Showcase for Talent

arts festival designed as a showcase for student achievement in the varied fields of creativity. Officially begun last Monday and ending April 23, the events of the festival include a painting exhibit now on display in the MU concourse, prose and poetry readings, and an exhibition of modern dance.

All work presented in the festival is by the students of OSC. Recognition for achievement in the arts seldom comes to those who deserve it unless a spot light is thrown upon their work by people who believe such recognition is merited. This was the motive of the organizers of the 1960 Campus Arts Festival. It is their hope that this will become an annual spring term event

Quality is emphasized throughout the areas of the festival. The idea is not to cover the campus with artwork, to that it is "primarily technical."

Now in progress on campus is an deluge the public ear with literary presentation, nor to have infinitely varied and extensive dance demonstrations. Rather the committee behind this event hopes to present the very best of student achievement even at a sacrifice of impressive quantity. The art exhibition was judged by members of the faculty; they have also consented to review the literary readings.

> In spite of the difficulties characteristic of new endeavors and possible lack of student interest in the festival, it can certainly be given credit for forward action toward the total realization of Oregon State University. A check of the campus calendar for the dates and times of the events of the festival will be a guide to worthwhile view of student progress in the creative arts within an institution constantly reminded

Beavers Get

The Portland club gave the Beavers six racing shells and skulls which they had been unable to use for years. Lack of interest, along with a shortage of members prevented their club from being active. Also, difficulties were encountered on the Wil amette river with crowded aunching conditions and competition with larger boats. Two of the shells are four-man shells without coxswains, three are double sculls, and the last a single. The single is unique in tself, being 26 feet long and 13

The shells were hauled back from Portland in one trip and will be reconditioned and put into use by the Beavers in hopes that club members will enter the single and double Olympic events. The Beaver oarsmen have never rowed in single or double sculls but are anxious to begin. This should prove interesting because.
