OSU parking problems the same as last year

By ALAN LITCHFIELD
of the Barometer

Parking tickets are upsetting and costly, but parking on campus is a Catch-22 situation, says an OSU student in a letter to the OSU Traffic Division.

Ellen Hall, a senior in liberal arts, has complained that the Corvallis community doesn't want students to park on its streets, but OSU doesn't provide enough spaces on campus.

Hall wrote the letter to appeal a $30 parking ticket she received Sept. 30 for parking in a driving lane. In the letter she stated her appreciation for the division's efforts to regulate orderly parking, but she feels parking on campus is "unfair, frustrating and the worst part of campus life."

Hall said searching for parking areas and paying fines is "a horrid way to start the term when energies should be going into classes, not parking hassles." According to Diane Patterson, traffic division manager, there are 2,818 student parking spaces available. This is compared to the 5,833 permits issued last year.

Lopsided numbers can also be noticed in the faculty and staff situation as well. Last year 2,735 permits were issued for the 1,817 spaces available. Patterson said there are 1,665 spaces available for handicapped parking and other reserved spaces.

The traffic committee is looking at ways to remedy this imbalance. A solution would be to add extra spaces and other parking lots. Expanding the parking area on Campus Way between 11th and 15th is one alternative.

Parking on campus is "unfair, frustrating and the worst part of campus life."
—Ellen Hall

A second option would be to create a new parking garage. At this point the committee is working with a contractor to decide the best possible place for such a structure. Patterson said one possibility would be the paylot by the OSU Bookstore. Other locations at this time are being considered.

Until changes are made, students will continue to search for parking areas. Patterson said vacant spaces and lots are out there.

She said a student parking lot adjacent to Gill Coliseum is frequently unfilled most of the time. Furthermore, the lot surrounding Parker Stadium requiring no permits is often devoid of cars as well.

In any case, if a student decides not to take these opportunities and parks elsewhere illegally, the penalties are the same as last year.

The charge for parking in a driving zone or a handicapped zone is $30. Parking without a permit in the wrong area or in a no parking area will cost the offender $10.

Student parking permits continue to be the same price as last year, $27 for cars and $9 for motorcycles.

According to Patterson, citations and traffic tickets are the only income for the traffic division because they are not funded by the state. She said a total of 19,702 fines were issued last year.

Compounding the problem for a couple of days will be the filming of "The Finish Line" on campus next week. According to Traffic Division Director Orville Powell, the parking lot south of Moreland Hall and several spaces on Jefferson across from Weatherford Hall will be closed on the evening of Oct. 11 through Oct. 12.

Lack of parking has forced some students to take measures into their own hands. Students are forced to park where they can, even if it means on the sidewalk, in order to get to class on time.

Statewide student voter drive now underway

By BRYAN DRENNEN
of the Barometer

Portland — The Coalition of Oregon Students for Voter Participation (COSVP) announced its goal of registering 10,000 new student voters Wednesday at a news conference at Portland State University.

The coalition, comprised of several Oregon student leaders and student associations, launched a three-part program aimed at the state's college students — a group notoriously lax in its participation in elections.

The program intends to register 10,000 new student voters. They will provide information concerning registration, voting and voting by absentee ballot, and motivate students to get out and cast their ballots.

Between 1974 and 1980 the number of 18- to 24-year-olds who voted dropped from over 50 percent to less than 40 percent, according to Lisa Kaatz, chair of Voter Participation at Lewis and Clark College and president of the Oregon Student Public Interest Research Group (OSPIRG).

"This is why OSPIRG and COSVP are taking action to increase student participation in the election process," she said.

Kaatz attributed poor college student involvement to confusion about voter registration and absentee ballots, plus the feeling students have that the current issues and candidates don't affect them.

In an effort to remedy this, COSVP's intensive voter education program will go into effect after the Oct. 18 registration deadline. Students on campus will be conducting forums on candidates and current issues. The Oregon Student Lobby (OSL) will also publish a Student Voter's Guide to be available the week of Oct. 16.

COSVP is composed of the student groups of OSPIRG, the Oregon Student Lobby, the Community Colleges of Oregon Student Association and Commission (CCOSAC), Reed College, Lewis and Clark College, the University of Portland, and the student governments from OSU, the University of Oregon, Portland State, Lane Community College, and Eastern Oregon State College.

"Voting is a privilege, not a burden," said Chris Voigt, ASOSU student body president and OSL's chairman of board.

Program offers English skills for foreign wives

Hyeryun Park, a former freshman English instructor at Ewha Women's University in Seoul, Korea, and her husband Seungjin, a graduate student and teaching assistant in computer science, spend time with their three-year-old daughter Inhye.

Wives of foreign scholars at OSU often find living in America a lonely, next-to-impossible task if they do not speak English.

But with the help of the Crossroads Conversational English School, now in its third year, women from other countries can learn the basic verbal skills. They can attend two classes a week designed to teach rudimentary things in English like making appointments, filling out forms and grocery shopping.

The program also serves as a cross-cultural meeting ground for foreign students' wives since there were 100 participants last year from 17 different countries. Child care is available during the classes, which run Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. at the Good Samaritan Episcopal Church on 35th and Harrison. The cost is $15 a term for the classes and 25 cents an hour ($10 a term) for child care.

Rosemary Stoltenberg, director of the program, said many wives get very lonely staying at home, afraid to venture out and meet new people.

"They are very cautious about going into the community, as we (would be) in foreign lands, since they can't speak much English and have not met anyone here yet," said Stoltenberg. "The program is designed to make them feel at home, meet new people and discover that they are not alone."

The program is organized into three basic skill levels: beginning, intermediate and advanced. The beginning level is for people who know little or no English and uses pictures, workbooks and visible objects as tools of instruction.

"We teach them much the way children are taught when first learning a language," said Susan Schwartz, coordinator of Crossroads, the program sponsoring the conversational school.

"They learn English they can use immediately, like shopping and asking questions."

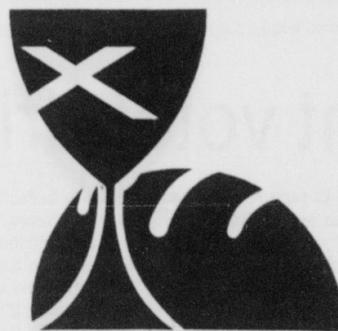

The intermediate and advanced levels focus more on elaborately spoken English like giving speeches about their homeland and forming activity groups that share each other's arts, crafts and cooking skills.

Schwartz said the experience is really an inter-cultural relationship because the program is run by volunteers from Corvallis, Lebanon, Albany and Philomath. These volunteers want to have some interaction with the foreigners either because they have been to their homeland before or never have and find this a suitable substitute.

"The students learn about our lifestyles and the volunteers learn about theirs," said Stoltenberg. "We have holiday parties around the end of October to show them what Halloween is and also at the end of fall term so their families can learn who Santa

Beaver Club will return some sin tax donations

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Supporters of a measure that would increase beer and cigarette taxes to fund college sports in Oregon said they will refund $29,000 in political contributions that opponents had alleged violated state law.

Bob Herndon, director of the Beaver Club, an OSU booster group, said Wednesday he will return about 50 donations that would have been used to support the pro-Ballot Measure 5 campaign.

Opponents of the measure had charged that channelling the donations through the Beaver Club violated state election laws.

Herndon said Roger Martin, the campaign manager for measure 5, had told him the wording of a letter sent out by the Beaver Club soliciting such contributions had been an "innocent mistake."

"To correct the error, we have been instructed to return any contributions made to the Beaver Club as a result of that mailing. That will be done."

—Bob Herndon

"To correct the error," Herndon said, "we have been instructed to return any contributions made to the Beaver Club as a result of that mailing. That will be done."

The initiative, which will be on the Nov. 8 ballot, would add a one-cent wholesale tax on a can of beer or pack of cigarettes and use the extra money to fund athletics at the state's colleges and universities.

Paul Romain, chairman of the Coalition Against Regressive Taxation, a group opposing the measure, charged during the weekend that the club had violated a state law prohibiting political contributions from being channelled through a third party.

Romain said he is pleased the Beaver Club is returning the $29,000, but said he will pursue a formal complaint he filed this week with the state Elections Division.

The complaint also deals with other contributions to the Beaver Club and similar donations to the University of Oregon Foundation and the Duck Club of Portland, Romain said.

PSU president Sicuro should be fired

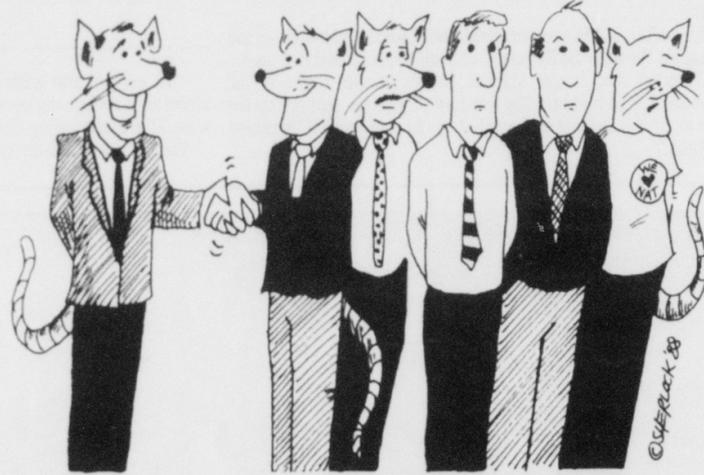

Imagine your university president had made himself famous by establishing a dictatorial rule marked by episodes in which he fired a student newspaper adviser shortly after the appearance of an unfavorable story about him; and later used an organization designed to raise scholarship funds as a university bank, from which he extracted funds for travel expenditures and other perks while a scholarship account ran out of money. Suppose this president had been opposed by a majority of faculty members and that many of these faculty members felt his presence was so detrimental to the university that they were willing to publicly ask for his removal, at risk of being fired later.

Then suppose the only way you could get rid of the guy was to convince his employers — the State Board of Higher Education — to appoint a committee to "review" his performance. And imagine that the board listened to this request, but that three of the five members they appointed to look into your complaints had been actively involved in this infamous president's hiring and that one of them was listed on his resume. Suppose that you also found out that this same president had been hired, even though he was not among the top 25 chosen by a committee that was to select someone for his position; he became president largely because some of the same people appointed to review his performance now had insisted on his selection then.

Unfortunately for Portland State University students and faculty, the above is a true story and the star of this sordid little tale is none other than their president, Natale Sicuro.

Hopefully, for the sake of all those involved in Oregon higher education, the Oregon State Board of Higher Education will not embarrass us all again by ignoring input by faculty and students on the issue of who should run their university, as they did when they fired popular U of O president Paul Olum.

The board will meet to review and "act on" the recommendation of its committee Oct. 10 in a closed session. It is to be hoped that their action will be the firing of Sicuro and that their final decision will not be delayed until their Oct. 22 meeting in far-away Klamath Falls. (CC)

Welcome to OSU, we're America's University

By MARK BRUNSON
of the Barometer

In case you missed it, the big news from the OSU administration last week was that this university is making its first serious foray into the modern world of Madison-Avenue-style marketing.

A new task force will plunge headlong into the exciting arena of full-contact image-making in hopes of making Americans more aware of what Oregon State University has to offer. Not only can this effort help OSU attract more top students and research grants, but it should help Oregon taxpayers understand why they should heed our biennial pleas for bigger budgets.

Well, I'm all for it. In fact, I'd like to offer an idea upon which to build our new campaign. After a summer of long and oh-so-careful study — conducted via the grueling couch-potato method — I've isolated the single most effective marketing technique known to man: pandering to patriotism.

OSU can capitalize on this circumstance by adopting a simple strategy. From now on, let's call ourselves "America's University." Soon, red-blooded patriots everywhere will place their hands over their hearts at the mere mention of Benny Beaver's name.

Immediately you might ask this question: What right does OSU have to call itself America's university, when there are hundreds of other U.S. colleges that are just as American as ours (including one in Washington, D.C., that is actually named The American University)?

And the answer is: No right whatsoever. But what right did the Dallas Cowboys have to call themselves America's Team? What right does the manufacturer of Pall Malls have to call itself the American Tobacco Co.? None whatsoever. That didn't stop them, and it needn't stop us either.

Appeals to patriotism are as old as the advertising business itself. However, they used to be more subtle. Chevrolet never claimed to be America's car, it just dropped hints with its jingle about "baseball, hot dogs, apple pie and Chevrolet."

But in the 1980s subtlety has been taboo. The nadir of patriotism — at least in consumer advertising — came during the 1984 Summer Olympics. Already buzzing over our stunning military defeat of Cuban construction workers in Grenada, Americans were primed for the ecstasy of kicking butt in athletic competitions where the main non-boycotting competition was Andorra and Nauru. Suddenly every product was emblazoned with the initials U.S.A. We were exhorted to buy America's jeans, America's insurance policy, America's underarm deodorant.

Things have calmed down since then. Even during the just-past 1988 Olympics, when NBC subjected viewers to the greatest commercial barrage ever unleashed, there were only sporadic attempts to use patriotism as a come-on.

The fad hasn't died entirely, however. A couple of examples come to mind. One comes to us courtesy of General Motors, which informs us that "The great American road belongs to Buick." If so, I have an important question: If the great American road really belongs to Buick, how come Buick won't repair all the chuckholes?

An even more grating appeal comes from Wrigley's chewing gum, which invites us to "Take another piece of America." Let's think about that for a moment. A bizarre image begins to take shape. Here we have this great consumer, ripping off chunks of America, grinding those chunks between his or her molars until all the essence is depleted, then affixing these now-useless pieces of America to the undersides of countless classroom desks and restaurant tables. Truly a frightening picture (although, come to think of it, it is a pretty apt metaphor for our natural resource policy during the Reagan years.)

Obviously, if we truly love our country, this sort of desecration must stop. Ideally, the Congress should register the words "America" and "U.S.A." as a trademark, and sue advertisers who usurp the trademarks for commercial gain just as we now sue authors and songwriters for copyright infringement.

It'll never happen, though. Why not? Because the bill would have to be signed by the President of the United States. And these days, the worst perpetrators of the patriotism scam are the people trying to sell us our next president. Democrats assail Quayle for joining the Indiana National Guard. Republicans dump on Dukakis for refusing to violate the Constitution by requiring teachers to lead the Pledge of Allegiance. Bush began to overtake Dukakis in the polls only when his strategists figured out how to wrap him up tightly in the stars and stripes.

So pandering to patriotism won't be outlawed anytime soon. In that case, we at OSU might as well jump on the red-white-and-blue bandwagon. Sure it's offensive. But it works.

Saferide for credit

To the editor:

Anyone on campus looking for a fun and challenging three credit course that will apply to your Humanities requirements? Not to mention that you will get to be involved in student government? You can sign up for the Women's Studies (WS) 406 and become an office worker, a driver, or a dispatcher for ASOSU's Saferide program. You can be a part of ASOSU's goal to make OSU a safer campus while learning about current rape awareness issues. Here's what's required: a 6 hour Rape Awareness training session, a driver/dispatch/office worker training session, a regular weekly shift, a few weekend shifts throughout the term, and three reaction papers written in response to a reading packet. For more information, call us at the Student Activities Center at 754-2101 or come see us in MU East 249. This is an excellent opportunity to better your campus while earning graded credit. Consider it.

Check language usage

To the editor:

What is the English First movement? (Nonstandard Deviations Sept. 27, 1988) A movement to promote one national language for the United States of America, a movement to abolish foreign language at OSU, or both? It was not clear from your article.

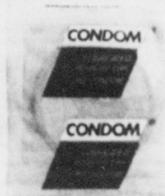

The use of your foreign language skills made me curious. You mention Spanish 101, but how about French? You correctly noted that Corvallis was not an English name, but neither is Marysville. And German? Of the 14 German words you used, seven were either spelled incorrectly, not capitalized or used in the wrong grammatical form.

There are many arguments against several "official" languages (e.g. the tremendous expenses involved in translating official documents correctly into, for example, Spanish and Navajo). And there are many arguments for promoting foreign language study. Use of a foreign language when traveling in foreign countries is only one of them. Respect for and better understanding of other cultures is even more important.

It is probably better to use whatever foreign languages you know incorrectly than not use them at all. But why not consult some of the experts on campus before committing a foreign word to the printing press. Don't think that nobody notices. In fact, it makes some people cringe.

EVERYONE TALKS ABOUT CHANGING THE WORLD. THIS YEAR 3750 PEOPLE WILL ACTUALLY DO IT.

Not everyone is cut out to change the world. After all, it takes education, skills and a spare two years.

Also a willingness to work. Hard.

This year 3,750 Americans will join the Peace Corps to do just that. They'll do things like build roads, plant forests and crops, teach English, develop small businesses, train community health workers, or even coach basketball. However, what they'll be doing isn't half as important as the fact that they'll be changing a little piece of the world...for the better.

And when they return, these 3,750 Americans will find that experience doing hard work will have another benefit. It's exactly what their next employers are looking for.

So, give the Peace Corps your next two years. And while you're out changing the world, you'll also be making a place in it for yourself.

Israel bars right-wing party from parliamentary elections

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel's elections committee Wednesday disqualified American-born Rabbi Meir Kahane's ultra right-wing party from November parliamentary elections, charging the party was racist.

Kahane, who advocates Israel's expulsion of Arabs and outlawing marriage between Arabs and Jews, planned to appeal the decision to the Israel's High Court, Kach spokesmen said.

Most political leaders supported the panel's move, but Kach followers said the exclusion was a political ploy to gain votes.

The action came as five protesters were shot and wounded in a clash between Palestinians and Israeli soldiers in the Israeli-occupied West Bank city of Nablus, an army spokesman said. Also, Nebaum Abu Hawille, 24, of the Balata refugee camp, died Wednesday from gunshot wounds suffered Sept. 26, officials at Jerusalem's Mokassed Hospital said.

The death raised to 268 the number of Palestinians killed in the nearly 10-month-old Palestinian uprising. Three Israelis also have been slain.

The Central Knesset Elections Committee, which oversees political campaigns for the Knesset, or parliament, voted 28-5 with three abstentions to remove all Kach party candidates, including Kahane, from the Nov. 1 ballot, panel spokeswoman Sarah Itzhaki said.

Kahane, who holds Kach's only seat in the current Knesset, has been shunned by Israeli politicians and news media because of his radical views. He advocates the annexation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and the forcibly expulsion of the 2.2 million Arabs living in Israel and the occupied territories.

Kahane, who was not available for comment, was first elected to the Knesset in 1984 after three unsuccessful attempts. He is campaigning to return to the 120-member parliament with an expanded mandate for his party. Voters cast ballots for party lists instead of individual candidates.

The elections panel, at its closed hearing, also voted 27-5 with four abstentions to disqualify the Kach party because it would harm democracy and the nation's Jewish character, said Itzhaki. The panel approved the disqualification under special legislation passed in 1985 providing for exclusion of any party deemed racist.

"We are not a racist movement at all," Kach party member Baruch Goldstein told Army Radio. "We are a Zionist movement operating in a Zionist state."

And Kach spokesman Gary Cooperberg charged: "We have a Knesset election committee made up of members who have a clear political interest in banning a party which they view as a potent recipient of their votes."

The 40-member election committee is made up of representatives of Israel's political parties with membership based on the number current Knesset seats held by each party.

Hirohito's health worsens

TOKYO (UPI) — Emperor Hirohito's condition took a slight turn for the worse Wednesday as doctors attempted to give the 87-year-old monarch two blood transfusions but had to cut the second one short when his body rejected it.

Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita canceled a weekend trip, and opposition party leaders called for a halt to attempts by conservatives to exploit the monarch's illness for political gain.

Court physicians gave Hirohito a half pint of blood in the afternoon, but had to stop a second transfusion in the evening after only a quarter pint because of a sudden rise in his pulse and blood pressure, a palace spokesman said.

In 17 days, doctors have given Hirohito 11.6 pints of blood, considerably more than his normal blood supply, and medical experts have said the new blood is putting a strain on the emperor's organs.

Hirohito, the oldest of the world's living monarchs, is battling a relapse of suspected abdominal cancer which began with heavy internal bleeding Sept. 19.

His fever rose 1 degree during the day to reach 100.9 F by 7 p.m. and internal bleeding was again detected, palace officials said.

"The emperor remained in stable condition, although he suffered slight internal bleeding this morning and received an additional transfusion," palace spokesman Kenji Maeda told a news conference.

Takeshita, citing the emperor's illness, canceled a trip to the northern island of Hokkaido where he was to have campaigned for tax reform on Sunday.

Opposition party members warned the public not to allow the ruling Liberal Democratic Party to use Hirohito's illness to push through its conservative political agenda.

Reagan denies signing assassination findings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House, claiming The Washington Post regurgitated an old story during the height of the political season, denied Wednesday that President Reagan signed intelligence authorizations that would have allowed assassinations.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater responded angrily to the front-page Post article that said Reagan had signed findings in 1984 and 1985 for aggressive covert operations — including wording that any actions carried out under orders would be "deemed" lawful if done in "good faith" — that sources told Post reporter Bob Woodward caused disputes within the government because it was generally considered "a license to kill."

Reagan, in a Rose Garden ceremony at the White House, said later that he had read the newspaper report and "was quite upset by it."

"No, back in 1981 I issued a directive that the United States would not permit assassinating anyone in any of the things we were doing and that continues to this day," Reagan told reporters.

Earlier, Fitzwater said, "This is an old story being rehashed again, interestingly timed and has no foundation."

Pointing to earlier revelations by Woodward in his book on the CIA, "Veil," the spokesman said, "I think this is an extraordinarily cheap shot. It's not true; it impugns the president in a way that the author himself has denied in previous stories," he said.

And asked several times if he believed the timing of the article was politically motivated, he added, "Well, I won't say the words...I'll let you judge for yourselves."

Fitzwater, who admitted he was responding to the headlines generated by the story, said, "It was a counter-terrorism finding designed to deal with terrorism activities but it did not authorize assassinations."

Vice President George Bush, asked about the report while campaigning in Littleton, Colo., said, "If I weren't in polite company, I'd tell you what I thought of a report like that."

Asked if it was true, Bush said, "Absolutely not. To circumvent the law against assassination...absolutely absurd. It's ironic that these outrageous charges surface from time to time. You just have to gun them down."

Fitzwater reiterated that an executive order signed by Reagan in 1981 and in effect in 1984-85, as well as now, specifically banned any involvement by U.S. intelligence agents in assassinations.

"The president did not authorize assassinations," the spokesman said, "That was not the intent of the finding and...the president's executive order of December 1981 was the United States policy on assassinations. The written and declared policy of the government and the president is that executive order, which prohibits assassinations."

Fitzwater declined to discuss the specific wording of the findings, which was the thrust of the Post story, which claimed key officials in the Reagan administration had wanted to undertake pre-emptive operations that might end in killings to combat increasing terrorist activity.

The officials also wanted legal protection from the existing executive order prohibiting the U.S. government from participating in an assassination, the newspaper said.

Study: Reagan's policies unpopular

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forty percent of Americans say Reagan administration policies have caused their financial situation to worsen and nearly half feel neither the Republicans nor the Democrats offer solutions for their money woes, a survey reported Wednesday.

The national poll by Money Magazine found a majority expect the economy to deteriorate, with the middle-class particularly pessimistic about their financial future.

It was the second year running that 40 percent of the 2,370 adult "financial heads of household" polled in the magazine's "Americans and Their Money" survey blamed Reagan policies for causing their financial situations to deteriorate.

Only 13 percent said Reagan's policies had helped and the rest said they were unaffected. Women were more likely than men to feel the president's policies have hurt them.

But only 28 percent of those polled said a Democrat in the White House would improve their finances. Even fewer — 26 percent — thought another Republican administration might help.

Forty-six percent said neither party would improve their fortunes.

"Those people seemed to say, 'A plague on both your houses,'" said pollster Sy Lieberman, who surveyed a cross-section of the American public in May and June. "I don't get the impression anyone thinks either party will help with their problems."

The sixth annual survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

Fifty-three percent said they expect major economic problems to hit the country next year.

"This includes sizable numbers of people who anticipate a return to double digit inflation, who believe the unemployment rate will climb to 10 percent or higher and who think we are in for a serious recession," Lieberman said.

Bentsen rebukes Quayle over Kennedy comparison

Debate focuses on ability to succeed to presidency

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle may not have won his debate with Lloyd Bentsen, but he did not, as Democrats hoped, self-destruct.

The 41-year-old senator, who has been hounded through the campaign by a glib and loose tongue that has taken him into deep water, was collected, cool and tightly restrained in the 90-minute confrontation.

At the same time, Bentsen, the 67-year-old patrician Democrat from the lower Rio Grande of Texas, came off very much as expected — knowledgeable, mature and experienced.

Bentsen, drawing on his long career in business and the Senate, was precise in his answers, detailed in his replies and very much the wise old professor trying to pass on knowledge to a youthful student.

With Quayle under tight wraps and Bentsen disdaining negative attacks for much of the time, the debate — only the second ever between vice presidential candidates — was almost gentlemanly.

At one point, however, Bentsen unsheathed his stiletto, sank it deep into Quayle and for a fleeting moment had the Indiana senator glaring in anger.

It came shortly after Quayle noted he had as much experience in Congress as John F. Kennedy when the late president ran for the White House.

In cold, measured tones, Bentsen said, "I served with Jack Kennedy. He was a friend of mine. Senator — you're no Jack Kennedy."

Quayle, interrupting Bentsen and glaring at him from the few feet that separated their lecterns at the Civic Auditorium in Omaha, Neb., said coldly, "Senator, that was really uncalled for."

To which Bentsen replied, "You're the one that was making the comparison, senator. And I'm the one who knew him well. And frankly, I think you're so far apart in the objectives you choose for your country that I did not think the comparison was well taken."

The question that plagued Quayle the most — it was asked three times — is what he would do if a tragedy befell a President Bush and he should find himself as the new president of the United States.

At one point, Quayle said he would say a "prayer for myself," at another he dismissed the question as "hypothetical."

In his last try, the junior senator from Indiana said he would meet with the Cabinet and advisers and added, "I will be prepared to carry out the responsibilities of president of the United States."

Bentsen did not focus as closely on Republican presidential candidate George Bush. His attacks included Ronald Reagan, the administration and the record of the past two terms.

And Bentsen smoothly bridged tough questions about his acceptance of more contributions from political action committees than any senator running, as well as policy differences — including aid for the Contras — with Dukakis.

Poll: Bentsen winner, presidential

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An ABC poll of 637 registered voters who watched the debate Wednesday night showed that Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen won.

With a 4.5 percent margin of error, the poll showed that 51 percent of those interviewed thought Bentsen won, 27 percent thought Republican candidate Dan Quayle won and 22 percent thought it was a tie.

Asked if Bentsen was qualified for the presidency, 87 percent of those interviewed said yes, 12 percent said no and 1 percent were unsure.

When the same question was asked of Quayle's qualifications, 48 percent of those polled responded yes, 49 percent said no and 3 percent were unsure.

Before the debate, 50 percent of those polled said they would vote for George Bush, 45 percent said they would vote for Michael Dukakis and 5 percent said they were unsure.

After the debate, Bush's support was unchanged but Dukakis's increased slightly. Fifty percent said they would vote for Bush, 48 percent said they would support Dukakis and 2 percent said they were unsure.

Successful premier brings OSU JazzFest back

Spencer McPherson - The Daily Barometer

By TARA LEMMON
of the Barometer

Good news is in store for Corvallis jazz lovers with an encore of last year's OSU JazzFest, featuring four performances at the MU East Forum, which is scheduled for Oct. 21 through Nov. 6.

Last year's JazzFest, the first of its kind at OSU, was a success last year as attendance grew with each successive performance.

"We're anticipating this year's to be an even bigger success," said Rob Blakesley, OSU director of Jazz Ensembles.

"Last year they were just testing the water and found a large support group for jazz in the Corvallis area that enjoys all different types of jazz," he said. The JazzFest was organized last year by Michael Curtis, the previous director of Jazz Ensembles.

"If a person attends all of the scheduled concerts they will hear several different aspects of jazz, not just one," Blakesley said.

The Rebound Jazz Quartet, a "straight-ahead" jazz band, will perform Friday, Oct. 21, with admission at $3.

A European flavor of jazz can be heard for $4 when the Chris Lee/Colleen O'Brian Quintet perform on Friday, Oct. 28. Dixieland jazz, for a more "back-to-the-roots" sound, will be played by the Capitol City Jazz Band on Friday, Nov. 4, for $5 per ticket.

Premier vocal jazz can be heard for $5 when Nancy King teams up with the William Thomas Quartet for the final concert on Sunday, Nov. 6, Blakesley said.

All of the JazzFest performances will start at 8 p.m.

The first performance on Oct. 21 will be simulcast on KBVR-FM and KBVR television, according to Blakesley.

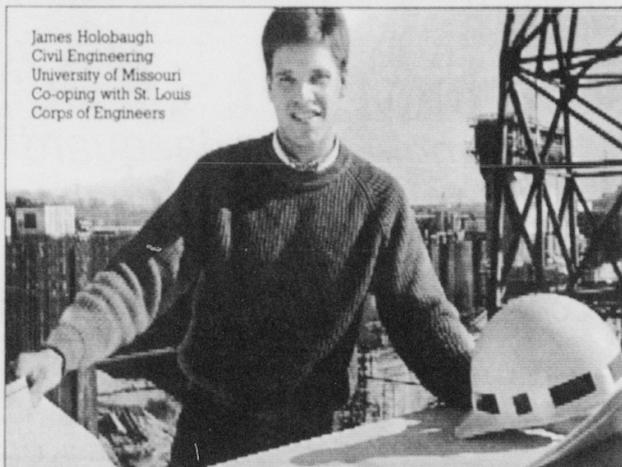

"I've been working closely with KBVR in advertising the JazzFest and many people have been calling the radio station

The second annual OSU JazzFest will feature four performances, starting Oct. 21 and running through Nov. 6.

Chilean voters reject eight more years of Pinochet

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — A member of Chile's four-member ruling junta acknowledged early Thursday that President Augusto Pinochet had apparently failed in his bid to win a plebiscite for another eight years in power.

Junta member Gen. Fernando Matthei said as he entered the presidential palace for a meeting with Pinochet at 1 a.m. (midnight EDT) that "to me the no's have won. This is very clear."

The Interior Ministry stopped giving out returns after 10 p.m. Wednesday (9 p.m. EDT).

But a vote count from publicly listed returns gathered by the "Command for the No," a 16-party opposition coalition, said at 1 a.m. Thursday that out of 4,127,682 ballots counted, 2,348,527 opposed Pinochet's bid and 1,683,893 supported him.

The percentage was 56.9 percent for the "no" and 40.8 percent for the "yes," with the remainder blank or void.

Incomplete government results, released at 10 p.m. (9 p.m. EDT), showed Pinochet getting 95,668 votes, or 51.3 percent, with 86,746 votes, or 46.5 percent, against his continued rule. The other 2.2 percent were either blank or nullified.

Opposition leaders appealed for calm after power blackouts and threats of disruption, and Pinochet warned earlier in the day of possible trouble in the evening after the voting ended.

In simple yes-or-no voting, Chileans went to the polls to decide whether to give Pinochet eight more years as president. A thumbs-down verdict will lead to an open election next year.

"The country has the right to know the truth," said Patricio Aylwin, head of the opposition coalition. "We are winning categorically."

Former Interior Minister Sergio Onofre Jarpa also acknowledged that Pinochet faced an uphill battle.

"There is a tendency in favor of the 'no,'" Jarpa said. Jarpa, who served under Pinochet from 1983 to 1985 and heads the pro-Pinochet National Renovation Party, said counting was going more slowly at sites where women voted than at polling places for men.

Chilean law requires men and women to vote at separate sites, and pre-election opinion polls showed Pinochet with more support among women than men.

The Committee for Free Elections, a non-partisan monitoring group, used what it described as a scientific sampling of 220,000 ballots at 730 polling places to project that Pinochet would be defeated with 55.2 percent of the vote going against him. Pinochet supporters dismissed the projection, saying the sample was not representative of nationwide patterns.

The government's final official results were not expected for at least five days. Under Chilean law, ballots are mailed to the National Election Tribunal in the capital and counted during a period of at least five days.

Charges dropped against columnist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Syndicated columnist Carl Rowan will not be retried on charges of violating the capital's handgun law after a four-day trial ended with a hung jury, the city's chief prosecutor announced Wednesday.

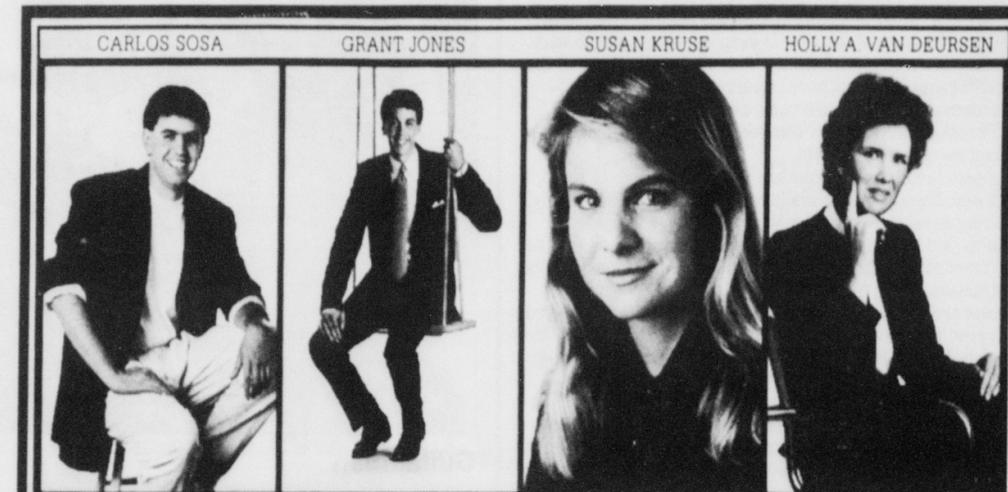

District of Columbia Corporation Counsel Frederick Cooke Jr., who oversaw prosecution of the case, said he did not believe a fair or impartial jury could be assembled to retry the longtime gun-control advocate.

"This case is over and cannot be brought back," Cooke said in announcing the city's decision.

Rowan, reached Wednesday morning as he was leaving town for the day, said he had heard no official word from the city, but would likely hold a news conference Thursday to comment.

Rowan, 63, was charged with possessing an unregistered firearm and illegally possessing ammunition under the city's stringent gun-control law after he shot and slightly wounded a teenage intruder behind his home in the early morning hours of June 14.

A Superior Court jury deliberated for 10 hours over two days before becoming deadlocked last Thursday at 9-3 in favor of acquitting Rowan.

Scouting begins for polo site

By KRISTIN LILLIEBERG
of the Barometer

Steps are being taken towards building a polo facility at OSU which could be the largest in the Pacific Northwest.

According to Tom Kirch, director of recreational sports, officials are at a "stage of inquiry" regarding details of the facility, and it is premature at this time to even say that it will be built. He said there's support from the Polo Club and others in the Corvallis community that have an interest in the project.

Acreage around campus is being examined to see where a facility could be constructed. This requires a lot of planning because of the size of a polo field.

"A polo facility takes considerable space — over 12 acres," Kirch said. He added that usually two fields are built adjacently, requiring an area of over 24 acres.

Kirch said he is not sure of the cost of a facility and that he hasn't met with the individuals involved in raising money for its construction.

There are polo fields in Portland and the game is also played in Eugene and the Puget Sound area, according to Kirch. He said that if a field is built at OSU, it might be larger than others in the area.

"It could be the largest facility around," Kirch said.

There is talk of having the field covered and if so, it would be around the size of a football stadium. If this occurs, more than 12 acres would be necessary to accommodate stables, tack and storage rooms. There are no covered polo facilities in the Pacific Northwest.

Kirch said the closest facility of this size is located at the University of California at Davis.

The facility would most likely be used by the OSU polo club. Some of the club's members provide their own horses, but horses are available that have been donated and loaned to the club.

It should be noted the program is not affiliated with any religious or political group. Some people, according to Stoltenberg, shy away from the program because classes are held at a church. The space for the classes and child care is rented to the program by the Episcopal church at a reasonable price.

Rivka Be'er, an Israeli housewife who is currently at the advanced level, said the program has made life more fun for her.

come here and meet new people and learn about American culture," said Be'er. "It has helped me from a lot of points of view. It has helped me learn about American culture. We are a group of people who come together to have fun and talk about our countries and this country. It's something that you can't get in the papers."

Another wife at the advanced level, Dong Yan Xu, from China, said she received a lot of help through her involvement in the program last year.

"In this class, we can learn to speak a lot of English, meet new people and have very nice parties," she said.

Stoltenberg said the program is really about using English as a medium to exchange ideas and share cultures.

"The husbands say, when asked what they thought of the program, that this is the main way they learn about American culture — through their wives," she said.

about it," he said. "There are also many key people connected with jazz in the Corvallis community that are talking about it."

The music department has a mailing list of 450 people in the Corvallis, Portland and Eugene areas who are interested in bringing quality jazz to this city, he said.

Blakesley said that eventually he would like to expand the Fest to include several different aspects of media without detracting from the jazz.

Because during fall term the OSU Marching Band "receives 100 percent of the focus," the Jazz Ensembles are fairly inactive until winter and spring terms, according to Blakesley.

"I definitely want to show off the Jazz Ensembles later this year but they're not quite ready to perform yet," he said.

NFL owners approve sale of Seahawks, Patriots

DALLAS (UPI) — National Football League owners Wednesday gave unanimous, conditional approval to the sales of the New England Patriots and Seattle Seahawks. Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he expected the sales to become final within 10 days.

"I want to go over the papers with our financial committee," Rozelle said. "I expect no problems at all. We should have things finished in 10 days. It's nice to get these transactions completed."

The debt-plagued Patriots were sold by team founder Billy Sullivan to New York businessman Victor Kiam, owner of Remington Products. He is the latest in a long list of would-be owners.

"The uncertainty was not good for the fans."

Although the league owners will have a regularly scheduled meeting Oct. 23 in Chicago, Rozelle said a special session was called to deal with the sales.

"There were stipulations in the agreements that needed to be dealt with on a speedy basis," Rozelle said. "They were nothing newsworthy, but we all decided to give up a day to come here and get this done."

Behring, who in the past has said he has always wanted a football team and now that he can afford one decided to buy one, has real estate holdings that include more than 500 projects around the world.

He made his first millions selling cars in Florida and then began investing in real estate projects.

The Seahawks were sold by the Nordstrom family of Seattle to Kenneth Behring, a northern California land developer.

Although no sale price was announced for either franchise, the Seahawks reportedly were dealt for $80 million.

The Patriots deal was complicated by the debt accumulated by the team and the need to satisfy various creditors. A series of prospective buyers appeared over the last few years, among them Reebok International owner Paul Fireman. He withdrew his offer in July after lengthy negotiations.

"Bill Sullivan will still be associated with the team (as nominal president)," Rozelle said. "I think he is very happy to have this deal settled. There have been several prospective owners as you know and it is good for the New England area to have this resolved."

Doctor says Tyson fit to fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — A psychiatrist who examined Mike Tyson pronounced the heavyweight champion fit to fight, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The New York Daily News said Tyson was examined Tuesday for more than 30 minutes by Dr. Abraham Halpern, who concluded the boxer is not a manic-depressive, is not in need of medication and should be allowed to fight as soon as possible.

The newspaper also reported Halpern said the psychiatrist who initially diagnosed Tyson as a manic-depressive has reversed himself.

Halpern's diagnosis contradicts the publicly stated opinion of Tyson's wife, actress Robin Givens, and her mother, Ruth Roper. Tyson, Givens and Roper appeared on national television last week, where Givens and Roper told ABC's Barbara Walters that Tyson was a "manic-depressive" who pushed her around and was "scary" and "frightening."

"There will be no medication; he showed no signs of manic-depression," said Halpern, chief of psychiatry at United Hospital Medical Center in upstate Port Chester. He was hired for the examination by Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton.

Cayton promptly announced the Dec. 17 fight with Frank Bruno in London was now "on," and Tyson would commence training Monday in Catskill, N.Y.

Tyson still must undergo a routine neurological exam before stepping into the ring.

Givens and Roper said Tyson was manic-depressive after the boxer met with sports psychiatrist Dr. Henry McCurtis last month. To control Tyson's moods, McCurtis prescribed lithium, but Tyson told friends he stopped taking the drug.

According to the News, Halpern claimed to have spoken with McCurtis, who changed his view and agreed Tyson, 22, is not manic-depressive.

Givens, married to Tyson since February, called police to the couple's Bernardsville, N.J., mansion Sunday morning after her husband went on a rampage, apparently stemming from remarks made during the televised interview.

In the interview, broadcast Friday, Givens said she was sometimes afraid of Tyson. "I think that there's a time when he cannot control his temper and that's frightening to me and to my mother and to anyone around," Givens said in the interview. "There are times when Michael is manic and he's incredibly abusive."

It also has been reported that Tyson's mother-in-law has cut off payments by the champion to Camille Ewald, the 83-year-old woman who helped rear Tyson.

On Monday, Givens and her mother went to California, where the actress will be spending five days a week filming until April.

No. 3 Southern California (minus 14 1-2) over No. 18 Oregon — Are the Trojans for real? This former skeptic thinks so. Will they lose? Maybe down the road (to UCLA or Notre Dame) — but not to Oregon.

Oregon's starting quarterback Bill Musgrave is listed as doubtful with strained ligaments in his right ankle. Coach Rich Brooks said Pete Nelson or Bob Brothers will replace Musgrave. Whoever starts will have to contend with a Trojan defense that includes cornerback Chris Hale, tied for second in the nation with four interceptions in four games.

Oregon's defense is ranked third nationally against the rush (71.8 YPG) — but Southern Cal will do damage through the air. Rodney Peete (73 of 118 for 875 yards and five TDs with five INT) should be able to connect with Erik Affholter, (ninth in the nation with 6.8 receptions per game.)

Ducks upset Trojans 34-27 last year at Eugene, Ore. Saturday, Southern Cal returns the favor.

Southern Cal 34, Oregon 17

West

Washington State (minus 7 1-2) over California — If Cougars (561.5 YPG — tops in nation) really intend to join four Pac-10 foes in Top 20, they must dispose of teams like the Golden Bears.

Washington State 27, California 13
Wyoming (minus 13) over San Diego State — Cowboys, averaging 514.4 yards per game (325 via the air), notch sixth straight triumph.

Wyoming 31, San Diego State 13

Princeton (minus 21) over Columbia — Tigers air attack mauls Lions, who fall to their 45th straight loss.

Princeton 42, Columbia 6

South

Virginia Tech (plus 21 1-2) over South Carolina — Disappointing Hokies played tough at home against West Virginia, figure they can do it again.

South Carolina 27, Virginia Tech 13

Auburn (minus 1) over Louisiana State — Auburn, after beating up on four sub-500 teams, show they're deserving of high rating; hard to see LSU lose third straight but they're beat up after visits to Ohio State and Florida.

Auburn 26, Louisiana State 21

Midwest

Michigan State (plus 12) over Michigan — Spartans, 0-3-1, salvage some respect with good showing against hated Wolverines.

Michigan 27, Michigan State 20

Illinois (minus 7) over Purdue — After beating Utah and Ohio State, Illinois keeps rolling; Boilermakers falter against first winning foe.

Henderson hits Oakland to win

BOSTON (UPI) — Dave Henderson, a postseason hero for Boston two years ago, singled home Carney Lansford with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning Wednesday to lift the Oakland Athletics to a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

Henderson, nearly the goat of the game in the seventh inning, hit an RBI single to right that enabled Oakland to hand Bruce Hurst only his third loss in 16 decisions at Fenway Park this year.

Lansford, who won a batting title with Boston in 1981, led off the eighth with a double and Henderson followed with his single.

Henderson was a hero for the Red Sox in game 5 of the 1986 playoffs when he hit a home run in the ninth inning against California that enabled Boston to stave off elimination. The Red Sox went on to beat the Angels in seven games.

The Red Sox put the tying run on second in the ninth when Jody Reed doubled with two out. After Rich Gedman walked, Dennis Eckersley, the major league leader in saves this season, struck out Wade Boggs, the major league's leading hitter, to end the game. It was Eckersley's sixth save against the Red Sox this season.

Eckersley worked two innings in relief of winner Rick Honeycutt, who took over for starter Dave Stewart in the seventh.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Thursday night at 8:20 p.m. EDT. Two-time AL Cy Young winner Roger Clemens will start for Boston and Storm Davis for the A's. The playoffs shift to Oakland for Game 3 Saturday.

Hurst, who has been virtually unbeatable at Fenway the last two years, went the distance. The left-hander allowed six hits, walked three and struck out seven. The loss was Hurst's first in four career postseason decisions.

Henderson's failure to catch a soft fly ball by Gedman in the seventh helped the Red Sox tie the score.

Stewart, a 20-game winner in each of the past two seasons, had dominated the game through six innings but showed signs of tiring in the seventh when he went 3-0 on the first two batters.

Jim Rice walked with one out and Kevin Romine pinch ran for him. Stewart hit Jody Reed with a pitch and Gedman followed with a blooper to center. Henderson charged the ball but slipped on the wet turf as the ball dropped in front of him for a single that loaded the bases.

Boggs, who had struck out with the bases loaded earlier in the game, then hit a sacrifice fly to left to tie the score at 1-1.

Oakland had taken a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Jose Canseco, who hit a major-league leading 42 homers this season, led off the with a blast into the screen above the Green Monster in left center. It was his first homer in 29 plate appearances at Fenway this season but his fourth career home run off Hurst.

The Red Sox missed a chance for a big inning in the second. With two out, Rice singled and Reed walked. Oakland shortstop Walt Weiss then saved a run with a diving stop of Gedman's hard smash in the hole and Stewart bore down to strike out Boggs on a high fastball. Boggs had never struck out against Stewart in 32 previous plate appearances. During the season Boggs struck out only 34 times.

Dodgers even up National series

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mickey Hatcher aroused a slumbering offense with a two-run double in the second inning and rookie Tim Belcher fired a five-hitter over 8 1-3 innings Wednesday night, helping the Los Angeles Dodgers square the National League playoffs at a game apiece with a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets.

Mike Marshall contributed three hits and two RBI and Alejandro Pena retired Game 1 hero Gary Carter with two out and the bases loaded in the ninth as the NL West champions rebounded from their heartbreaking 3-2 loss in the opener to beat the Mets for only the second time in 13 games this year.

Los Angeles, struggling to bat at least .200 the last month, scored more than five runs in a game for only the sixth time since Aug. 18. The Dodgers made the most of their seven hits, scoring five times with two out.

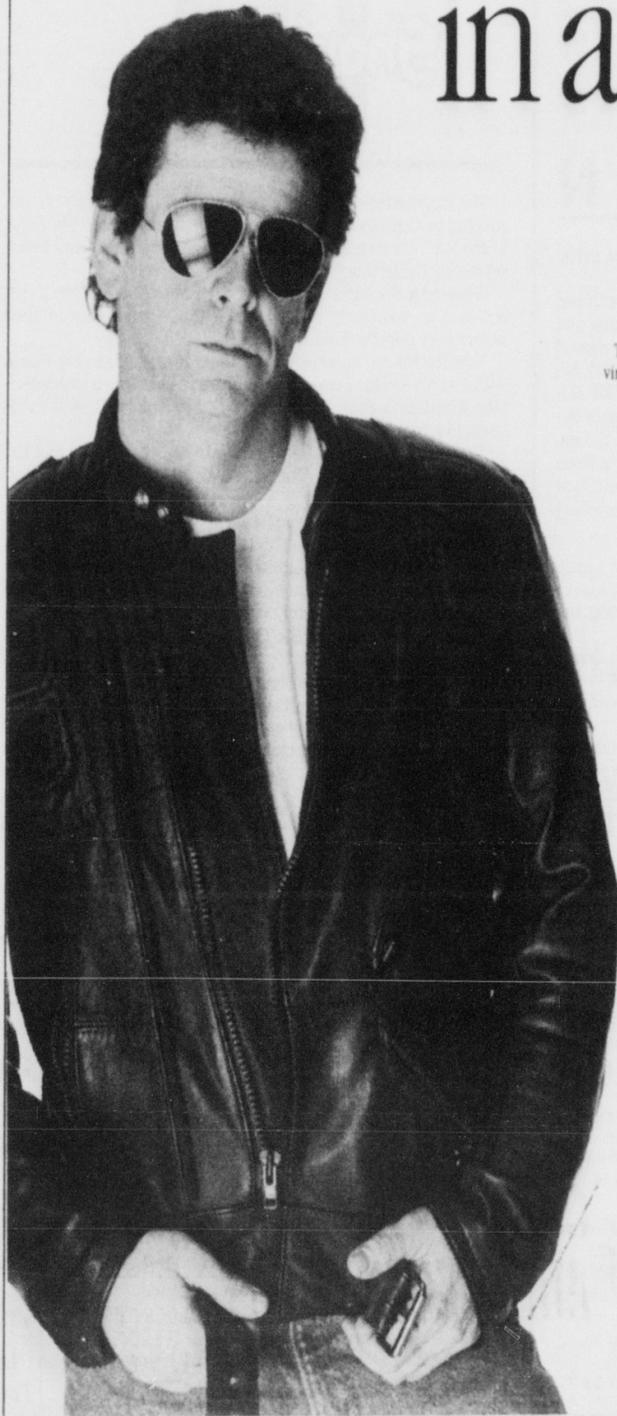

The best-of-seven series shifts to New York, where Los Angeles will send left-hander John Tudor against right-hander Ron Darling Friday night in Game 3.

In the decisive second inning, the Dodgers sent nine batters to the plate and collected four runs and four hits to drive David Cone from the mound.

Cone, who posted a 20-3 record and finished second in the NL with a 2.22 ERA, lasted just 47 pitches, allowing five runs and five hits. The right-hander had won his last eight starts, but hit a batter, balked, issued one unintentional walk and surrendered a single to Belcher — all of which contributed to his downfall.

Cone got in trouble before the game as well. In a ghostwritten article which appeared in Wednesday's New York Daily News, he called Orel Hershiser "lucky" to have pitched so well in Game 1.

OSU fans see it all

By ROD HESS
of the Barometer

Ohhhhhh! Eesssss! Yuuuuuu! Oregon State! Fight! Fight! Fight!

That's been the rally cry for OSU's football fans this year as this year's team has brought fans (28,179 last Saturday) to Parker Stadium with an improved, competitive team, the best ever under fourth-year coach Dave Kragthorpe.

Reasons for the improvement, you may ask? The two biggest reasons are the improved pass protection for quarterback Erik Wilhelm and improved rushing that has now accumulated 743 yards, already the most ever by a Beaver team since Kragthorpe arrived.

These improvements have given OSU, 3-2, a team that is not just more consistent, but more competitive in each of its first five games. Scores of 13-24, 41-27, 17-16, 21-28 and last weekend's 21-10 victory over Fresno State are the types of win and loss margins fans would rather see than strings of blowout losses Beaver teams would put together in the past.

In the Fresno State win, all-purpose runner/receiver/returner Brian Taylor showed signs of recovery when he gained 53 all-purpose yards last Saturday in the 90-plus degree heat after gaining only nine yards overall two weeks ago in Colorado.

ROD'S R U N D O W N

"It was good to see Brian Taylor get back in the game more," Kragthorpe said.

Once again, the senior quarterback Wilhelm continued to play well, completing 20 of 29 passes for 215 yards and two touchdowns. The 215 yards moved him into second place in Pac-10 career passing yardage (7,821 yards), second only to John Elway (9,349 at Stanford from 1979-82).

Next up for the Beavers is their biggest challenge of the season, the UCLA Bruins (4-0 and ranked fourth in the nation). The Beavers, to play before over 60,000 in the Rose Bowl, must play consistent defense and have their best offensive game of the year to defeat this high-scoring club.

The Baseball Playoffs: Two exciting games have been shown up to this deadline (5 p.m. Wednesday) which have seen the best of clutch hitting and the best pitching the game has to offer.

Tuesday night's ninth-inning rally by the Mets to defeat the Dodgers 3-2 brought back memories of the 1986 World Series when the Mets scored the winning runs all with two out to extend that series to a sixth game.

Last night, however it featured a match-up of the two best pitchers the National League has to offer in Orel Hershiser (Dodgers) and Dwight Gooden (Mets). Gooden was sharp (10 strikeouts and two runs in seven innings) but Hershiser had shutout the Mets for eight and the Dodger faithful were thinking victory.

The Mets, however, put on their rally caps (turning their caps backward while in the dugout) and got a pair of hits off Hershiser and scored a run. Dodger manager Tom Lasorda went to his bullpen and the bull got loose as reliever Jay Howell gave up a walk and a two-run, bloop double off the bat of Met catcher Gary Carter and the rest is history—a dumbfounded Dodger crowd, an ecstatic Mets locker room and more Roloids for manager Lasorda.

In the Oakland-Boston game, a long, homerun blast by Jose "Mr. Muscle" Canseco put the Athletics up early, but it was a key run-scoring single by former Red Sox Dave Henderson that set the stage for Cy Young award candidate reliever Dennis Eckersley (45 saves) to preserve the 2-1 victory.

Incidentally, Henderson has played with three different division-winning teams in each of the last three years—the Boston in 1986, San Francisco in 1987 and now Oakland. He's also a free agent after the season ends, so this lucky charm may be in for some big bucks.

Prediction: I see the Mets and A's winning their series in six games, and believe the Amazin' A's to defeat the Mets in a tight, seven-game World Series.

IM football kicks off season

It's fall term at Oregon State University and that means it's time for intramural football. It's time for the Elways and Marinos to show their stuff and the time to find out who spent the summer getting fat.

This year's season looks to be full of excitement with several teams with new names like the Civil Engineers, the AZA Studmuffins, and believe it or not, a team called Who the hell's the quarterback?

Oh well, I wish them the best of luck, anyhow.

The "A" league looks to be very competitive with many teams going for the title. The independents will need a big season from a new squad this year since SNAFU hasn't signed up a team. For several years SNAFU has not only been the independent king, but also the University king, including last year's 14-13 championship win over Beta Theta Pi.

The Beta's, who have also always been a football powerhouse, have several fraternity teams looking to knock them off this year. They still, however, come into the preseason poll as the No. 1 Greek team and No. 3, overall.

The Budmen are suppose to be the team to beat this year, according to a questionable source, so they take the elite No. 1 spot in the "A" division league. I'm just glad they didn't call themselves the Crabs this year.

A team by the name of The Usta-be's pops in at the No. 2 spot but maybe somebody should teach these guys how to spell before they take the field.

Varsity House, an excellent athletic house, grabs the fourth spot and Na Kolohe I completes the top five. It was a tough decision whether to rank Na Kolohe I or Na Kolohe II so it came down to a coin toss. Sorry number II.

The Cobras and Beef Darts slip into the elite crowd and Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, and Alpha Tau Omega finish off the preseason top 10.

It's just too bad the ATO's season last year was a fluke.

In the fun and laughable "B" league, Phi Gamma Delta takes the No. 1 spot away from Sigma Phi Epsilon since they should of won the championship game last year. By the way, the intramural office is looking for referees.

The Greeks dominate the top 10 "B" league as four teams hold solid positions in the top five. Delta Tau Delta is always tough and the Beta's simply let their talent do the talking.

The AFROTC Warriors grab the No. 3 spot and Mondo Men III slide in as the No. 6 team on campus. The GDI's deserve a top 10 position because of their clever team name while the C-Men finish off the last of the independents.

Pi Kappa Alpha is suppose to be a pretty good ball club, according to their coach, and the SAE's finish off the powerful "B" league.

In women's play, it looks to be a battle between the sorority powers Pi Beta Phi and Delta Delta Delta. When these two teams play it'll definitely be a game that should be paid to see.

The Unknowns grab the No. 3 spot and another independent, AZA Studmuffins, barely makes the cut at No. 5. The Alpha Gamm's have enough gals on their team for five football teams but their depth might come in handy.

When it comes right down to it, we'll just have to wait and see who becomes the best. I just feel sorry for the teams that play on Sunday.

Here's this year's preseason polls:

"A" Division

Pac-10 shows individual domination

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (UPI) — Latest Pacific 10 individual football statistics show why Washington State's wild offense is among the nation's best.

Steve Broussard of the Cougars tops rushers with 145.3 yards per game and also is the all-purpose running leader with 171.3 yards per outing.

Derek Loville of Oregon (127.5 and 164.3) is second in both categories, followed by Eric Ball of UCLA (121.3 and 125.3) and John Volpe of Stanford (97.8 and 115.5), according to latest figures released by the conference headquarters.

Quarterback Timm Rosenbach of Washington State, meanwhile, leads more highly publicized Pac 10 signal-callers in other categories.

Rosenbach, who tossed five touchdown passes last Saturday in a 52-24 win at Tennessee, has moved the ball 331.5 yards a game in total offense and is also judged the most efficient passer, averaging 9.8 yards per attempt and tossing for 11 touchdowns while having only four intercepted.

UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman is considered the top candidate for the Heisman Trophy and was ranked the most efficient passer in the nation last year, but so far trails Rosenbach this year in passing figures.

Rob Thomas of Oregon State leads a close battle for pass reception honors with 28, although Tim Stallworth of Washington State has 419 yards in receiving yardage and four touchdowns to top those areas.

Tailback Aaron Emanuel of USC, Broussard and kicker Rob Kean of California share scoring honors with 36 points apiece.

Chis Hale of USC and Eugene Burkhalter of Washington have intercepted four passes each and Mike Schuh of Arizona State is dominating punting figures with a 45.1 yard average per boot.

UCLA (274.8) has the toughest ground game, while Washington State leads in passing (306.8) and total offense (561.5).

Defensively, Oregon has yielded only 71.8 yards per game on the ground, while UCLA has surrendered 148.0 through the air and California is the surprise total defense leader, giving up 2;64.3 yards per game.

Both the Pac-10 and Southeast Conference have four teams ranked inside the Top 20 this week, but the West Coast League can arguably lay claim to being the nation's best off its 24-4 non-conference record.

The four ranked West Coast teams are No. 2 UCLA, No. 3 Southern California, and Oregon and Washington, which are tied for 18th.

The Pac-10's most impressive wins were UCLA 41-28 over Nebraska and USC 23-7 over Oklahoma. And California beat Kansas, 52-21.
