Brad Whitaker, co-organizer of the protest, fires up the crowd just prior to the march to the Administration Building.

A large and enthusiastic crowd gathered outside the administration building Friday to show their support for traditional graduation ceremonies.

Angela Means, senior in business, shows support for the speakers Friday at the graduation protest.

Students rally for graduation

Despite the cool weather, the rally to continue the "50-year" traditional commencement attracted approximately 300 protesters Friday afternoon.

Meeting on the front steps of the Memorial Union, the ralliers distributed picket signs reading "tradition counts" and "revive our spirit." Senior Class President Brad Whitaker then marched with the crowd down to the Administrative Services Building.

"We are here to support an old and lasting tradition (of having commencement) when the campus isn't evacuated," Whitaker said.

ASOSU President Chris Voigt said he's frustrated that "the decision was made without the students' input." He said the administration was "real insensitive (and) hasn't shown good student support."

"Is graduation for the faculty or students?" Whitaker asked the protesters, who replied, "Students!"

Chants of "keep the tradition" and "we don't need an extra week" came from the students before the speeches.

The crowd's enthusiasm intensified when Voigt burnt a memo of the new commencement procedures to show what he thought of its contents.

"It listed everyone but the students," Voigt said. "We as students need to keep the pressure up."

The only administrator to attend the rally was Pete Fullerton, associate vice-president for academic affairs, who said the decision to hold graduation after finals week is "non-negotiable."

"We differ strongly," Voigt responded.

Six students came forward to express their opinions. One was Mortar Board President Matt Hinds, who said, "Common courtesy is what two people share when they respect each other ... someone doesn't respect us. We need to reach a common ground — what they want and what we want."

The primary goal of the rally was to "show the university that the students here care about this. Hopefully they'll listen," Voigt said.

Voigt told the protesters to continue with their battle.

"Keep knocking on President Byrne's door," he said, encouraging students to write letters to Byrne. Whitaker agreed, adding, "Let your voice be heard!"

This morning, a video tape of the event will be brought to Byrne's office together with a television and VCR.

Addresses LaSells crowd for Pauling lectureship

Galtung: U.S. not set for peace

By ALAN LITCHFIELD
of the Barometer

The United States political discourse is not adequate to the task of peace, according to Johan Galtung, professor of conflict and peace research at the University of Oslo in Norway.

Galtung spoke Friday night to more than 800 people at the LaSells Stewart Center as part of last weekend's Military-Industrial Complex/Eisenhower Conference and the Ava Helen Pauling Lectureship for World Peace. The three-day event examined the warning made by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1961 about the potentially damaging link between the military, industrial and educational institutions of our society.

Galtung told the audience one reason the U.S. is failing to achieve lasting peace is its inability to possess a non-aggressive defense that will not pose a visible threat to other countries.

"The disarmament process used alone might prove to be an enemy of peace."

—John Galtung

Galtung argued in favor of a "non-provocative" type of defense, but said that right now this direction of thinking is alien to the U.S.

"(Also) the U.S. discourse of economics is a very unhealthy discourse from a peace point of view," Galtung said. He added that the U.S. is unable to cope with economic challenges from other countries.

Galtung illustrated this inability by discussing the trade relationship between the U.S. and Japan.

Japan is exporting excellent, high-quality material to the U.S.

and has managed to top the U.S. in divisional labor, he said.

On the other hand, Galtung said, "what comes out of New York Harbor is scrap iron, waste paper, lumber, and agricultural products...Japan is doing to the U.S. exactly what we, in the so-called first world countries, are doing to the third world countries."

"Don't get the good things from others, unless you absolutely have to. Rely on your own creativity."

—John Galtung

According to Galtung, the U.S. is letting itself be exploited by Japan. This type of exploitation — although unintentional — often creates the opposite of peaceful relationships.

"Don't get the good things from others, unless you absolutely have to," he said. "Rely on your own creativity."

Speaking briefly on disarmament, Galtung said that this course of action is insufficient and unnecessary. Galtung referred to several European countries who — without disarmament — pose little threat to others.

"The disarmament process used alone might prove to be an enemy of peace," Galtung said.

Other speakers commenting briefly on peace and disarmament were OSU President John Byrne, and Seymour Melman, professor emeritus of industrial engineering at Columbia University.

Melman was allowed a 10-minute response to Galtung's speech. Melman described disarmament as a long process and not something happening instantly.

Present at the speech was Nobel laureate and OSU alumnus Linus Pauling, who received a standing ovation from the large crowd. The lectureship was named after his wife, Ava Helen Pauling, who died in 1981 after devoting five decades of her life towards world peace.

Ike's farewell speech evaluated by grandson

By CHRIS LAMOUREAUX
of the Barometer

David Eisenhower discussed the events and influences that caused his grandfather, President Dwight Eisenhower, to deliver his famous farewell speech on the military-industrial complex in 1961.

Eisenhower's address before 300 people Saturday night at the LaSells Stewart was the culmination of the three-day Military-Industrial Complex conference held over the weekend.

"There may be a conflict between the effectiveness and the philosophical aspects of the speech."

—David Eisenhower

Rather than speaking on the military-industrial complex itself, Eisenhower spoke about what caused his grandfather to give his famous farewell address.

"I think it's important to remember that Dwight Eisenhower's military-industrial complex speech was a farewell," he said. "This is not the kind of perspective necessarily that someone entering power would offer. There may be a conflict between the effectiveness and the philosophical aspects of his speech."

Born in 1890, President Eisenhower got a lot of his insights from the generation he grew up in, according to his grandson.

"He was a member of a generation that probably experienced more qualitative change in American life than any other generation," he said.

As an example, David Eisenhower said, "He was closer to (Abraham) Lincoln than the warning and subject of this conference is to us."

The warning President Eisenhower gave in his speech specifically said, "This conjunction of our immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience...we recognize the imperative need for this development. Yet, we must not fail to comprehend its grave implications. Our toil, resource, and livelihood are all involved; so is the very structure of our society. In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex."

Eisenhower has become a scholar on this speech by researching and writing the first of a three-volume set of books for Random House publishers. The first volume, entitled "Eisenhower, the War Years," was a best seller was nominated for a Pulitzer prize. Volumes two and three are still in progress.

In his research, he interviewed some of Dwight Eisenhower's associates. According to David Eisenhower, 50 percent of them said the speech was out of character for President Eisenhower, while the other half competed for credit in writing the speech.

Delivered on Jan. 17, 1961, the farewell speech went through 40 drafts before it was transmitted on television and radio to the American public.

Another striking point about the speech, according to David Eisenhower, is the "lack of specificity, lack of remedy" by the President in discussing dismantling the military-industrial complex.

"The warnings concerning the military-industrial complex were almost outweighed by the warnings aimed at preventing the scientific technological lead in capturing control of public policy," he said.

"...We have tested the idea whether democracy, technology and innovation can grow hand in hand."

—David Eisenhower

According to Eisenhower, the military-industrial complex speech was retrospective as opposed to a prospective speech, aimed toward politicians and telling them to trust their own judgment.

"Knowing when the time comes to write the history of these days that it will be primarily history of the United States. For it is here in the 20th century where we have tested the idea whether democracy, technology and innovation can grow hand in hand," he said.

Dukakis: patchy on Central America

Now that Dukakis has realized that he has to win, rather than merely wait for Bush to lose, what signs of grace and resourcefulness can be seen in that technocratic soul? For about 10 minutes, at its start, he seemed quite hot in the debate, though, like almost everyone else engaged in responsible discourse on the topic of drugs, he is apparently unable to make the connection between social misery and recourse to narcotic relief. In the answers devoted to national security he was, so far as I could see, somewhat to the right of the vice-president, caroling out his support for a conventional build-up, whereas Bush said that the jury was still out on the Soviet Experiment.

I find it an odd experience watching the governor of Massachusetts. He's obviously not a stupid person, yet so often the way he talks about himself and his ideas and hopes is tremendously stupid. When Peter Jennings asked him to be passionate, he spoke like an undertaker seating the bereaved. It was heartening that Dukakis did not shrink from denouncing the war in Vietnam. But strange how many opportunities he missed to castigate the moral profile of the Reagan years.

This patchiness in intellectual reach and propensity to blinker vision is very evident in Dukakis' responses to a questionnaire sent by the anti-interventionist Neighbor-to-Neighbor political action committee and answered by him in mid-September. Presumably the Dukakis campaign is now aware, having sophisticated offensive weapons systems; and to prevent subversion of Nicaragua's neighbors. The lifting of the trade embargo and the quality of our bilateral relations with Nicaragua should be handled in that framework." Now where have you heard that before?

On the topic of El Salvador, Dukakis' answers are even worse, full of time-hallowed blather about the extremism of right and left alike. Asked specifically whether he would support a cut-off in military aid to El Salvador to encourage negotiations, he answered, "An abrupt cut-off of military aid at this time would be destabilizing and could make it more difficult to achieve a political solution." This is the same man who told Robert Scheer, as detailed in the latter's Playboy article mentioned earlier, that one of the things convincing him of the futility of the American intervention in Vietnam was a reading of Graham Greene's The Quiet American. He should read it again.

Thus far in the election campaign the man who has made a true issue of principle in Central America against secret government and covert operations is House Speaker Jim Wright. When Wright denounced CIA provocations in Nicaragua, the press, following the line handed down by the Reagan administration, mostly said that Wright had given away "secrets." Wright's response to this attack, made on September 22, really bears repeating, because it is one of the most admirable forgotten for a period after the convention, that the support of the Central American activists and, more broadly, those opposed to present U.S. policy in Central America is of importance. On Nicaragua Dukakis is at least unequivocal in the questionnaire as to "ending contra aid," and opposing "all aid that is inconsistent with the Arias plan."

Yet in answer to the questions "Would you support normalization of relations with Nicaragua, including a lifting of the trade embargo?" and "Do you support bilateral talks in Nicaragua? What should be on the agenda?" Dukakis responded, "The United States should enter into direct negotiations with Nicaragua to discuss mutual security concerns. The purpose of such talks should be to obtain satisfactory Nicaraguan commitments to end Soviet/Cuban military links and remove military advisers or military bases; to bar the stationing of statements I've ever seen coming out of the mouth of a public official, particularly a senior member or the 100th Congress, of which, as somebody recently remarked, it is impossible to be in contempt. Too bad Dukakis does not sound like this:

"The question of greatest importance is not what I said and whether I should have said it. The question is what our government has done, and whether we should be doing it. The CIA was created to gather intelligence, not to make policy. That is the role of Congress. Congress is not subservient to the CIA or any other agency, nor dependent upon their permission to speak. It is the responsibility of Congress to speak out whenever it discovers any agency of government, financed by the taxpayer's money, is operating contrary to established public policy."

In the early 1970s, the CIA engaged secretly in undermining and destabilizing the elected government of Chile while we publicly maintained friendly relations. Congress was misinformed, and the truth was revealed by Gerald Ford after he became president. What resulted from the overthrow and assassination of President Allende has been 15 years of oppressive military dictatorship. In 1984, the CIA, in violation of U.S. law, mined the public harbors of Nicaragua while we were publicly maintaining diplomatic relations with that country and its government. Former Senator Barry Goldwater, among others, blew the whistle on that sad chapter in American history. The World Court found us guilty of violating international law.

In 1986, operatives in the White House annex, in violation of law and without informing Congress, sold weapons to Iran and diverted the profits to the contras. This action has resulted in enormous public embarrassment for the United States. If someone had publicly protested these misadventures when they were first contemplated, perhaps great mischief could have been avoided.

It is unfortunately true that while our government has pursued a public policy of supporting the peace talks in Central America, agents of our government have engaged in efforts to destabilize the Nicaraguan government and to produce incidents aimed at provoking an overreaction on the part of that government of a type that is calculated to be disruptive to the peace talks.

This is the continuance of a policy which has been in force for many months. On September 16, 1985, David MacMichael, a senior analyst for the CIA, testified under oath before the World Court. He said:

"The principle actions to be undertaken were paramilitary, which hopefully would provoke cross-border attacks by Nicaraguan forces and thus serve to demonstrate Nicaragua's aggressive nature...It was hoped that the Nicaraguan government would clamp down on civil liberties within Nicaragua itself, arresting its opposition...and further that there would be reaction against United States citizens, particularly against United States diplomatic personnel within Nicaragua, and thus serve to demonstrate the hostility of Nicaragua toward the United States."

"It is my contention that this practice is contrary to officially announced public policy and should be discontinued during the period when we are trying to encourage the peace process."

"The United States should not say one thing publicly and do another privately. This is unworthy of our nation. We will not be trusted or respected by others if we do. I have said these things privately to members of the administration. I regret the necessity to say them publicly. But I believe they need to be said."

Cockburn writes for The Nation, the Wall Street Journal and L.A. Weekly. His column appears every Monday in the Daily Barometer.

Voigt apology

To the editor:

I'd like to take this opportunity to apologize for any misunderstandings I generated regarding a recent quote in the Barometer. I had no intention of projecting a negative image or "underlying racial connotations" toward the international students on our campus.

My intent was to express frustration to the Faculty Senate in regards to traditional commencement. It frustrates me to see that the Faculty Senate would rather spend time mandating that seniors not take their finals early instead of taking the initiative to solve some of the learning and communication problems in the classroom. That was my intent.

I am sincere about my apology. I have always shown support to the international students on campus and will continue to do so. I'm thankful that a few students have brought this issue to my attention. I will do my best to choose my words more carefully.

Sincerely,

Chris Voigt
ASOSU President

Attention student voters

To the editor:

On Tuesday, Oct. 18, OSU students will be given their last chance to register to vote for the 1988 elections. The student population has the potential to make a tremendous impact in these elections, and it is for this reason that the ASOSU State Affairs Task Force is sponsoring a last-minute voter registration drive in the Memorial Union Quad. If you have not yet registered to vote and are eligible to do so, please stop by to register. If you have already registered, please remember to make your voice heard on Nov. 8 by exercising your right to vote. It only takes minutes.

Thank you to all who have helped us approach our goal of registering 1600 students. However, the following people have made mistakes on their voter registration cards, and unless they correct these mistakes, they will be unable to vote in this year's elections. We ask that these people stop by the Quad or come by the Student Activities Center in the M.U. East to make the corrections. We will be available in either location from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. today. For more information, please call Tim Wood or Melinda Morgan at 754-2101. Again, these people need to contact us by Tuesday, Oct. 18 in order to be eligible to vote.

NAMES OF PEOPLE WITH MISTAKES ON THEIR CARDS:
Robert Sparks, Eric Oehling, Scott Peets, Raymond Wright, Vincent Shelby, Timothy Stebbins, Jose Landin, Robert Patton, Jeffrey Carlson, Mathew Weber, Joseph Bonnarens, Robert Brown, and Molly Weisenberger.

A103 Art and reason

When Mark and I decided to spend the weekend at his mother's house, I never imagined I would be walking into a mouse's nightmare. There were cats everywhere.

Cat plaques, cat statues, cat clocks, even a cat mat. I couldn't begin to duplicate her collection of kitty litter if I spent a year at a garage sale. Conspicuously absent, however, was a real cat. Strange. I thought, and began to fear that a weekend with cat woman could be a lot less than purr-fect.

But then she came home, and Mark introduced her. She was dressed surprisingly well—no leopard pants. In fact, you could say she was the cat's meow, but I'd rather not. She offered me a cup of Dutch Chocolate Mint. Now that was something I could relate to. Then she brought it out in the most beautiful, distinctly unfeline china I'd ever seen. As we sipped, I found out that Mrs. Campbell has my same weakness for chocolate, loves the theater as much as I do, but, incredibly, never saw "Cats." So Mark and I are taking her next month.

Poll: Cook, Fadeley race a dead heat

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Vern Cook is leading Edward Fadeley in their race for a seat on the Oregon Supreme Court, but more than 40 percent of the voters are still undecided, according to a new poll.

The statewide survey, conducted for KOIN-TV and the Oregonian newspaper and published in Sunday's editions of the paper, shows 33 percent of those questioned favoring or leaning toward Cook and 26 percent for Fadeley.

Both Cook and Fadeley are former Democratic state senators. They are running for a seat being vacated by the retirement of Justice J.R. Campbell.

"I'm very pleased I am maintaining my lead," said Cook, 63, of Troutdale.

Both candidates said they expect large numbers of voters to remain undecided until very close to the Nov. 8 election.

Portland woman succeeds on Everest climb

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Two male climbers, sacrificing their chance to reach the world's highest peak, gave their last bottle of oxygen to an American woman, enabling her to become the first U.S. female to conquer Mount Everest, the leader of the expedition said Sunday.

"We ran out of oxygen. We just had one bottle left," said James Frush, 38, a Seattle lawyer and leader of a U.S. climbing expedition that began a series of Everest climbs last month.

Frush told United Press International they were at the south summit, about 1,000 feet below the mountain's apex, at the time.

Kids taken from cult

OREGON CITY, Ore. (UPI) — Authorities took six more children from a youth athletic group into state custody Sunday, and a fourth person was charged with murder in the beating death of a girl under the group's care.

Bart Wilson, a spokesman for the state children's Services Division, said the six children, ranging in age from 1 and one-half months to 12 years, were taken into protective custody after being interviewed by state workers and sheriff's deputies.

Capt. Pat Detloff of the Clackamas County Sheriff's Department said Sunday a fourth person — Brian James Brinson, 30, of Los Angeles — had also been charged with murder.

Mass. bond report boosts Dukakis

BOSTON (UPI) — A leading national bond rating service, in a report boosting presidential claims of Gov. Michael Dukakis, has issued a report praising Massachusetts for its "sound" financial planning, The Boston Globe reported.

Standard and Poor's, in a special report on Massachusetts, called the state's debt ratio "moderate" and said it is expected to "continue to achieve sound financial results" with its plans for dealing with any future budget deficits.

The report reaffirmed Massachusetts' bond rating at AA-plus, the Globe said. The highest possible rating is AAA.

The Standard and Poor's report follows another favorable analysis two months ago by Moody Investors, which also expressed confidence that the state had gained control of revenue problems caused by revenue shortfalls this spring.

It also contrasted with statements by Republican George Bush at the presidential debate Sept. 25, when he charged that Democrat Dukakis's increased use of short-term borrowing is "exactly the kind of last-ditch borrowing that got New York City into such troubles before it had to be bailed out by the federal government."

The Standard and Poor's report said the Dukakis administration's recent increased use of short-term debt to handle revenue shortfalls and changes in local aid payments is "nonexcessive."

"After years of expansion, the Massachusetts economy still shows considerable vitality," said the report, which the Globe said was seen by bond traders as an attempt to calm market concerns that Republicans and other Dukakis critics have raised about the state's fiscal stability.

The Standard and Poor's report expressed confidence that the administration's recent budget-balancing initiatives — including higher state fees, cigarette tax hikes and changes in the corporate tax code — will produce the revenues needed to meet any shortfalls.

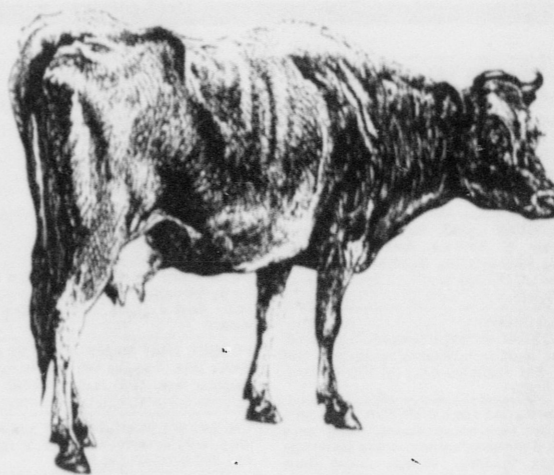

"While some of these revenue initiatives are aggressive (in their income estimates), they seem reasonable...given the state's history of mid-year budget balancing," the report said.

Bases deal reached

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino said Sunday Manila has reached agreement with Washington on strategic U.S. military bases in the Philippines, a politically sensitive issue that took months of sometimes-bitter negotiations to resolve.

Aquino told reporters the pact will be signed in Washington Monday by U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and Philippines Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus, who reportedly canceled plans to return home Saturday because the talks on terms for continued operation of the bases for the next two years had reached a critical stage.

"He (Manglapus) called me up this morning and they will sign it Monday at 3 p.m., Washington time," she said of the agreement covering the Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval complex, America's largest overseas bases with 17,000 servicemen plus dependents.

PSU said to discriminate against blacks, women

PORTLAND (UPI) — The U.S. Department of Labor has ruled that Portland State University discriminated against black and women employees.

In a nine-page document drawn up by the federal agency's Portland office, officials said they have evidence that "minorities and women are discouraged from employment, discouraged in advancement and suffer different treatment regarding the implementation of policies and practices."

The document also said PSU has failed to show "good faith efforts to recruit, train and promote minorities and females."

Jacquelyn Harrell, the director of PSU's affirmative action programs, said in a memorandum to the deans this week that the Labor Department finding could result in the cutoff of some federal funds for the school.

She also said negotiations to reach a settlement with the department that would solve the problem have broken down. She said Natale Sicuro, who resigned as PSU president Monday, could have signed such an agreement earlier, but failed to do anything.

"He was out of it," Harrell said of Sicuro. "He wasn't functioning."

John Herrera, a policy analyst in the Labor Department's Seattle office, said the department began investigating PSU after a university employee filed a sex discrimination complaint against the school last winter.

The Labor Department document said the worker, Sally Lopez, was a victim of sexual discrimination and harassment "with intentional infliction of emotional distress."

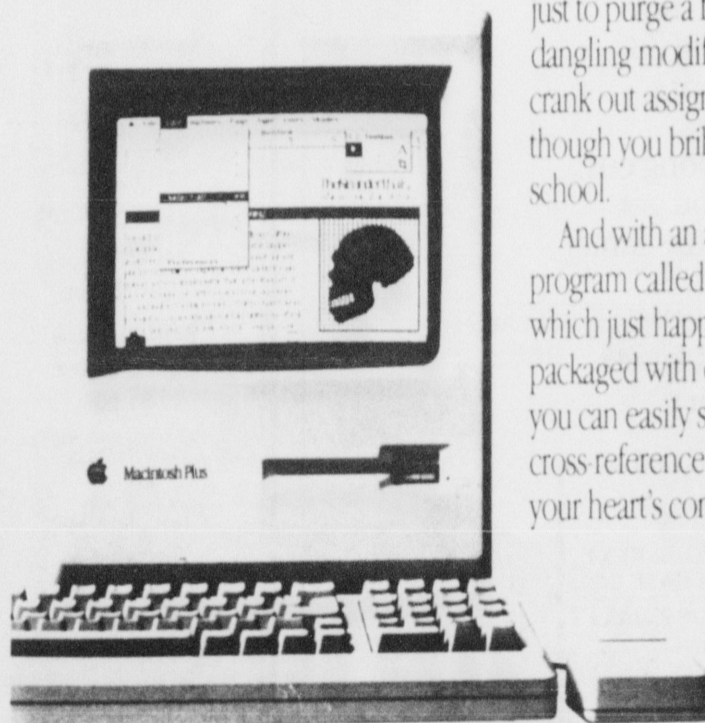

The department also charged the university does not have enough black faculty members, does not support its affirmative action programs and failed to hire a black woman because of her race.

Roger Edgington, the executive vice president who assumed Sicuro's duties, said he thought settlement negotiations were continuing with the Labor Department, and denied federal funding is endangered.

Alaska demands apology from U.S. Customs

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Alaska has demanded a public apology from U.S. Customs for the way agents acted on a state ferry during a "zero tolerance" drug search, but Customs refused, asking the state to retract its allegations. State officials accused Customs of ripping up crew staterooms, damaging and perhaps even taking crew belongings, endangering ship safety, falsely accusing the crew, inconveniencing passengers and delaying the ferry one hour.

An angry Customs chief denied the allegations and demanded his own apology for being insulted.

"I feel a public apology is due to our crew members by your office," Alaska Commissioner of Transportation Mark Hickey told U.S. Customs District Director Duane Oveson in a strongly-worded two-page Sept. 27 letter made available to United Press International.

The reason for the search — "We had information," Oveson said, stopping short, but adding, "There is more to the story than I can possibly tell you. There is something that we missed." Oveson said Alaska's criticism "is not going to change the way we do business. This is the U.S. Customs Service."

Beavs hold onto four game streak

Women sweep pair at home

By TODD CANNING
of the Barometer

The OSU women's soccer team swept a pair of home games yesterday, taking a 2-0 decision from Linfield in the first match and a 3-1 decision from the University of Portland J.V. in the afternoon game.

The victories extended the Beavers' winning streak to four games, while raising their season record to 7-5-1.

"Overall, I was pleased in coming away with the victories," commented coach Dave Oberbillig. "The girls at times had trouble keeping up their intensity, but they picked it up at the right times, enough to win both games."

Forward Kela Hinds provided the offense in the first game, scoring twice in the second half in the win over Linfield. Tied 0-0 at half, the Beavers jumped out to an early 1-0 lead, when Hinds took a pass from Karissa Pedersen and scored what would turn out to be the game-winning goal. Hinds added her second goal with 20 minutes remaining, scoring off of a throw-in from Kris Johnson, closing out the scoring at 2-0.

The Beavers dominated play throughout, outshooting the Wildcats 15-3, but were unable to put away their shots; shots that could have put the game out of reach.

"We played extremely well the first 10 minutes of the game, but were unable to score early," Coach Oberbillig said. "At that point we seemed to slack off, and we showed very little killer instinct for the rest of the first half. But we picked it up in the second half and had better success finishing. Kela played very well, and we dominated the game throughout, but we need to develop more composure on offense."

In the second game, the Beavers rallied after falling behind early to the University of Portland J.V. team. The Pilots, who earlier defeated Linfield 3-1, opened the scoring at the 10-minute mark on a penalty kick for a 1-0 lead. Chellie Kennedy answered for the Beavers with 10 minutes left in the first half off of an assist from Pedersen to tie the game at 1-1, the score at half.

OSU took the lead for good 10 minutes into the second half, as Tricia Eichelberger scored off of a Johnson assist, putting the Beavers up 2-1. Eichelberger wrapped up scoring with an insurance goal, putting away a direct kick for a 3-1 final score.

Coach Oberbillig said he was more pleased with the effort in the game against the Pilots.

"We used more players in the game against Portland, as I wanted all of the girls to get playing time. We outshot them 21-7, but still had some problem putting the ball in the net. We had a lot of good shots right at their keeper. Like the first game, we spent almost the whole game on offense."

The Beavers' next action is against Lewis & Clark at Parker Stadium, Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

Dodgers take two game lead

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Orel Hershiser pitched a three-hitter Sunday night and added the best hitting performance by a World Series pitcher in 64 years, moving the Los Angeles Dodgers halfway to a sweep with a 6-0 rout of the Oakland Athletics.

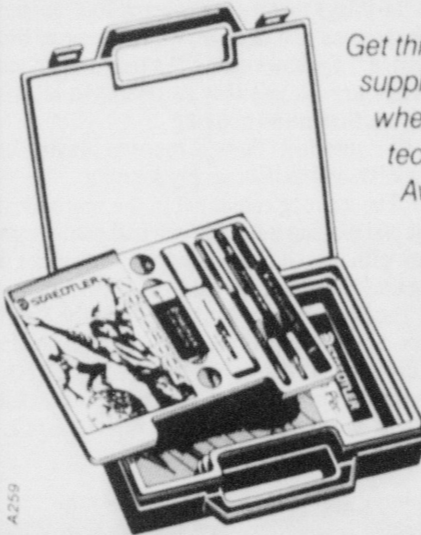

Trying to avoid their first three-game losing slide in two months, the A's return to Oakland, where former Dodger Bob Welch opposes Los Angeles lefty John Tudor on Tuesday night.

The Dodgers, who won 10 less regular season games than Oakland, entered the series as heavy underdogs.

Netters drop two matches

By ROD HESS
of the Barometer

The Oregon State women's volleyball team remained winless within the Pac-10 Conference, dropping matches to California and Stanford this weekend at Gill Coliseum.

The Beavers didn't win a game in either of the best-of-five matches.

"We can play really good, we've proven that. Until the kids can play that consistent game, however, it's not enough to win," OSU Coach Guy Enriquez said.

In Friday's match against California, Oregon State's play was streaky. The Beavers dropped a 15-3, 18-16, 15-8 decision to California, which improved to 10-8 overall, 2-6 in Pac-10 action.

In the first game, the Golden Bears jumped out to a 5-0 lead and, after two Beaver points, outscored OSU 10-1. The same patterns were true in the second and third matches, as California jumped out to 4-0 and 8-0 leads and Oregon State wasn't able to recover from its inconsistency.

"When you give them eight straight (points), that's not really playing ball," Enriquez said.

In the Saturday night match with third-ranked Stanford, the Cardinal rolled to a 15-9, 15-2, 15-4 win that improved their record to 16-1, 8-1 in Pac-10 play.

"We played okay, but that's not going to do it for us," Enriquez said. "We need to play over our heads to compete in the Pac-10."

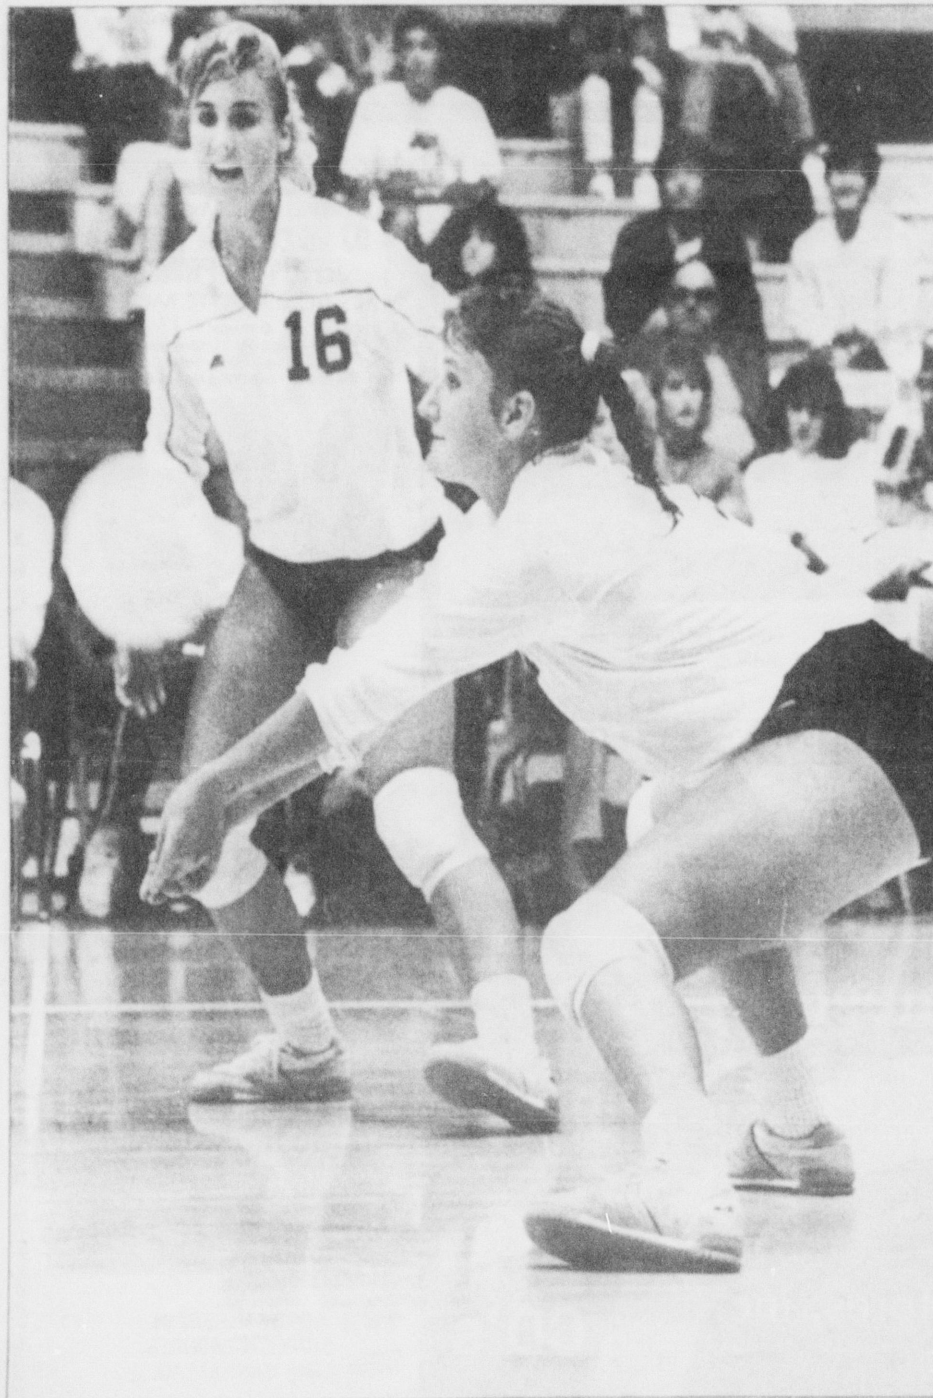

One of the problems in each of the matches was the front-line height advantage California and Stanford possessed.

"We are a short team and unless we improve on the things that we can control, like our serving, passing and defense, we're going to be in trouble," Enriquez said. "It's tough when your hitters are 5-9 and they're trying to hit over players that are 6-1 and 6-2."

Enriquez feels there is more to playing volleyball matches than simply winning.

"The winning comes not in the score for us, but just playing well. You can still come from a loss with a good feeling, but we're just not doing that right now," he said.

The Beavers, now 10-15 and 0-9 in the Pac-10, face tough competition this weekend against 11th-ranked USC and No. 1-ranked UCLA. Oregon State meets the Trojans on Friday and the Bruins on Saturday. Both matches begin at 7:30 p.m. at Gill Coliseum.

GEORGE PETROCCIONE—The Daily Barometer

Beavers' Tricia Becker returns a serve at Saturday's action against the Stanford Cardinal. Stanford took the match in three straight games. The Beavers next opponent is USC, Friday night, 7:30 p.m. in Gill Coliseum.

Men win easily over Columbia

Oregon State's men's soccer team scored early and scored often Friday, defeating Columbia Christian 9-1 at the Women's Building Field.

The Beavers have a 6-6-1 record on the year.

Garin Gregory scored OSU's final three goals to register the first hat trick in Oregon State's 13-match history. Tod McKay scored two goals and assisted on another while Sean Bannon, David Link, Michael Pepper, and Jay Johnson each added goals.

John Cox had two assists and Kirk Larsen, Bannon, and Johnson each added one.

"The kids knocked the ball around very well," OSU Coach Jimmy Conway said. "People were open and we had a lot of good running off of the ball. We have been close to scoring lately — the goals finally came today. I hope the scoring in this game is contagious."

The Beavers take the field again Wednesday when they host second-ranked Portland at 3 p.m.

Beavers start second half

For many collegiate football teams, a winning season is the standard and anything less would be unthinkable.

For teams like USC and UCLA, the primary goal of the season is to win the Pacific 10, Rose Bowl, and National championships.

But, for a team like Oregon State, such goals are too lofty and it must set its sights on the lesser goal of a winning season.

And, after 17 consecutive losing seasons, many skeptics thought this goal was also unattainable this season.

Well, think again. Coach Dave Kragthorpe's team is 3-3 through the first half of the season and still has a shot at its first winning season since 1970.

"I am pleased with our overall play to this point," Kragthorpe said. "We have played six strong games and now we are in a position to have a winning season."

What's more, the Beavers have had an opportunity to win each game this season.

"At the start of the season, it was a goal of ours to be in the game at the fourth quarter," Kragthorpe said. "I don't think there is a player on this team who doesn't think we could have won every one of those games, including UCLA."

And rightly so. OSU, with the exception of the UCLA game, has not trailed by more than 11 points in any game this season. And when it has been behind, it has found a way to battle back into the game.

In their opener against Arizona, the Beavers fell behind 7-0 and came back to take a 13-10 lead, only to lose 24-13. In their 28-21 loss to Colorado, the Beavers overcame a 16-7 deficit for a 21-16 lead.

Against California, they rallied from a 16-3 deficit in the fourth quarter to win 17-16. Fresno State had a 10-7 third-quarter lead, but OSU came back to win, 21-10.

Last week against UCLA, the Beavers spotted the Bruins at a 21-0 lead before closing it to 21-14 at halftime and were still in a position to win in the fourth quarter.

Last week, like the rest of the season, the Beavers allowed their opponents to get ahead. They have outscored in the first quarter, 48-17.

"It's definitely been a factor," Kragthorpe said of his team's late starts. "Ironically, we talked about getting out to good start before the UCLA game. We've been better in the second half this season. We need to improve on getting out early."

In fact, the San Jose State game is the only contest that OSU never trailed. Subsequently, the Beavers won by their largest margin of the season, 41-27.

There are many factors that feed into the Beavers' success, but Kragthorpe said the running game, aggressive defense, and physical play have played the largest roles this season.

Kragthorpe said the running backs, offensive line and greater emphasis on the run are the reasons for the improved ground attack this season.

"We have worked hard on the running game this year and the backs have been running well," he said. "It's basically the attitude and the emphasis on the running game (that accounts for the success)."

Last year, OSU ran for 518 yards on 246 carries. Through six games this season, the Beavers have 774 yards rushing on 199 carries.

Defense has also played a key role in the Beavers' success this season. Last year, OSU gave up an average of 278.8 yards rushing per game and 462.1 yards total offense. Both totals ranked last in the Pac-10.

In 1988, OSU opponents have been held to 171.2 yards rushing and 380.7 total offensive yards.

The Beavers were also outscored last year at an average of 39-17 per game. This season, they have only been outscored 24-22.

Though the Beavers are averaging more points this year than last, Kragthorpe would still like to see more points on the board.

"We haven't scored as many points as we would like," he said.

Probably the biggest and most notable improvement this season is in the turnover department.

"We're taking care of the ball better this year," Kragthorpe said. "Our turnover ratio (+11) is the best in the Pac-10 and fifth in the nation, I think."

Last season, OSU gave the ball away 21 more times than the defense took it away, which ranked last in the conference.

The play of senior quarterback Erik Wilhelm is one of reasons for the change in this statistic. "Erik Wilhelm has played very, very well," Kragthorpe said. "He has thrown only two interceptions out of 245 passes."

As a junior, Wilhelm tossed 21 interceptions out of 423 attempts.

Looking forward to the remainder of the season, Kragthorpe sees only one team that is up to the caliber of UCLA. That team is USC, which travels to Corvallis on Oct. 29.

"We have some tough games left," he said. "We'll have to play very well against USC, but we won't go in fearing them or trembling. All the other teams (Stanford, Arizona State, Washington State and Oregon) are at our level. We're looking forward to the rest of the season. We've played six solid games and we're looking forward to the next five. It should be exciting."
