Cambridge Announces
New Scholarship Plan

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (I.P.)—A new program of area scholarships which will enable students from all parts of the country to compete for large awards on a regional basis is the plan of the Radcliffe Scholarship Committee for 1949.

Management Society
To Meet Thursday

The Society for the Advancement of Management will have a business meeting, Thursday, October 21, at 7:30 p.m. in industrial arts 135, according to William Peterson, '49, president.

The society, which has been at Oregon State for two years, is open to industrial arts and industrial engineering students.

The purpose of the society is to familiarize the student with all phases of management problems—production, distribution, finance, administration, and industrial relation, in the engineering manner.

The possibilities of reducing society dues will be discussed, and at the conclusion of the meeting, the latest Oregon State football films will be shown.

Hall Holds Fireside
Stiner hall's first social event this term was a fireside Friday evening in the main lounge at Hudson hall. The lounge has just been redecorated and some new lounge furniture was put into use for the occasion.

Roger Kertz, '50, social chairman, was in charge of serving refreshments and was assisted by several residents of Sackett hall. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Martin and Mrs. Cyrene Barratt.

Monrovia, Liberia, was named for U. S. President James Monroe.

Mlle. Magazine Offers Contest

Madeleine, national fashion magazine, opened its annual contest for College Board members and 1949 College Guest Editors recently. College Guest editors will be sent to New York, June 6 to July 1, expenses paid, plus a regular salary. They will assist in writing and editing the annual August college issue of the magazine.

Any undergraduate at an accredited college or junior college is eligible for the College board, according to the rules of the magazine. They must submit a report of a two page story on campus life, a personal snapshot, plus complete data on college activities, major and minor, class year, home address, and jobs.

All material must be mailed to the College Board Editors, Madeleine, 122 East 42 Street, New York 12, New York. Postmark will be accepted no later than midnight November 1, 1948.

Twenty Guest Editors will be selected from this board on the basis of three assignments given by the magazine during the year. Upon acceptance to this position, candidates will take full part in a scheduled calendar of activities in New York this summer, with emphasis on future training and education needed in their chosen fields.

Horticulture Students Visit Truck Farms

Students in vegetable handling and distribution from the horticulture department made a field trip to the Lake Labish country near Brooks last Thursday to observe crops still remaining on pasture. Celery was the chief crop studied.

The class was met by Ellis Kent, field supervisor for the Labish Celery Growers association, who discussed problems encountered in growing celery, onions, lettuce, and carrots on lake land.

At Brooks students viewed cold storage facilities, storage for onions, and car trackage and loading.

Foresters Burn Slash
Fourteen forestry students burned slash Saturday and Sunday for the Oregon Pulp and Paper company near Taft to help reduce the fire hazard in that area.

Approximately 400 acres were set afire by Saturday night according to Wayne G. Hubbard, '48, of the Willamette Valley Tree farms. The total area burned by Sunday night was not determined.

Twenty-five foot carnivorous lizards, rivaling the dragons of antiquity, inhabit Komodo Island, Indonesia.

Madrigal Elects Officers
Madrigal, women's choral group, recently elected Joanne Benschader, president; Mary Louise Powell, vice-president; Lois Frind, secretary, all '51; and Nannette Prestwood, '49, treasurer.

The chorus consists of 140 members this term. Rehearsal, under the direction of D. P. Sites, assistant professor of music, have begun.

'Looks Good Either Way'
Cornell to Record Foreign Broadcasts

ITHACA, N. Y. (I.P.)—Eavesdropping, on a global scale, will become a part of modern language classes at Cornell University this fall. Radio broadcasts from France, Spain, Italy and other countries—even Pakistan—will be recorded by the university's division of modern languages to provide real-life material for instructional purposes.

Monitoring of the foreign broadcasts will be made possible with $10,000 worth of radio, electrical transcription and other communications equipment installed by the Gray Manufacturing company of Hartford, Conn., as part of a cooperative research project, it was announced here.

The equipment is expected to be used as well to make recordings of class work and to make recording devices available to individual students for home-study purposes. Program Began in 1946

The new project is part of an experimental program which began two years ago when Dr. J. Milton Cowan, director, and his colleagues of the division of modern languages at Cornell set out to determine how the intensive language instruction methods of the wartime training programs might be converted to peacetime academic use.

Dr. Cowan, who served during the war as special consultant on language training to the secretary of war, describes the first two years of the experiment as successful.

As part of the new program, all language instruction at Cornell has been centered in the division of modern languages. The curriculum has now revised so that students now devote one-third of their classroom time to language instruction. Most of the work is concerned with oral exercises. Emphasis is on small classes under the guidance of "native speakers."

Effort Yields Results
"Experience shows that highly concentrated effort for short periods yields better results than the former systems," Dr. Cowan says. "Although we have divorced the elementary phase from the association which it had with literature, we feel that in the long run we will turn out people better equipped to take literature work because of more efficient organization of their early instruction."

That the new method is paying off was indicated recently when a language examination given to students at two other institutions at the end of two years of study was administered to students at Cornell at the end of the first year of instruction.

New Cut System Tried at Emory

EMORY, Ga. (I.P.)—With the old method of keeping daily records on absences in the dean's office abandoned, a new cut system has gone into effect at Emory University.

Upper division students will no longer be worried with explaining each absence to the dean's office, according to an announcement from the office of Dean J. G. Stipe.

The new set-up will mean that individual faculty members will institute and enforce regulations for the upper division students in their own classes. When a faculty member decides that a student's absences have become excessive, he will report that student to the dean for disciplinary action.

In regard to the definition of "excessive absences" Stipe said that, in general, absences should be considered excessive when they become so numerous or so frequent as to jeopardize the student's chances of doing satisfactory work.

"In any case," said the dean, "the five consecutive absences will automatically be reported to the dean's office for investigation."

"In making this change," Dean Stipe declared, "the administration is expressing confidence in the adulthood and seriousness of purpose of the upper division students. At the same time, it is recognizing the fact that some courses call for more stringent absence regulations than others and that the decision should rest between the teacher and the student."

Delta Sigs Initiate 3
Leland Twigg, '51, and Wilmont Eckhout and Gordon Fruits, both '50, were recently initiated into Beta Epsilon chapter of Delta Sigma Phi.

Tom Marquis, '50, a University of Oregon student, transferred from Beta Xi chapter at the University of California, was also initiated.

A boat trip from one end of Indonesia to the other is longer than crossing the Atlantic—3,200 miles as against 3,012 from Ambrose Light, New York, to Fastnet, Ireland.
