard short and the Beavers had their final margin of 27-0.

The Bay Area sports writers voted Terry Baker the outstanding back award and then followed up by acknowledging Burke as top lineman.

Next week Coach Tommy Prohro's Staters will take on the Washington Huskies in Portland's Multnomah Stadium. It will take another great effort if the Orangemen are to get by the Huskies, but maybe the Beavers have found themselves now.

This coming weekend should tell the tale.

Nobody ever lost an Eagle Tabsnap® under the dresser
MANY men who would like to wear tab collar shirts do not do so because they object to the tyranny of collar buttons. It is not just that collar buttons are hard to find when you need them. (Contrary to popular belief collar buttons do not always roll under furniture. The only sure way of finding a collar button is to walk around barefoot in the dark until you step on it. Now there is an experience.)
★ No, there is something else: some men are simply not built for collar buttons. Their Adam's apples are in the wrong place. Or their hands are not the right shape for wrestling with all those empty collar button holes. So they end up wilty and out of sorts before they ever hit the street. It is the haberdashery equivalent of cutting yourself shaving. ★ But that is a thing of the past. An Eagle Tabsnap Shirt is secured by one simple, inaudible click. As you can see from the illustration, it lies inconspicuously flat and neat. The snap enclosure is covered by the same material as the shirting itself. Eagle Tabsnaps are available in a wide range of colors and patterns, with short sleeves or regular. ★ Yes, it appears that the collar button will join the button fly in the museum of clothing antiquities. Say, that is a good idea. If you can find your collar button please send it to us and we will start one (The Afflerbach Collection) right here in Quakertown. In return we will tell you where in your town you can find Eagle Shirts. ★ Otherwise how would you know?
