President Reagan meets with Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko, the president's first in-depth talk with a Soviet leader.

October

DETROIT WINS-

Rowdy fans go wild after the Detroit Tigers win the 1984 World Series for the first time since 1969.

THREE SHARE NOBEL-

Three researchers win the 1984 Nobel Prize in medicine for their work in pioneering studies in immunology that have led to promising new treatments for diseases ranging from allergies to cancer. They are Niels Kaj Jeine, Georges Kochler, and Cesar Milstein.

BABY FAE-

A dying 14-day-old infant girl receives the transplanted heart of a baboon sparking many ethical controversies.

GANDHI ASSASSINATED-

Prime Minister of India Indira Gandhi is killed by assassins, setting off violent rioting by Hindu mobs seeking revenge against members of the Sikh faith.

November

ELECTION RESULTS-

The incumbent republicans, President Ronald Reagan and Vice-President George Bush win the 1985 presidential election with a resounding sweep of 49 states, carrying 60 percent of the popular vote. The defeated democratic ticket of Walter Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro still make history though with Ms. Ferraro being the first woman to run on a national ticket.

SNIPER ATTACK-

A University of Oregon student terrorizes the U of O campus, killing one man and wounding another before taking his own life.

WHERE'S THE BEEF?-

Clara Peller, age 80, immortalizes the phrase "Where's the beef?" with her TV commercials for Wendy's restaurants.

ETHIOPIAN FAMINE-

Americans become aware of the major African famine gripping several nations of that country. Ethiopia being among the worst hit.

SECOND ARTIFICIAL HEART TRANSPLANT-

William Schroeder, the second person ever to receive the artificial heart transplant seemed to be faring well after the 6½ hour implant operation. Doctors say Schroeder has fewer other complications than did Barney Clark, the first artificial heart recipient who was able to live for 112 days with the implant.

December

SWEET SUCCESS-

Dr. Daniel Azarnoff introduces a molecular model of the artificial sweetener "Nutra-sweet", a non-nutritive, low calorie sweetener that is quickly replacing saccharine in many low calorie foods.

BHOPAL DISASTER-

Deadly gas leaks from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India killing an estimated 410 people and causing health ailments in countless others within a 25 mile radius of the plant.

NEW FOOTBALL COACH-

David Kragthorpe is chosen to replace the ousted Joe Avezano as OSU's new head football coach.

January

DRY SPELL A SURPRISE -

January quickly becomes the driest on record. But the lack of precipitation seems to be well countered by the reserves from a near record snow pack which grew substantially during November and December when record setting rainfall was recorded.

STUDENT AID IN JEOPARDY-

President Reagan proposes a massive cut in federally funded student aid programs in an effort to "help balance the budget".

NORTHWEST NUCLEAR DUMP?-

The Energy Department includes the Hanford site in Washington state in its list of leading candidates to be the nation's first permanent burial ground for nuclear waste, but immediately encounters a great deal of legal and political opposition. President Reagan will pick three of the sites for extensive drilling and testing.

SALUTE TO ROBERT MACVICAR

On a clean, crisp afternoon in December 1984, Robert MacVicar left the Administration Building on the corner of Jefferson and 14th Street for the last time as Oregon State's university president. With him, Mr. MacVicar took 14 years of sentimental memories and the legacy of being one of the most powerful members of Oregon's education community.

In November of last year, we at the Beaver sent a group of writers and a photographer to record some of MacVicar's thoughts on his term of office.

MacVicar revealed that his most enduring memory will be the students and how they have changed over the years.

"It will be the students," MacVicar says that he will miss most. He is a firm believer that young minds and young ideas are a very healthy part of any community and are the right ingredients to bring out the best in the older generation.

He finds the students now on campus to be friendlier, more ambitious, and of more diverse backgrounds than ever before.

Diversity of the student body is an accomplishment that MacVicar is particularly proud of. OSU has grown from a university that once boasted a student from every county in Oregon to one that now boasts of a student from every continent and major country in the world. "OSU is now truly an international school."

His advice to today's college students is a "stop and smell the roses" philosophy. "Students today work much harder than my contemporaries and I did in college," MacVicar maintained. "Competition is much more rigorous and students in turn spend many more hours today studying and/or working to put themselves through school. My advice is to take it easy on occasion. A quick trip to the mountains or the coast may seem impossible today but, in a few years, will appear to have been so trivial."

Mr. MacVicar plans to do some traveling following his retirement and to get settled in his new home in Corvallis. He will remain active on campus, however, occupying an office in the Nuclear Engineering Building.

Your recognized "student voice" on campus is ASOSU, the Associated Students of Oregon State University. ASOSU represents student concerns at the State Legislature, the City of Corvallis and the OSU campus through many task forces, committees, and the ASOSU Senate. ASOSU consists of elected Executives and Senators and appointed officers who serve the ASOSU student body by working on a variety of issues and projects.

There are many ways to get involved at ASOSU, from elected positions to volunteer and appointed positions. If a student wants to get involved or receive information about ASOSU, they can contact any of the ASOSU Executive members, the Task Force Directors or Senators at the Student Activities Center in Memorial Union East. If a student would like to see legislation passed or changes made at OSU, they can contact their school's organization's senator also at the Student Activities Center.

JUDICIAL BOARD

The ASOSU Judicial Board was first established Fall term of 1984 as the third branch of the ASOSU Student Government. The Board consists of five members who were selected after participating in a series of rigorous interviews. The Judicial Board has final authority over any case or controversy brought before it pertaining to the Constitution and the Statutes of ASOSU. In essence, the Board is organized and operates much like the United States Supreme Court.

The ASOSU Senate is the legislative branch of student government at OSU. The Senate is responsible for representing the students of OSU on issues dealing with campus life, the administration, and academic concerns. The Senate is also responsible for periodically reviewing and revising the structure of student government to best meet the needs of OSU students.

The Senate is comprised of 38 student members representing each college and school on campus as well as each of the major living group organizations, the Memorial Union Program Council, International Students Organization and the Graduate and Professional Students Association.

Teri Crisp

Teri Crisp, a fifth year senior with an English major, is a remarkable student. While involved in student activities and working part time her first four years at school, Teri has maintained a high grade point average.

Born in San Francisco, Teri attended elementary school in California, and after her family moved to the Philomath, Oregon area, she attended Philomath High School. She attended Oregon State for four years, then visited Europe for a year, and returned as a fifth year senior to complete her degree.

As a sophomore, Teri was an editor for Montage Magazine. Writing feature stories, Teri previewed plays and artshows, profiled individuals, and covered other areas of entertainment. She found working on the staff very interesting and valuable.

Providing needed help to many people, Teri worked for the Communications Skills Center during her junior and senior year. The center helps anyone that desires aid with tests and competencies.

Teri spent an average of two hours a day helping people with communication problems as a writing tutor. "This was a valuable experience for me," remarked Teri, "I had to really learn grammar. To explain the concepts you really have to have a handle on them."

During these first four years at Oregon State, Teri also worked part time at Mazzi's, and did secretarial work during the summers.

Teri spent her next year in Europe after she was given the opportunity to study in France by the American Heritage Program within Oregon State. She attended school in Avignon for the first three months, and then traveled around the continent for the latter months.

While living within the city of Avignon, she stayed with a French family. "Just by being able to live with a family you learn so much about a country."

After living in France, Teri traveled for six months to various countries; she went to Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece and Egypt.

She believes Egypt was the most unusual part of the trip. She noted the tremendous gaps between the poor and the rich, and the old and the new, and the effect that larger countries, such as the United States have on Egypt.

Through her studies and travels, she has become interested in cross-cultural and international relations. She believes that language affects the way that we perceive others from different countries and we tend to misunderstand their culture. "Each country is so interrelated and interdependent that many organizations are in need of cross-cultural relations." After attending graduate school, Teri plans to involve herself in a career in which she can use what she has learned to this use.

Knute Buehler

"Perseverance. He just doesn't know when to quit," remarked Jack Riley, head coach of the OSU baseball team, as he described Knute Buehler. "He's the type of student athlete that college athletics are all about." Knute Buehler, a pitcher for the OSU baseball team, is a junior majoring in Microbiology with hopes of entering medical school.

Knute graduated from Roseburg High School where he participated in both football and baseball. He was honored as the All-Southern Oregon Conference Pitcher his senior year. Not only did he receive honors athletically but also academically. He was a member of the National Honor Society all four years.

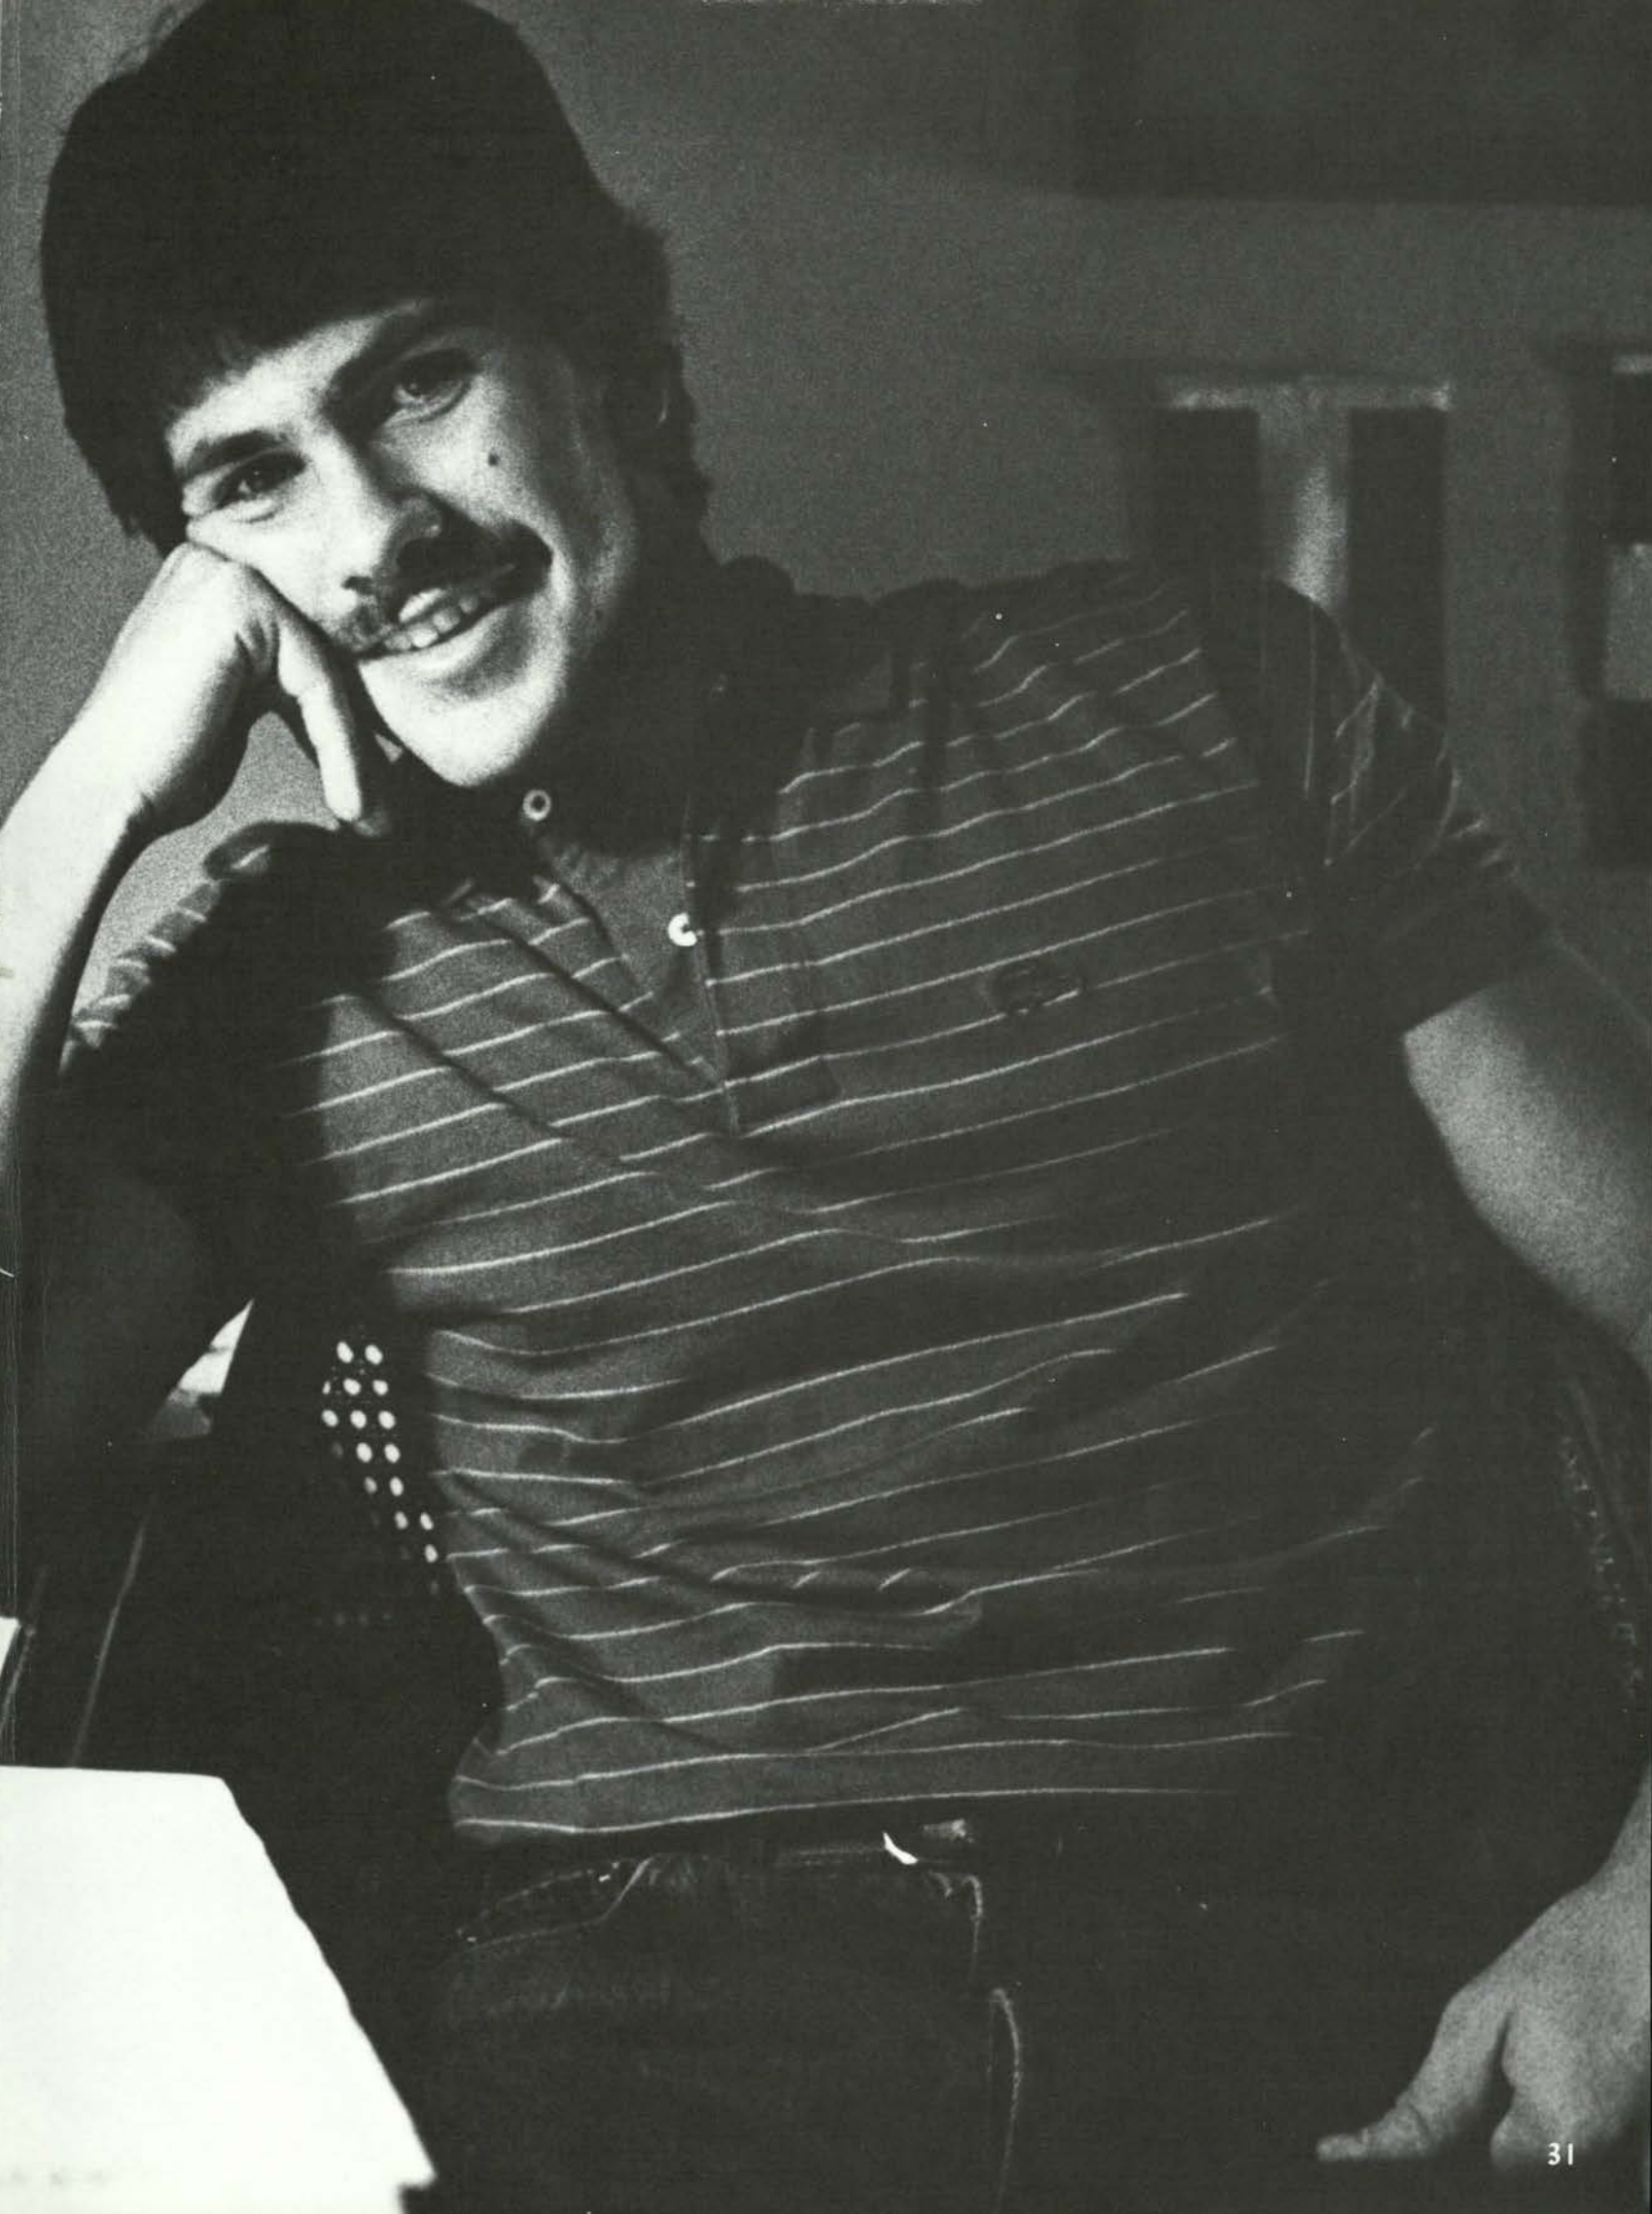

Knute's decision to come to Oregon State was prompted by the pre-med program as well as the baseball program. He was influenced in becoming a doctor by his older brother Mark, who is now finishing his residency in Portland, Oregon. Knute remembers coming to OSU with Mark and attending some of his classes. He was fascinated by the type of classes Mark was taking and wondered if he would ever do something like it. These visits to OSU also sparked his interest in playing baseball, when one weekend Mark had to study so Knute had to find something to do. There happened to be a baseball game going on that weekend so he sat and watched it. From that point, Knute always had it in the back of his mind he wanted to play baseball.

Upon entering OSU, Knute tried out for the team as an unrecruited player. Jack Riley saw a quality in him as a walk-on and decided he would be a player, down the road, that would develop. As a freshman Knute made a contribution to the baseball program as well as achieving scholastic honors. He was accepted into two freshman honoraries, Phi Eta Sigma and Alpha Lambda Delta.

Despite his disappointing sophomore year in baseball, Knute managed to maintain a 4.0 GPA throughout the year. He felt as if his baseball performance took a big step backwards. It was partly due to a muscle injury, but the main reason was more of a mental frame of mind that he could not shake. He feels this was caused by playing too much baseball in one year. He played Legions, right after his freshman year at OSU, which consisted of a series of games throughout the summer. "I saw the bad side of baseball that year," Knute explained. "The people in the stands started to get pretty cruel, which left a bad taste in my mouth for baseball."

By the end of the season last year Knute was about to step off the mound for good. But talks with coach Riley and Del Kerber, the OSU pitching coach, convinced Knute to give it another try. Through that perseverance, Knute will contribute everything he has to both baseball and medicine. According to Riley, "His contributions will be nothing short of success."

Anthony Wai Man Chung

For most college students, not knowing how to drive a car would be the least of their problems adjusting to college life. Ninety-nine percent of the college students here stress with just the thought of taking an exam. For the "exceptional" one percent of students, college doesn't mean chaining themselves to a desk in order to study. According to this exceptional student good grades come easy, whereas, locating means of transportation is his biggest problem at Oregon State. What makes this individual so extremely exceptional?

Born and raised in Hong Kong, Anthony Wai Man Chung decided to enroll at Oregon State University as a Computer Science major. That was three and a half years ago and the change of environment hasn't affected him as yet. This twenty-one year old senior has maintained a solid 4.0 grade point average since fall term his freshman year. One thing that he really likes about OSU is that the University offers wide-ranged programs whereas back in Hong Kong, a student studies only in his concentrating field, as in technical institutes.

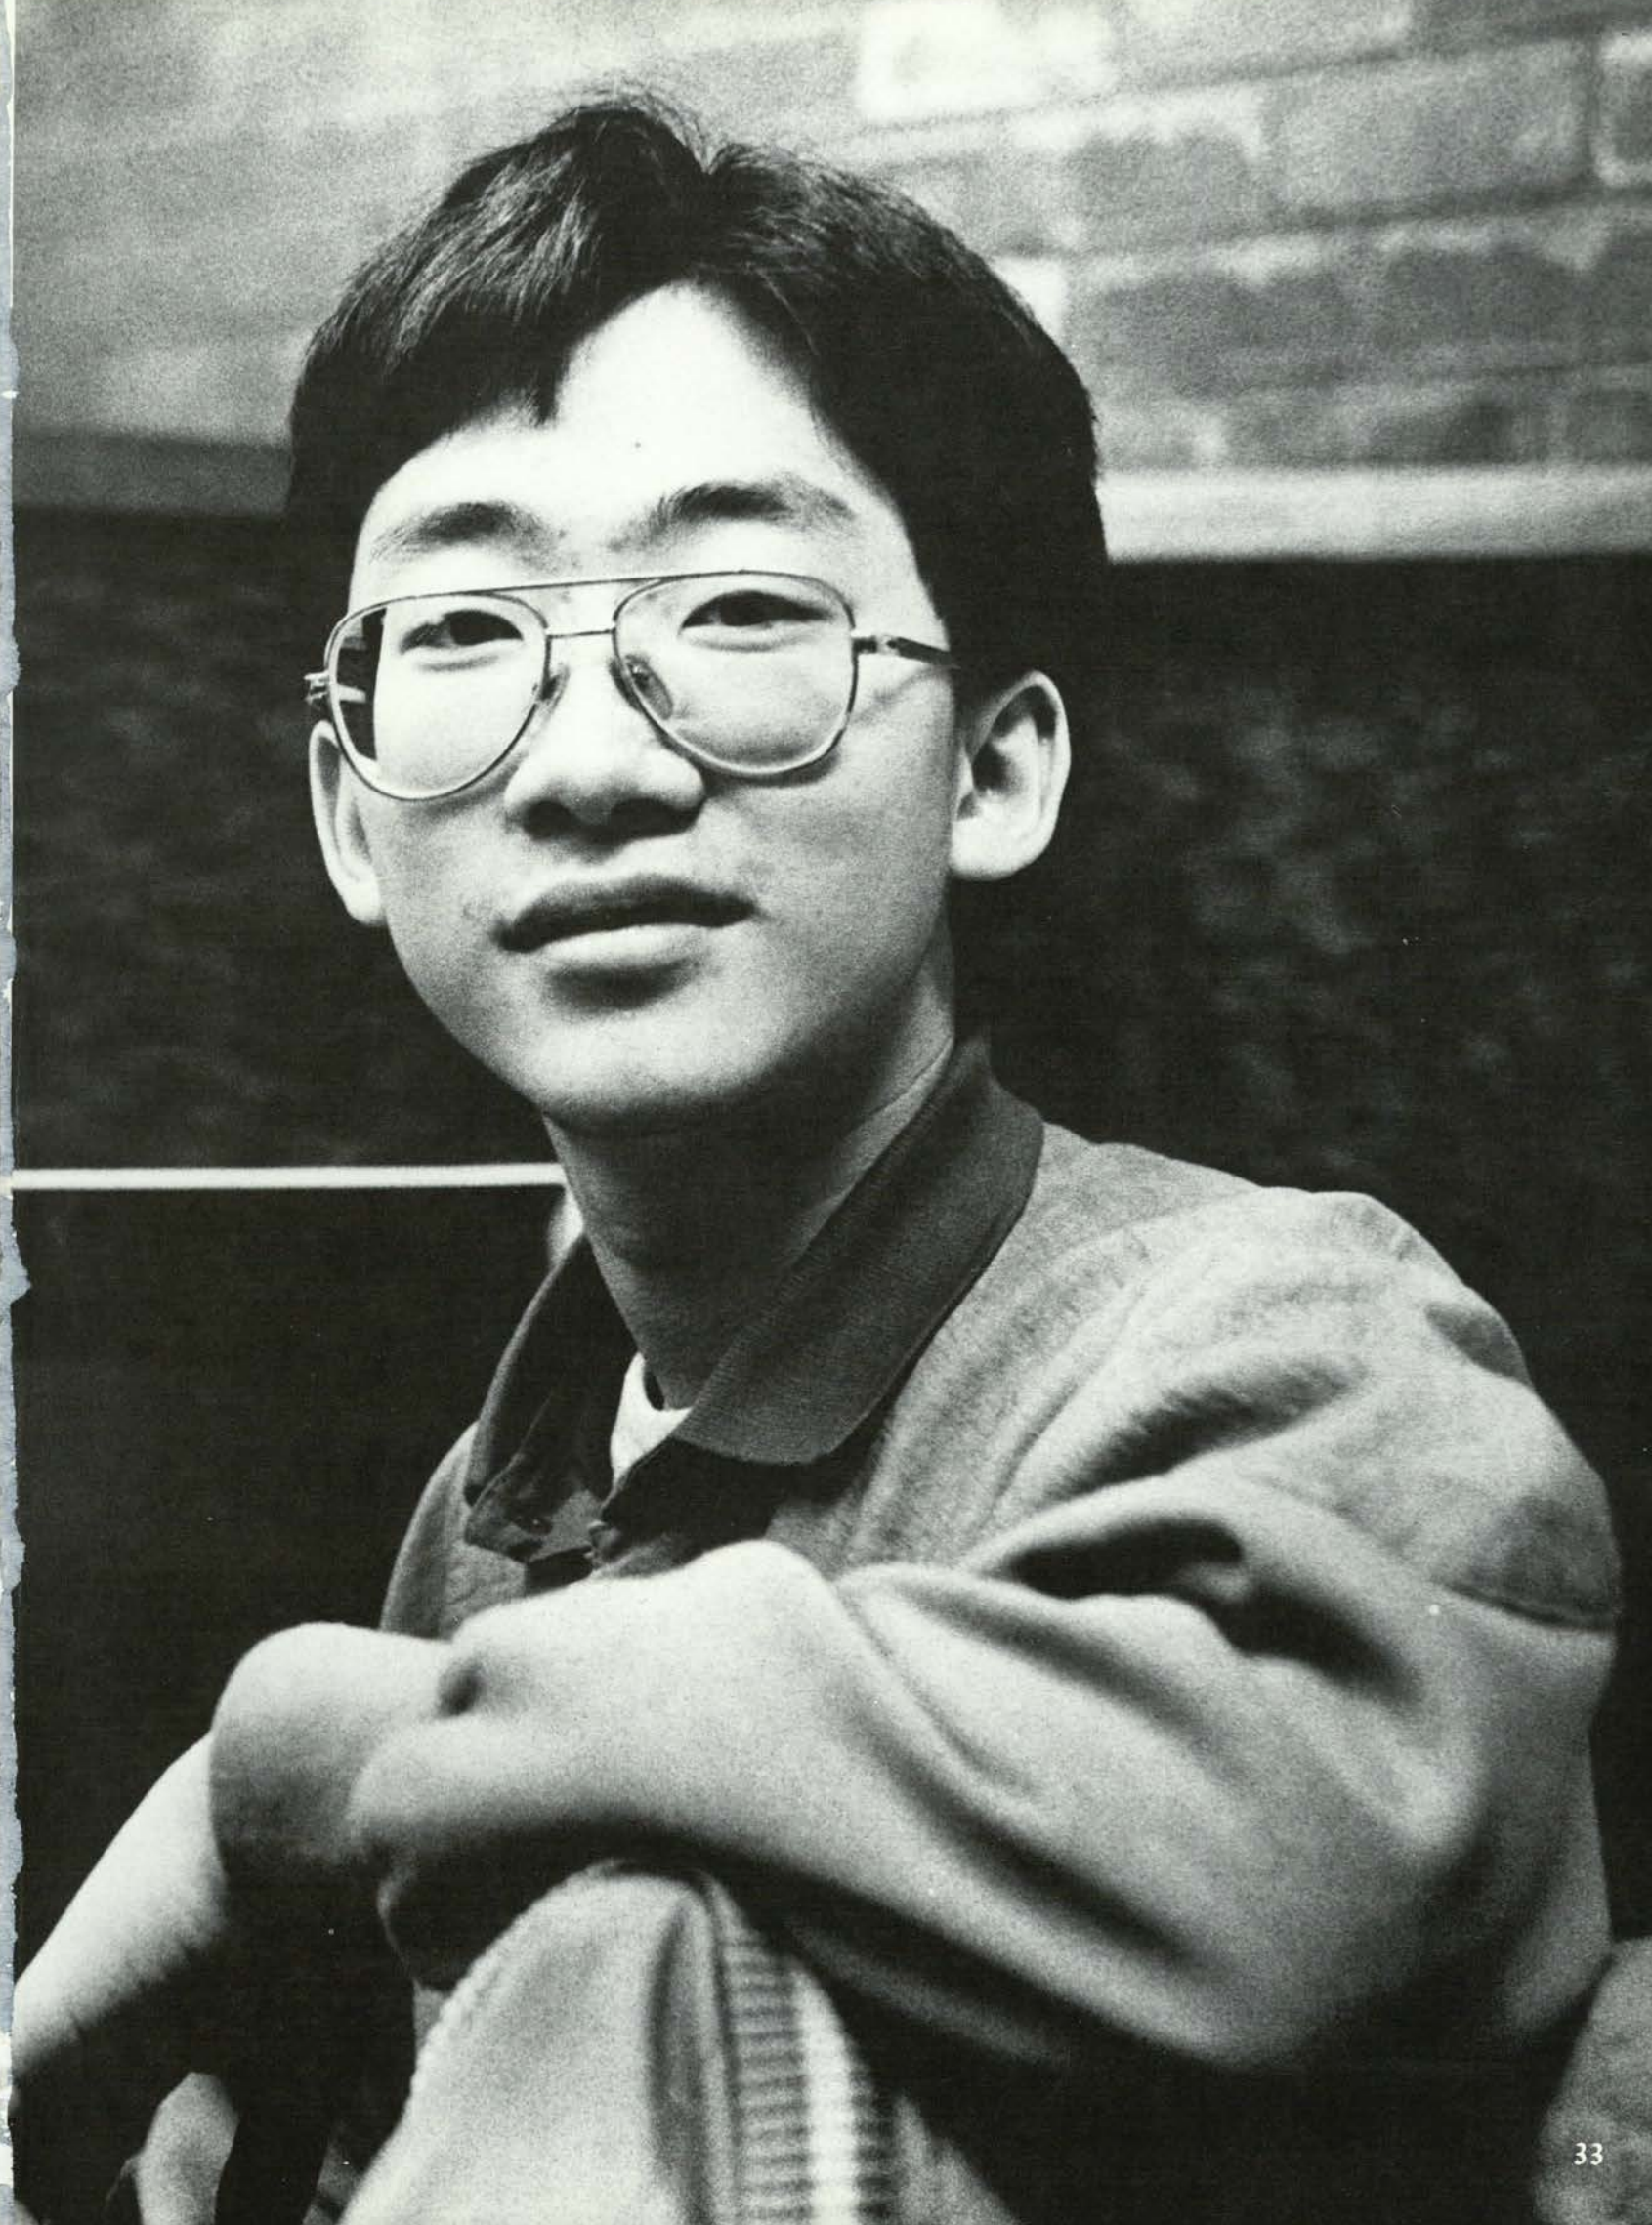

Why Oregon State? Anthony chose Oregon State over the universities in Hong Kong as well as other colleges in the states mainly because he had an uncle who attended Oregon State. Anthony credits his uncle as the main reason why adjustment came so easy for him. There existed no language difficulty since Anthony had been taught the English language back home where Hong Kong is under the British rule. Although his mother gradually accepted Anthony leaving home, his father encouraged his move to the states. Anthony comments that leaving home has taught him to be more independent. It was difficult at first since Anthony says that he was raised to be dependent on his parents. Homesickness did set in his first term here, but now, Anthony says he is enjoying the American way of life.

Aside from his studies, Anthony has proven to be an asset to the University by becoming involved in several campus activities. He is a member of the Honor Society and is affiliated with various General Science Honoraries. Anthony is also the Vice-President of the OSU Folk Dance Club and a member of the Hong Kong Student Association. With all of these activities, Anthony still manages to find free time to tutor Educational Opportunities Program students in computer science courses.

In addition to all of that, Anthony likes dancing, listening to music, reading, bicycling and just going out to a movie for recreational fun. How does he find spare time and still maintain his 4.0 GPA? Grinning, Anthony says that a good education is greatly stressed at home. In comparison, Anthony does feel that education here is a lot easier.

What is ahead for Anthony? At this point, he's not too sure. He is thinking about teaching in the Computer Science field, but working towards his Master's Degree is definitely not out of the picture. Whatever it be, one thing is sure, Anthony Chung is an achiever and an "exceptional" student here at Oregon State.

JOY SEO

The College of Agriculture performs three vital functions: instruction, research, and extension, which are closely tied to the human and natural resources of the state of Oregon and which support the economic development of the Pacific Northwest.

Students choose their majors from among the curricula of the Departments of Agricultural Education and General Agriculture, Agricultural Engineering, Agricultural and Resource Economics, Animal Science, Crop Science, Fisheries and Wildlife, Food Science and Technology, Horticulture, Poultry Science, Rangeland Resources, Soil Science and Agricultural Business Management.

Agricultural Business Management is a unique new degree program that offers students the opportunity to develop highly sophisticated and marketable agriculture. Offered by Oregon State University and Eastern Oregon State College at LaGrande, the program is the first of its kind in the Pacific Northwest. So, whether at OSU or EOSC, students will graduate with a degree from Oregon State. Also, students are free to transfer from one institution to another.

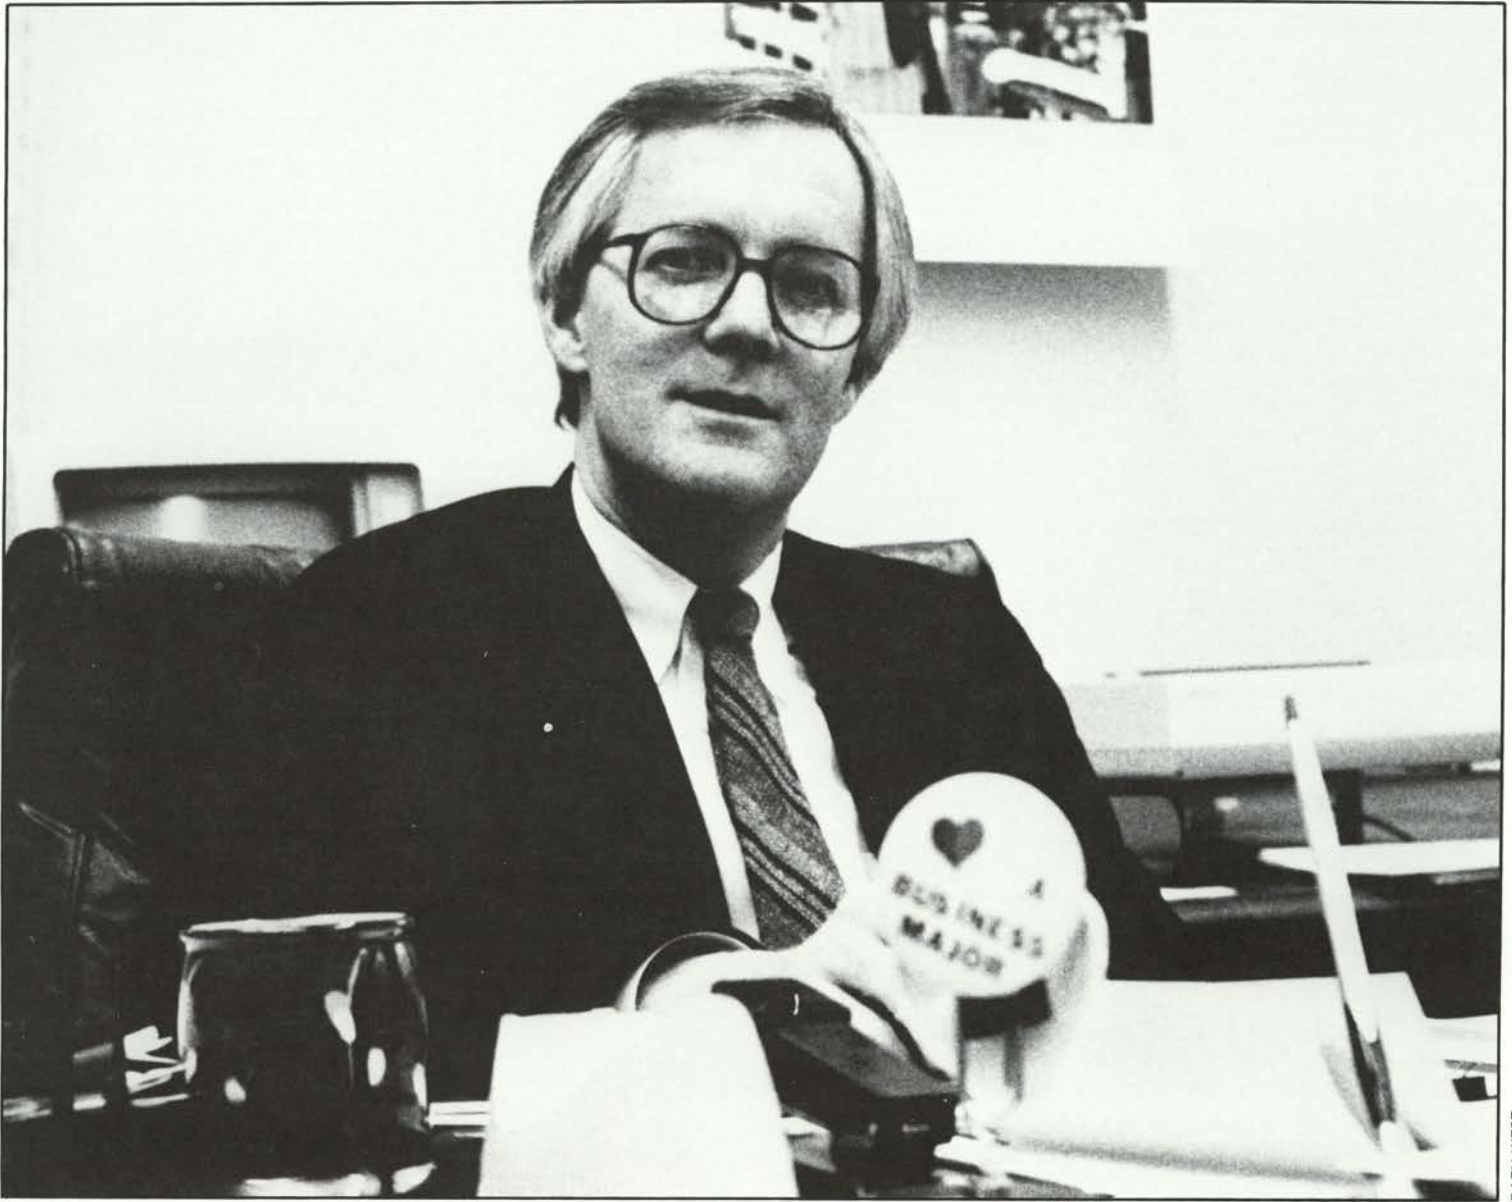

In cooperation with the College of Science, degrees are offered in the Department of Botany and Plant Pathology, Entomology, Microbiology, and Statistics.

Along with the many interesting fields in the College and the motto of considering every student as an important individual, the enrollment in the College of Agriculture has been increasing. All of this college's opportunities will definitely maximize returns from an investment in a college education.

BUSINESS

Under the leadership of a new dean, Dr. M. Lynn Spruill, the College of Business is welcoming changes. As of July 1, 1984, Spruill became the dean of the third largest college at Oregon State University. Spruill has proven to be a real positive influence on the College of Business.

As of this year, the college also put into effect some additions to their curriculum. A new management information systems course is being required for all Business majors in their senior year and the new Management Information Systems are of concentration is preparing Business majors for the Informational Technology Society of the future.

Current undergraduate degree programs include: Business Administration, Health Care Administration, and Hotel Restaurant and Tourism Management. Two graduate degree programs can also be pursued.

Accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, the college emphasizes the concepts and analytical techniques of business decision making as well as the obligations and opportunities of business people for effective service to society.

The College of Business has definitely proven to provide it's graduates with the necessary preparation for successful careers in modern business and management.

EDUCATION

Students attending the largest educational college in the state are now fortunate enough to have the Quality Assurance Program to support them. The concept of the program is to have the school standing behind its graduates.

With the Quality Assurance Program, first-year teachers and their employers go through an evaluation process. Evaluations by employers are done to see if the graduate meets the established performance goals. If assistance is needed, both Oregon State University and Western Oregon State College will be willing to provide any reasonable assistance for the improvement of teacher effectiveness.

The OSU's and WOSC's School of Education offers a wide range of teacher education opportunities to be explored on both campuses. Certain education programs are available on both campuses, but others are offered only at OSU or WOSC.

The education programs on both campuses form one school under the direction of one dean. This merge has provided students with the option of entering the school through either university without the difficulties of applying-reapplying and transferring.

The School of Education believes in its commitment to excellence in teacher education that will give all of its graduates special feeling of pride and accomplishment.

Since its beginning in 1893, the Oregon State University's College of Engineering has had a reputation of excellence in serving Oregon State students and the needs of Oregon and the nation.

The college enjoys the reputation of educational excellence with accredited programs in Agricultural, Chemical, Civil, Electrical and Electronics, Computer, Industrial, Mechanical, and Nuclear Engineering.

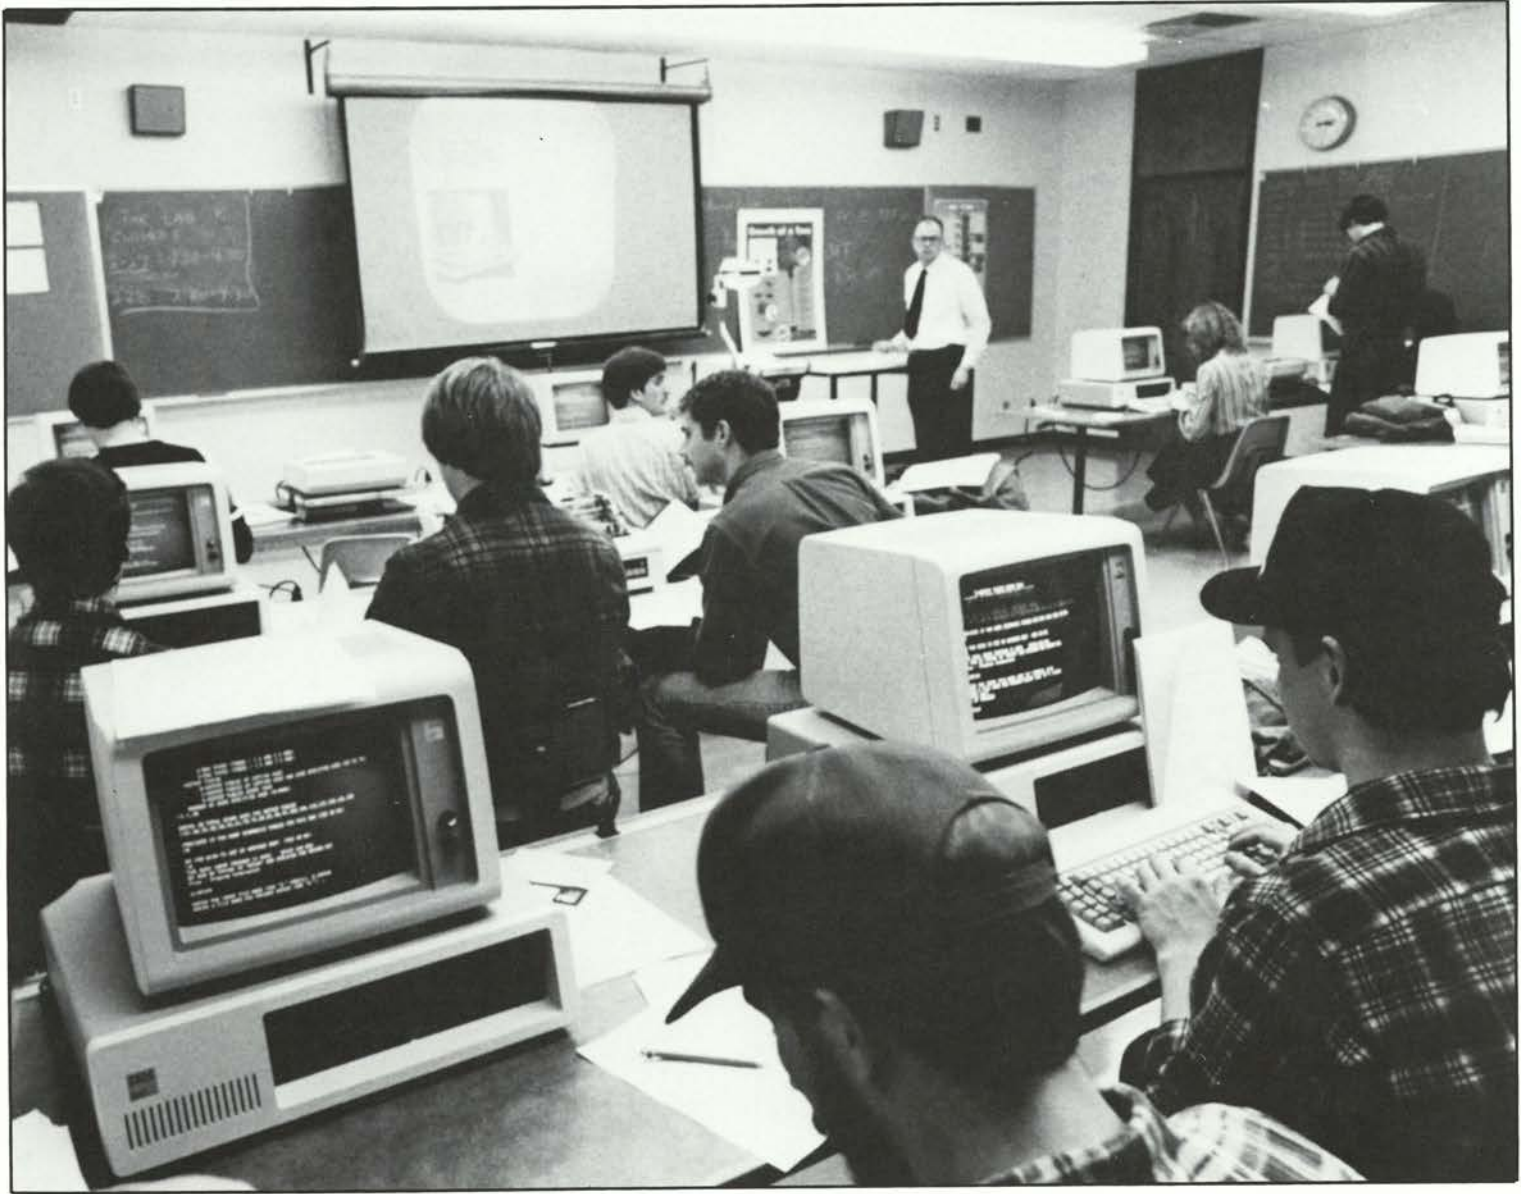

In addition to its academic programs, the college faculty of 112 conducts active research at the leading edge of engineering knowledge in such fields as energy systems, advanced materials and devices, water resources, transportation, and many others.

According to Dean Burgess, the school eyes its commitment to undergraduate education as a major importance, but also important are graduate programs and research.

COURTESY - COLLEGE OF FORESTRY

FORESTRY

When the College of Forestry was founded over 80 years ago, foresters were mainly custodians charged with protecting forests from fire, disease, insects, and overcutting. Today's forester has the same charge, but in addition is expected to apply the latest scientific knowledge and managerial skills to meeting the demands of modern society of forest resources — demands for wood, water, wildlife, recreation, range livestock, minerals and the solitude of undisturbed wilderness.

The modern forester is a planner employing the latest computer technology to analyze alternatives and make decisions. When the college celebrated its 53rd Annual Fernhopper Day this year, alums had a chance to reminisce about their undergraduate field laboratories during a tour of McDonald Forest, the college's research and teaching forest. But they soon found that the training of today's student goes far beyond what they could have imagined even 10 years ago.

Today's forestry student can easily obtain forest inventory data from an electronic file accessible from the college's new micro-computer laboratory. Spreadsheet software on the computers greatly simplifies data analysis. Graphics and mapping programs, and word processing greatly simplify the production of those forest management plans every forestry student loves so well.

The College of Forestry provides the comprehensive education needed by the forest managers of the future, while preserving the traditions of one of our Nation's noblest professions - forestry.

Human resources are our most precious commodity. The mission of the College of Health and Physical Education is to enhance the health and welfare of those resources without limitation as to sex, age or performance level. The academic thrusts of the college involve study of the effects of physical activity on health as well as the influence of environment on our well being. Students may specialize in a variety of sub-disciplines concerned with health and the promotion of active lifestyles. Health specialization include areas such as: teaching in schools, developing community health education programs, coordinating efforts related to environmental health and designing programs for reduction of health hazards and accidents in the private and public sectors. Physical education offers opportunities in teaching, athletic training, commercial fitness, pretherapy and sports leadership. A specialization in health care administration also is available through the college.

Research is directed at extending knowledge in the areas of health and physical education and in methods to better utilize that knowledge. Specific research interests serve to compliment the instructional programs and focus on improving the health: environment interface and to enhance our understanding of human movement and its contributions to human health and wellness.

The college also serves its community through a vareity of service activities. Highlighted here is the Special Physical-Motor Fitness Clinic. The clinic provides specialized physical education programs for school-aged youths. Individuals served by the clinic include those with developmental, neurologic, sensory, mental, orthopedic or other disabilities who need individualized physical education and fitness programs. Instruction is provided in aquatic and physical-motor fitness activities by a staff of professionals, assisted by graduate and undergraduate students enrolled in various professional programs on campus.

Other service activities of the college include the physical education activity program in which over 4500 OSU students are enrolled each term in a wide variety of sports, dance and fitness activities. The Department of Intramural Sports conducts a comprehensive program of more than 30 activities for student participation. The college also is involved in a youth traffic safety program and activities related to consulting with business and industry in environmental healthy and safety.

This service activity serves to demonstrate the whole fabric of the college weaving together the threads of teaching, research and service.

The College of Home Economics at Oregon State University with appreciation of the past, awareness of the present and an orientation to the future adheres to the following statement as its goal for education at Oregon State:

Concern for the family is the core of home economics. Professionals in this interdisciplinary field are concerned with the aesthetic, economic, physical, biological, psychological and social needs of family members. Home economists are also concerned with the relationships, services, goods, and resources which enable families to function within environmental constraints.

The profession helps families and individuals at all age levels deal with diverse and changing lifestyles as well as with the interrelationships between families and local, national and world conditions which impact on families.

Home economists use the theory and knowledge from relevant humanities and sciences to develop a research and empirical base for the various subject matter disciplines. Outcomes are used by individuals, families and communities as they strive to set and attain their goals.

Professional specialization in the college are grouped into six departments: Clothing, Textiles and Related Arts, Human Development and Family Life, Family Resource Management, Foods and Nutrition, Communications and Home Economics Education; and Food Systems Management. The departments are not insular units; rather they are bound together by their common focus on the family to contribute a total approach to human needs, resources, and behavior. Resident instruction, research, extension and public service programs in these areas are applied to daily life concerns.

Although there exists all of the professional colleges here on campus, concentration on such technical fields ignores another vital part of the university: The College of Liberal Arts. This is because one-third of all student credit hours at Oregon State University are taught in the College of Liberal Arts.

If you came to college for just a technical education, your knowledge will probably be outdated in a few years unless you find a way to educate yourself in later years. The College of Liberal Arts helps with that self-education.

The College of Liberal Arts is the humanities, the arts, and the social sciences. Thus, it's about the culture in which we live.

The humanities include fields of knowledge and experience having to do with the production of people as feeling, thinking communicators- English, foreign languages and literatures, journalism, history, philosophy, religious studies and speech communication.

The social sciences include those fields of knowledge pertaining to human institutions, customs and behavior, anthropology, economics, geography, political science, psychology and sociology.

The arts help establish the basis for lifelong creative expressiveness in various art forms including music, the theatre and art.

Two Interdisciplinary Programs: American studies and liberal studies and five certificate programs: human services, humanities development, Latin American affairs, women studies and Russian studies complete the areas of study that are at the heart of the college.

The College of Liberal Arts also prides itself in the fact that the majority of their classes, even beginning level courses, are taught by full-fledged faculty members, available for consultation and committed to undergraduate education. A unique experience in such a large university. Upper division classes, those you take the last two years are usually quite small also, again offering the student individual attention from senior faculty.

Obviously, the College of Liberal Arts means looking at the basis for knowledge as opposed to application of knowledge.

COURTESY-COLLEGE OF OCEANOGRAPHY

OCEANOGRAPHY

During the past 20 years, the College of Oceanography at Oregon State University has become a leader in Oceanographic research and study.

Research is carried out in all the areas of the world. Most of the research is done in the North Pacific. OSU research vessels and vessels from other cooperating universities and laboratories carry faculty and students to remote parts of the world to participate in research cruises.

The College of Oceanography offers graduate programs leading to the MA, MS, or PhD degrees. Students may work toward any of these degrees by majoring in biological, chemical, geological, or physical oceanography or geophysics in the undergraduate level.

The Oregon State University College of Pharmacy is one of the smallest but one of the most active groups on campus. Academically, its objective is to contribute to the improvement of public health and welfare through dissemination, expansion, and application of biomedical knowledge. In doing so, the College provides an instructional program assuring academic and technical proficiency in the basic sciences and their pharmaceutical application. The College of Pharmacy utilizes practicing pharmacists, physicians, and other health care personnel from around the state as lecturers in the undergraduate and graduate teaching program.

Formal pharmacy education is divided into two parts, two years of prepharmacy and three years of professional pharmacy. A portion of the fifth year is completed by serving an externship in selected clinical and community pharmacy settings. After successful completion of the course requirements, a graduate is licensed by examination by the State Board of Pharmacy and may reciprocate to 45 other states.

Pharmacy provides excellent and challenging career opportunities. OSU's College of Pharmacy now has a 50 percent female enrollment, and all graduates are actively recruited by hospital, industry, community, and nursing home pharmacies.

PHARMACY

MATT ANDRUS

The College of Science is central to an education at Oregon State University. Every graduate takes some science courses, and more students are enrolled as majors within the College than any other academic unit on campus.

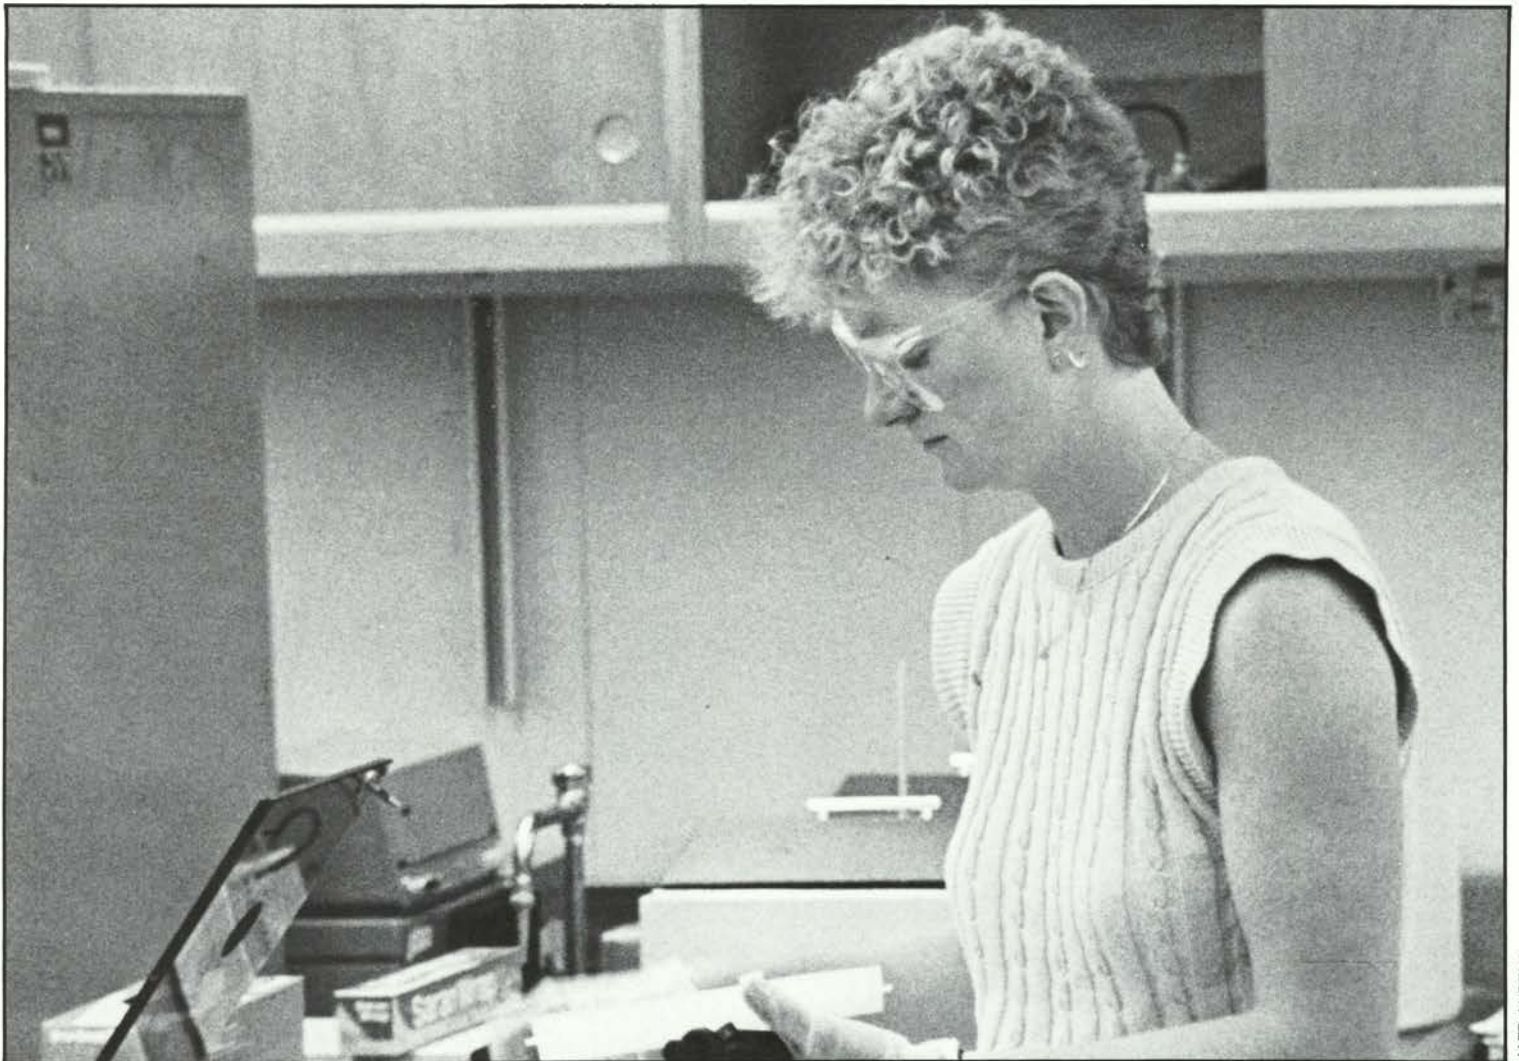

The College of Science is concerned with basic fields of knowledge in the area of natural and mathematical sciences. Courses are offered (1) to its own majors as integral part of their professional studies in Science, (2) to students majoring in programs outside the College of Science for foundation study in their professional school and (3) to liberal arts students to satisfy an essential component in their general education.

Programs in the College of Science are leading to bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degrees at the undergraduate level and to master of arts, master of science, and doctor of philosophy degrees at the graduate level.

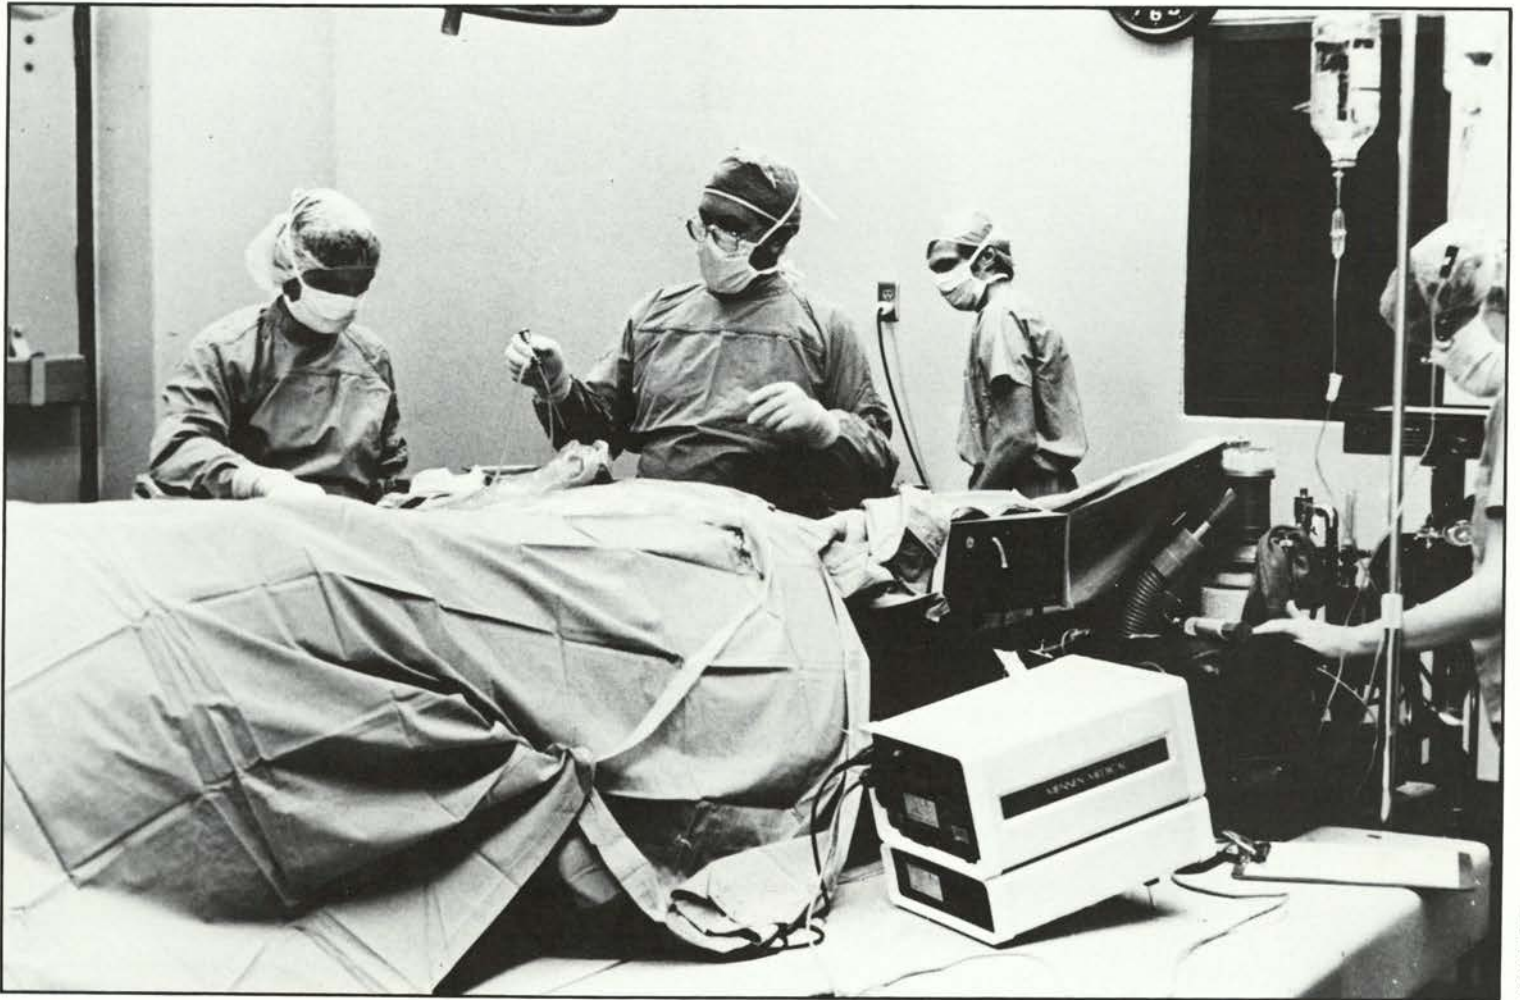

The College is composed of 14 departments grouped into four informal "divisions". The Mathematical Sciences includes the departments of Computer Science, Mathematics and Statistics. Physical Science contains departments of Chemistry, Physics, and Biochemistry and Biophysics. The Biological Sciences include Biochemistry and Biophysics, Botany and Plant Pathology, Entomology, Microbiology, and Zoology. The Earth Sciences include Atmospheric Sciences, Geography, and Geology.

An education in science is an investment in the future and provides an entree into diverse careers. Oregon State University has a vigorous and knowledgeable faculty representing a wide spectrum of scientific activities. They are dedicated to the task of providing a modern education for the next generation of scientists. As practitioners, they are well qualified to bring the results of new science into every level of instruction in the College of Science with excellence as their goal. Oregon State University is a good place to study science.

VETERINARY MEDICINE

Veterinary medicine began at OSU in 1882 as a collection of courses, and later a department was established in the School of Agriculture. In 1975, the Oregon State University College of Veterinary Medicine became one of the 26 accredited veterinary colleges in the United States.

Much of Oregon's economy depends upon farming, ranching, and livestock. If wildlife refuges, zoos, and animal owners are also considered, the importance of veterinary medicine can be seen.

The college provides a service to the needs of Oregon by being a source of information on animal health, a center for research, and a learning laboratory for veterinary studies. Through the extension veterinarian, the college distributes information about its services and facilities to Oregon's practicing veterinarians and livestock producers. In turn, these individuals send questions to the college that generates further research.

Since 1979, the college has enrolled students in the professional education program. After three to four years preparatory undergraduate work, the students apply for admission to the program. During their next four years, the students apply their knowledge of the basic Sciences with hands-on experience under the supervision of the school's clinical instructors.

After graduation, the majority of the veterinarians work in private practice, while others work in industry, government, or education.

The University Exploratory Studies Program (UESP) was created Fall of 1972. Dr. Morris LeMay designed the non-degree granting program for undergraduates who are undecided about their major field of study. At present, there are approximately 500 students in the program.

With the dedication of aiding students in an academic environment, the Student Counseling Center administers and coordinates UESP. They provide counseling on an individual basis and give career inventories to help students explore the wide range of vocational opportunities.

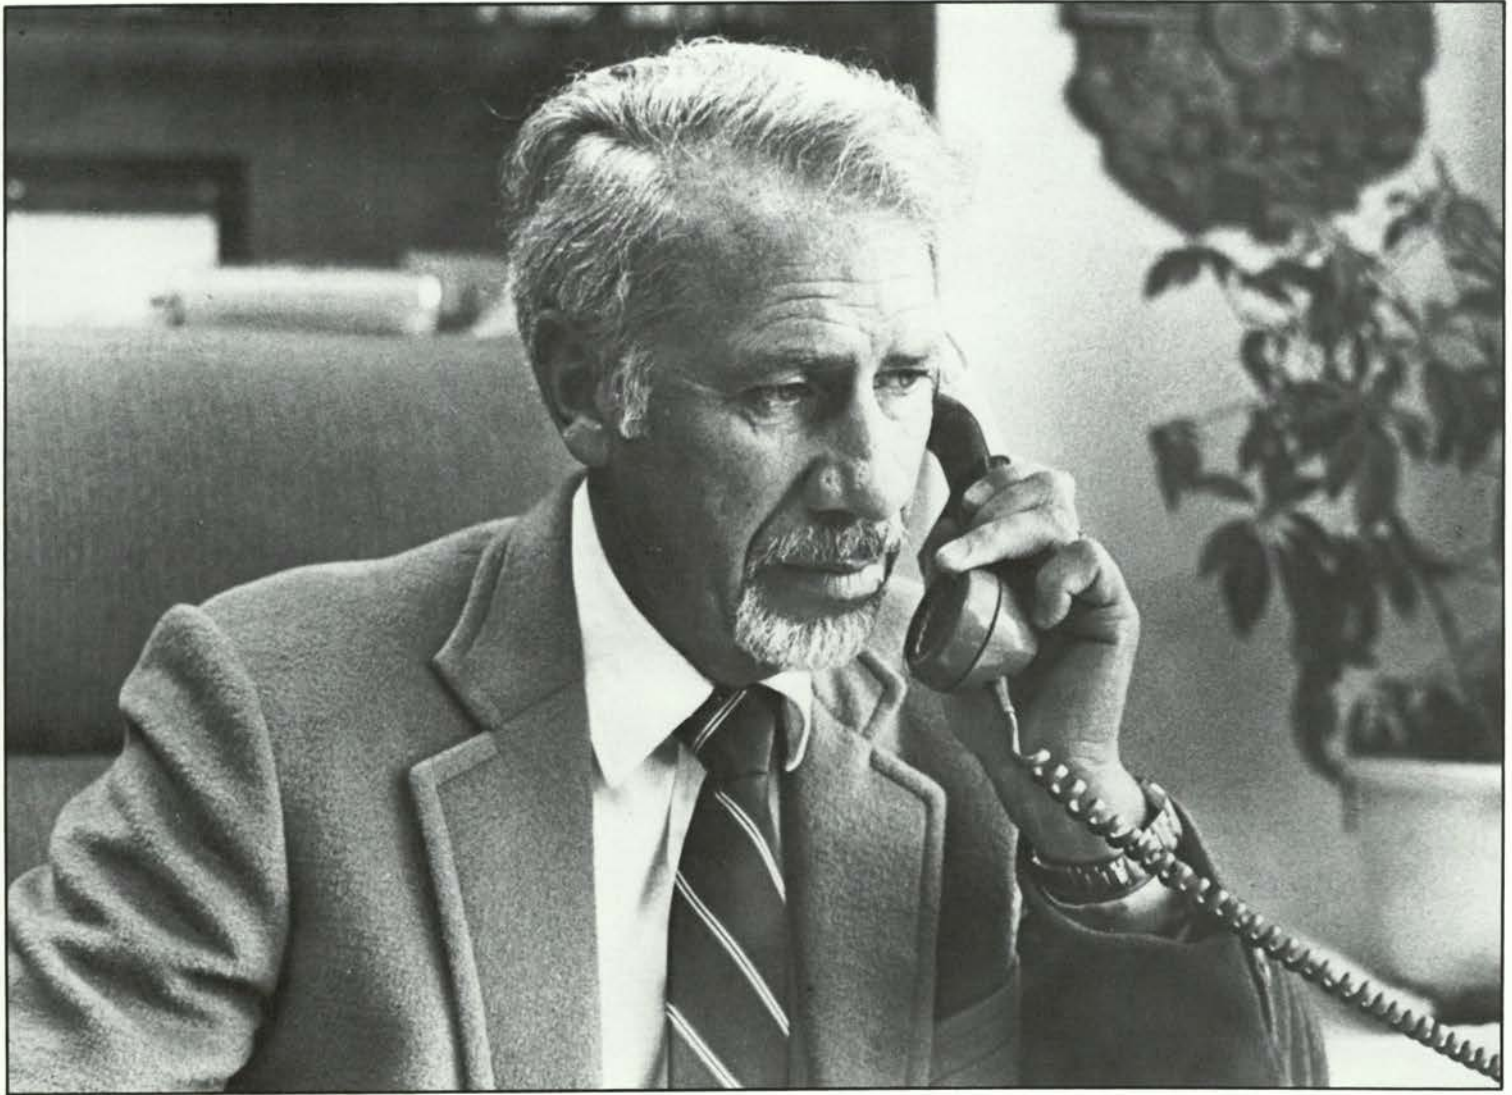

Students enrolled in UESP are generally advised to begin fulfilling the general university requirements. The student's interests help evaluate possible majors and they are encouraged to further explore that field of study by taking introductory courses.

On the average, the University Exploratory Studies Program has achieved a high reputation of satisfied students. The program has indeed been a success for many by exploring several areas of study and counseling to help the undecided student choose a suitable major and begin planning his or her future career.

RESEARCH

Dr. George H. Keller, Dean of Research, coordinates efforts of the various research units of the University. The Research Office encourages and assists faculty members in the development of research programs and in handling grant and contract applications; advises the University president regarding general progress of the institutions research programs; works to ensure maximum opportunity for the integration of graduate instruction and research; and maintains a technology transfer service for research staff who identify new devices and/or processes useful to the public.

Oregon State University research faculty attracts over sixty million dollars annually from outside sources to support research projects in disciplines across the campus. Research is conducted in eleven colleges and twelve centers or institutes. There are major areas of research in Oceanography, Gene Research and Biotechnology, Advanced Materials Science, Engineering, Forestry, Agriculture, Marine Resources, Pharmacy, Environmental Health, and Veterinary Medicine.

OSU is both a Land Grant and Sea Grant University, so the research activity and its impact extends throughout the state and beyond.

The ASOSU Experimental College is a free university service offering low cost, non-credit courses to OSU students and the Corvallis community. Over 150 courses ranging from aerobics to microcomputing to yoga are taught each term by volunteer instructors. OSU students who teach also have the possibility of obtaining reading and conference credit by making arrangements with their departments. Experimental College is run by students with some paid positions and many volunteer ones. It offers an easy-going, yet efficient atmosphere and anyone who comes in contact with Experimental College makes new friends.

The Cooperative Education Internship program, also called the co-op program, has benefited many students at Oregon State by assisting them in obtaining job experience related to their studies and to put their knowledge to use while still in school. AT OSU, over 800 students and 450 employers participate each year.

When co-op education first became a part of OSU, the individual departments helped students obtain job experience. Now, the Cooperative Education center at the Career Placement Center consults and aids many students and works with the departments, and many businesses, organizations, and agencies to help students obtain professionally-related work experience.

Students involved in the program work on a full-time or part-time basis. Some work experiences are non-paying, while the majority of the students receive pay.

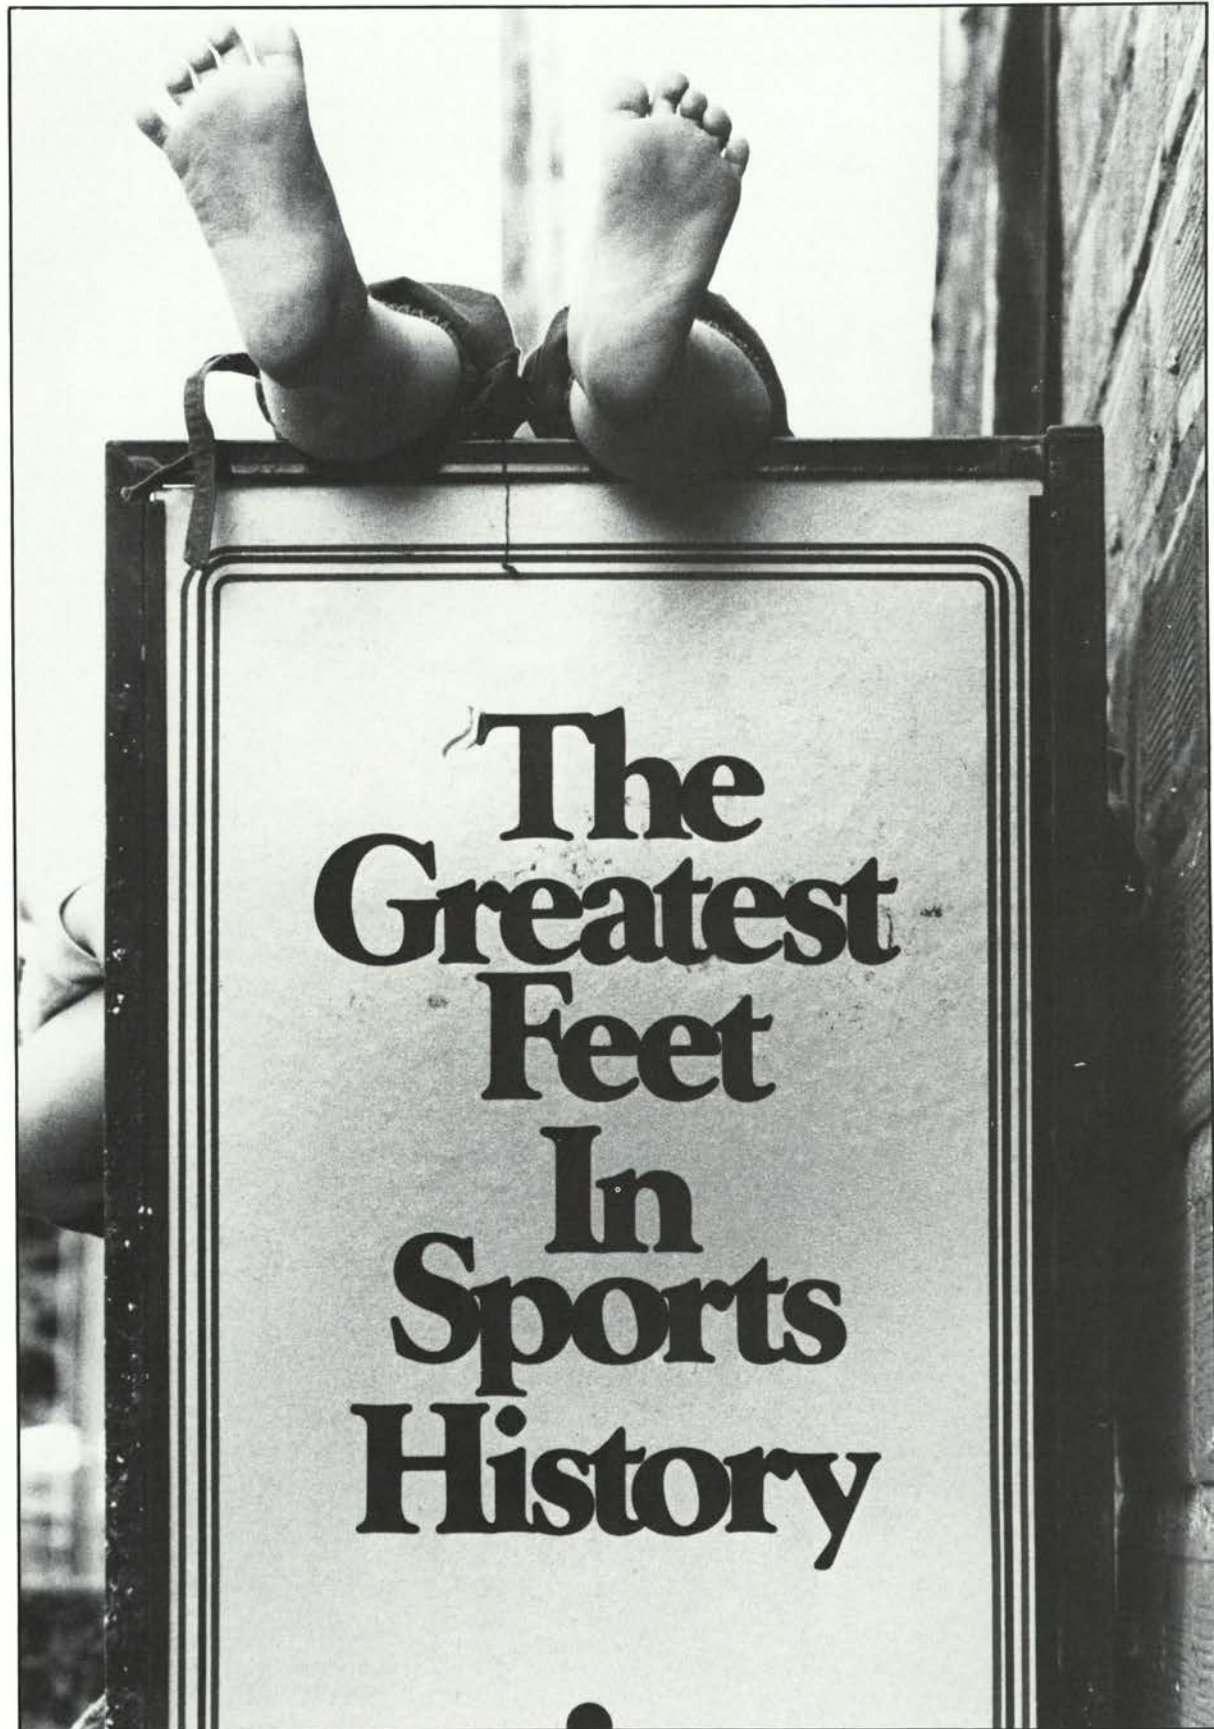

If a student wishes to become involved in the program, he or she can talk to a Cooperative Education counselor at the Career Planning and Placement Center, or an advisor from a specific department.

CAMPUS CAMPAIGN

Fall term will be remembered for the excitement of the 1984 elections. Sharing the spotlight with the presidential candidates, the ballot measures were hotly contested by various groups on campus. Each major political party had their impact on campus; the OSU Democrats held a Dump Reagan rally while the College Republicans sported OSU Fritzbusters t-shirts.

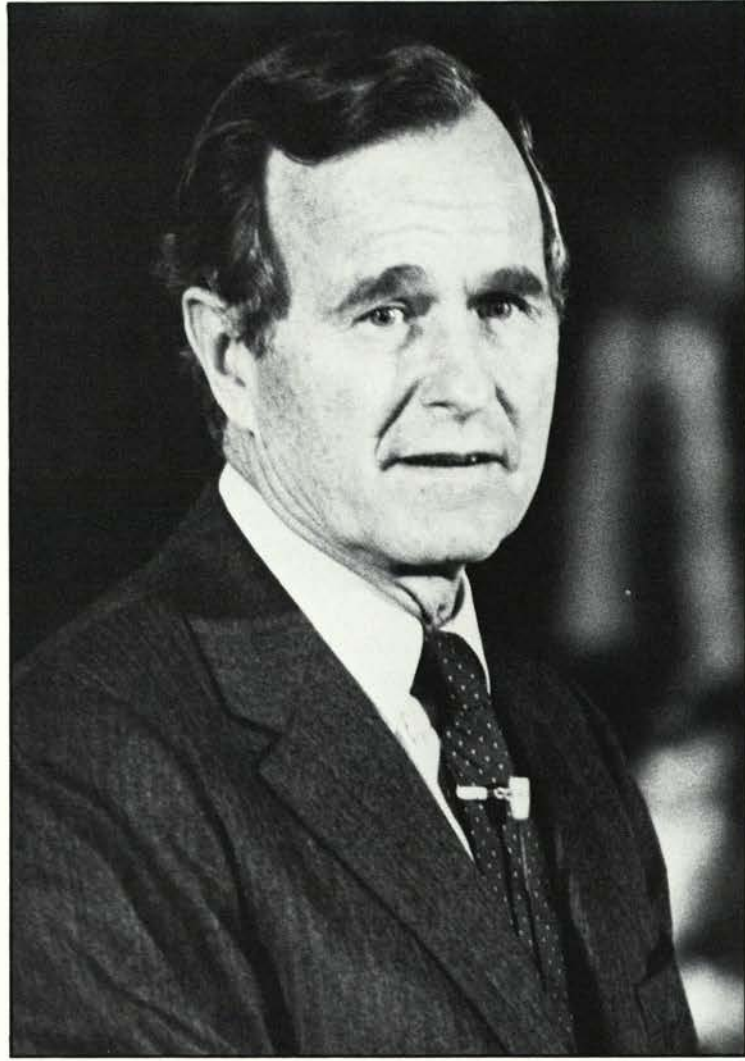

The MU Quad was also the site of assorted political enthusiasts wishing to inform others with various forms of political hand-outs.

October and November are usually the months when the Willamette Valley becomes saturated with rain. This year, instead, we became saturated with political candidates for practically every office. Portland and Eugene received the majority of attention from the presidential and vice-presidential candidates, but Corvallis was not ignored. Laura Zacarro, daughter of democratic vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, spoke about the issues and her mother while on a short stop in Corvallis. Several local, state, and congressional candidates also stopped at OSU to do some campaigning.

GILL'S NEW FALL LOOK

Drills, sawhorses and measuring tapes proved to be a common sight in the halls of Gill Coliseum this fall. Crews worked diligently on the $1.6 million reconstruction project to finish the work in time for winter sports activities. Included in the remodeling were new concession stands, 500 additional seats, carpeted hallways, and a new trophy case. Also added were fire doors and a new sprinkler system, which enabled the coliseum to pass fire codes it could not have previously passed. The remodeling was done by local contractors, Greenough Construction of Corvallis.

THE DAY BEFORE CHRISTMAS

HOLIDAY CHEER

Twas the day before Christmas and all through the town people were smiling;
happiness was abound.
The sounds of caroles filled the air
as last minute shoppers bought gifts everywhere.
Children delighted
as Santa appeared;
That jolly old man
with the white, fuzzy beard.
All the young couples had mistletoe, too
This gave them, they say,
"something to do!"
And while the spirit of Christmas
brings holiday cheer, we set our goals
for the coming new year.

BREAKIN' AWAY . . .

What did you do over Christmas break? If you were as fortunate as a few, you did more than just get away from OSU—you got out of the country. The Beaver yearbook ran an ad in the Barometer to find out where students went over Christmas break. This is only one of the many pictures submitted. Kelly James, being extraordinarily lucky now goes to school at the College of the Virgin Islands. That's a never-ending vacation! Wherever you were, be it in the sun, snow and let's not forget the poor souls who had to stay in Corvallis with the unending rain, Christmas break was still a time for breakin' away . . .

POPS UP

Approximately 3,000 OSU fathers participated in this year's Dad's Weekend and according to coordinators, all of the events were well attended.

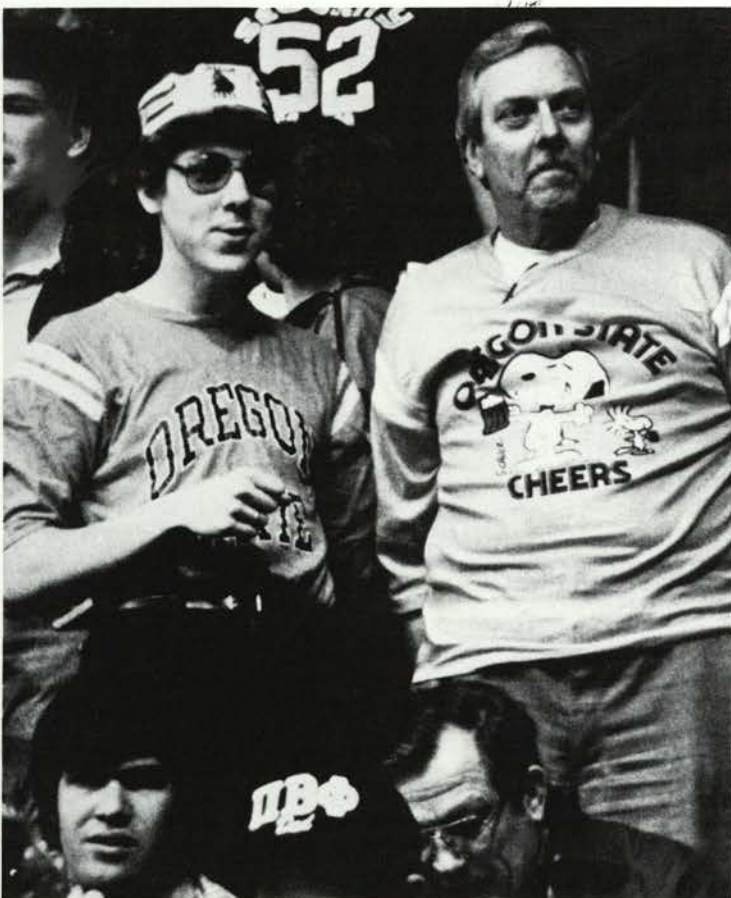

The eventful weekend began with a performance by the Woody Hite Big Band at the LaSelles Stewart Center Feb. 15. The Portland-based band entertained OSU dads and students with 1940's-style jazz and music from the Big Band era. The OSU jazz Ensemble opened the show for the Band and later returned on stage for the grand finale.

The annual Casino Night which took place in the Memorial Union Lounge Feb. 16, was said to be a popular event. Dads and students who attended were able to try their luck at various casino games while betting with imitation money.

An international food fair was held the same evening by the International Student Organization. Highlighting the buffet-style dinner was entertainment by students representing various countries. About 100 students were involved in the food fair event which took about two months to plan.

The Miss OSU Pageant was presented by Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Feb. 16 at the LaSelles Stewart Center. The proceeds from the pageant went to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The weekend was highlighted by the OSU vs. University of Washington basketball game at Gill Coliseum. The Beavers lost to Washington, 60-45, but students and their dads enjoyed the game anyway!

HUEY LEWIS AND THE NEWS

All was quiet in Snell Hall. I was working late on a report which was due the next day. Just then, I heard the roar of the crowd coming from Gill Coliseum. I glanced at the clock and saw that it was 8:00 p.m. Realizing I was missing the hottest group to hit Corvallis in a long time, I started feeling sorry for myself. I decided to call my sister to tell her of my misfortune. I explained to her how stupid I felt about selling my four tickets. Yes- because of me, our brother was enjoying the Huey Lewis concert with three of his high school buddies. The roar of the crowd grew louder and I stretched the phone cord to the window. I leaned out the window and I could hear the crowd chanting, "HUEY, HUEY, HUEY!"

"I hear a helicopter- it must be Huey arriving by 'copter," I screamed.

"Calm down," said the voice on the phone, "You're not going anyway."

"Yes I am," I clammered. "I've got to see Huey!"

"But you sold your tickets, stupid!"

"I'm going anyway!" I stubbornly replied. "I'll get in somehow!"

I slammed the receiver down and ran out the door, my backpack in hand. My heart beat faster and faster as I raced across campus to the coliseum. I was almost to Dixon when I realized I didn't have any tickets. I stopped dead in my tracks. How was I going to get in?

When I reached the coliseum, I tried the nearest door, but it was locked. Then I tested another one, and still no luck. Finally, in desperation, I knocked on the security entrance and was surprised when the door flew open and a guy came strolling out!

"I need some fresh air!" he said. "It's real stuffy in there."

"Yea," I replied and slipped by without another word, entering the crowded hallway.

I headed into the bathroom to catch my breath and then made my way into the auditorium. To my surprise, the arena was pitch black, with a spotlight on the American flag. As the national anthem was being played over the sound system, I scoped out an empty seat by the speakers. Suddenly, Huey emerged and the crowd jumped to its feet, cheering. His presence captivated the audience as the excitement mounted.

After opening with a song from their first LP, Huey took time to address the crowd.

"Good evening!" he called out. "Are you with me so far?"

"YES!" the audience replied enthusiastically.

Huey entranced his admirers with song after song and his boyish charm as the band played on. Four men, playing brass instruments, were synchronized in step to the beat of the music.

The end of the concert was drawing near and after one encore, Huey and the band returned to center stage for one more song.

"Do you love me?" shouted Huey.

"YES!" the audience cheered.

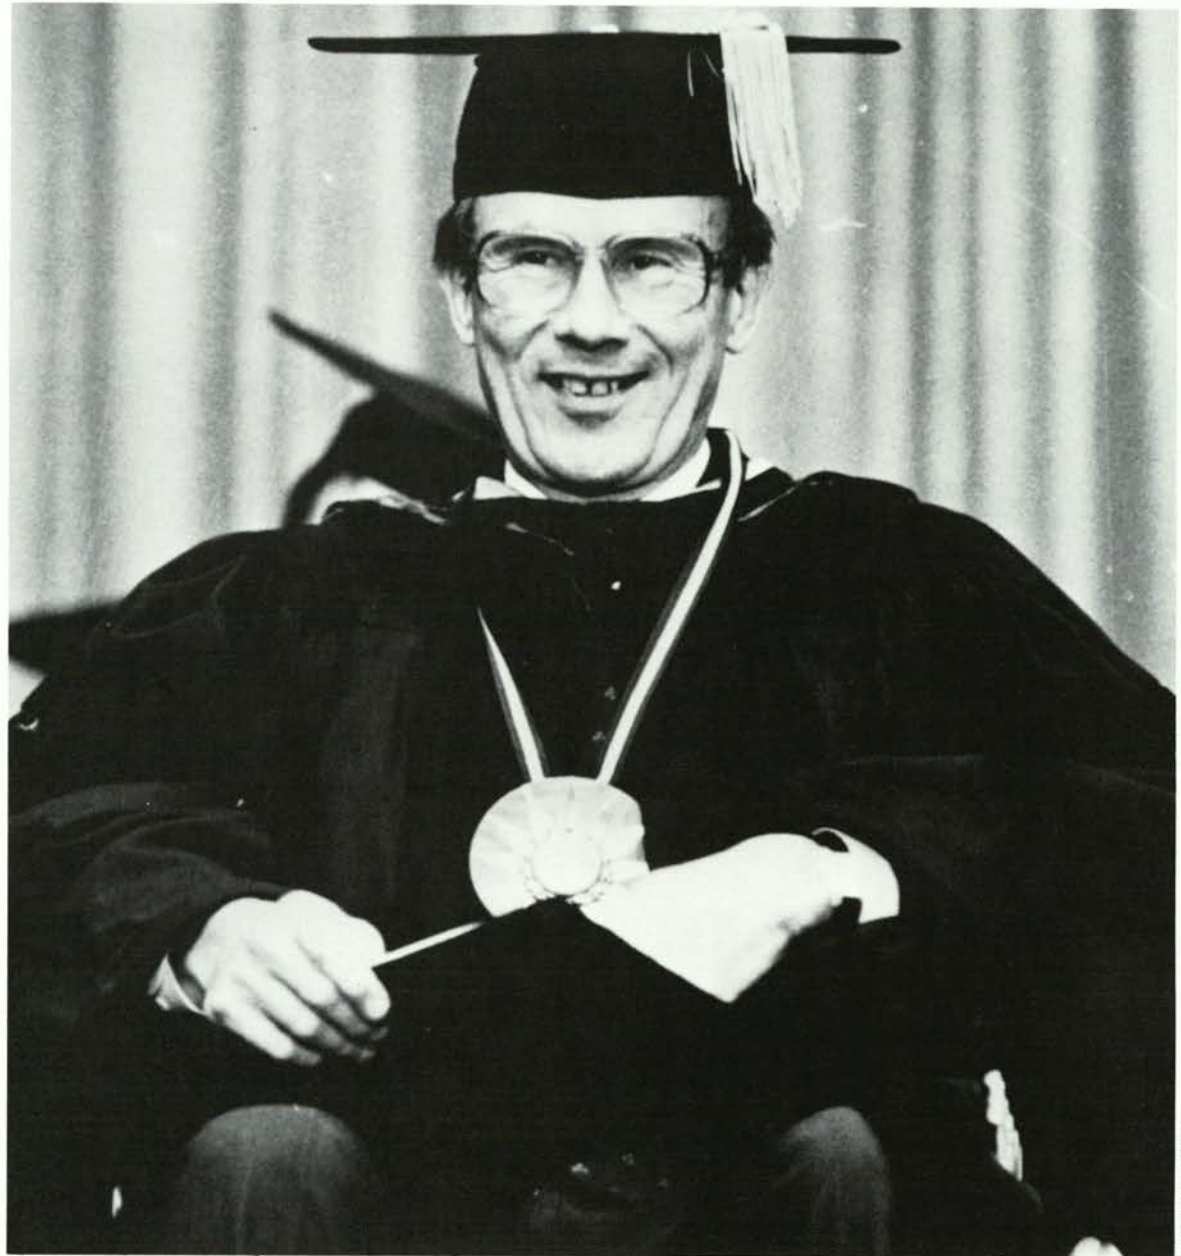

"Don't you have homework to do?" he asked.

"NO!" we all answered together.

Just then, the band began their hit song "I hope you love me like you say you do," and the crowd was captivated one last time.

Would I go 'walkin' on a thin line' again? You bet! To me, Huey is the Heart of Rock - n - Roll. Thanks Huey.

Mary Williams.

NEW PRESIDENT

March 10, 1985 marked a new beginning for OSU with the inauguration of its 14th president, John V. Byrne. The ceremony, held at Gill Coliseum, highlighted a week-long series of events in honor of President Byrne. Many people who attended donned commencement robes with caps and tassels in celebration of the new president. The delegates from 48 sister colleges, Governor Vic Atiyeh, OSU President Emeritus Robert MacVicar, several OSU faculty and alumni, and Byrne all wore gowns at the ceremony.

Oregon State System of Higher Education Chancellor William "Bud" Davis began the ceremony by placing a Badge of Office around John Byrne's neck. The Charge to the President was addressed by OSU's former President Robert MacVicar. To an audience of nearly 500, President Byrne delivered a speech concerning the goals OSU must strive for.

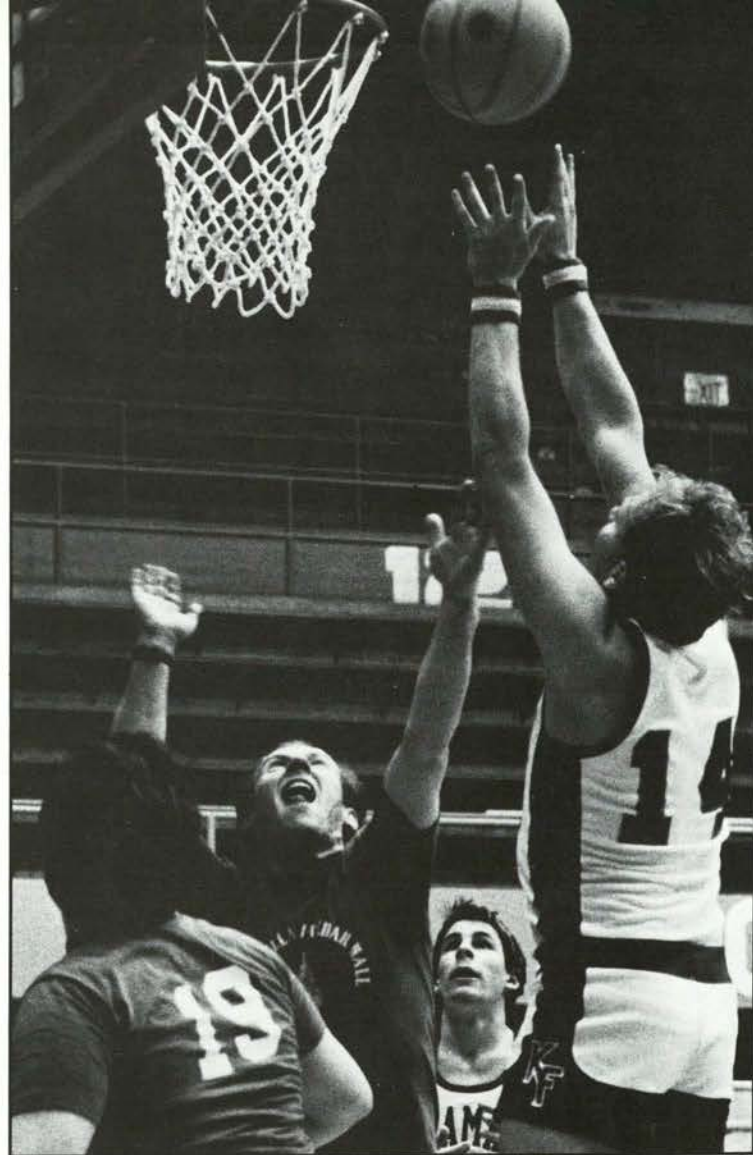

"As a university we must find ways to expose each student to the humanizing thoughts and contribute to the ability to think clearly, wisely, to achieve the goals of humankind," Byrne said. But he feels that the character of OSU is of even greater importance than a liberal, humanizing, approach to education. "All of our achievements will be tarnished," said Byrne, "if we lack integrity or respect for the dignity of the individual or fail to try to do our best."

OREGON SPECIAL OLYMPICS AT OSU

The Oregon Special Olympic Program provides athletic training and competition for mentally handicapped athletes throughout the state. The training programs culminate with a state tournament which brings together athletes from every county in Oregon for a weekend of competition and social activity. Oregon State University is the site of the annual Oregon Special Olympics Basketball Tournament. The 1985 tournament attracted over 700 athletes, making it the largest basketball tournament of any kind in the state of Oregon.

The success of this tournament is largely due to the support provided by the OSU campus community. OSU President John Byrne provides the facilities required for the tournament and encourages the involvement of the campus community. The list of volunteers and supporters for the year's tournament included: Head Football Coach Dave Kragthorpe, who serves as Spirit Coach for Oregon Special Olympics; Mr. James Douglass (Director) and the OSU Pep Band; the OSU Rally Squad; the Army and Navy ROTC units; members of the OSU football team; several campus fraternities and sororities, and many students who volunteered as individuals. Through tournaments such as this one, it is hoped that the volunteers and spectators will see the high level of skill that these athletes possess. As such, the abilities of the mentally handicapped population will be recognized, facilitating a greater understanding and acceptance of these athletes in our society.

The recycled racer event, in which students construct down-hill racers for the competition on Jefferson Ave., was the highlight of the E-spreeday activities.

A WEEKEND WITH MOM

This year's Moms' Weekend featured a vast array of events ranging from quilt shows to rock concerts. The top 40 rock band, Toto, performed in concert at Gill coliseum, (see page 116) Friday evening, May 3. Toto's appearance was sponsored by the Memorial Union Program Council Encore Committee. The rock group was not very well received by OSU students and moms. Students expressed their disappointment in the Barometer Fencing section. To the dismay of Encore the concert took a loss.

On a brighter note the annual Renaissance Fair took place in the Memorial Union quad on May 4. As many as 200 artists filled the quad with pottery, sculptures and other handmade goods. The popularity of the fair has increased to the point where it may be expanded to a two-day event.

The Moms' Weekend fashion show (see picture page 114) was held at the Memorial Union Ballroom on Saturday, May 4. The show's theme this year was "A Guided Tour: The International Fashion Influences," and was based on the different fashion influences all around the world. Three shows were presented and each one sold out within three hours.

The 22nd annual Beta Theta Pi Turtle Derby took place the same day at Gill coliseum. Prizes were awarded for the best dressed turtle, fastest turtle, best cheering section and largest contribution. Proceeds from the derby went to the Children's Farm Home in Corvallis.

Baseball games were held each day and softball games were featured on Saturday and Sunday. The highlight of the Moms' Weekend sporting events was the OSU vs. Alumni football game, Saturday at Parker Stadium. It was the first time since 1976 that the OSU Football team played their alumni.

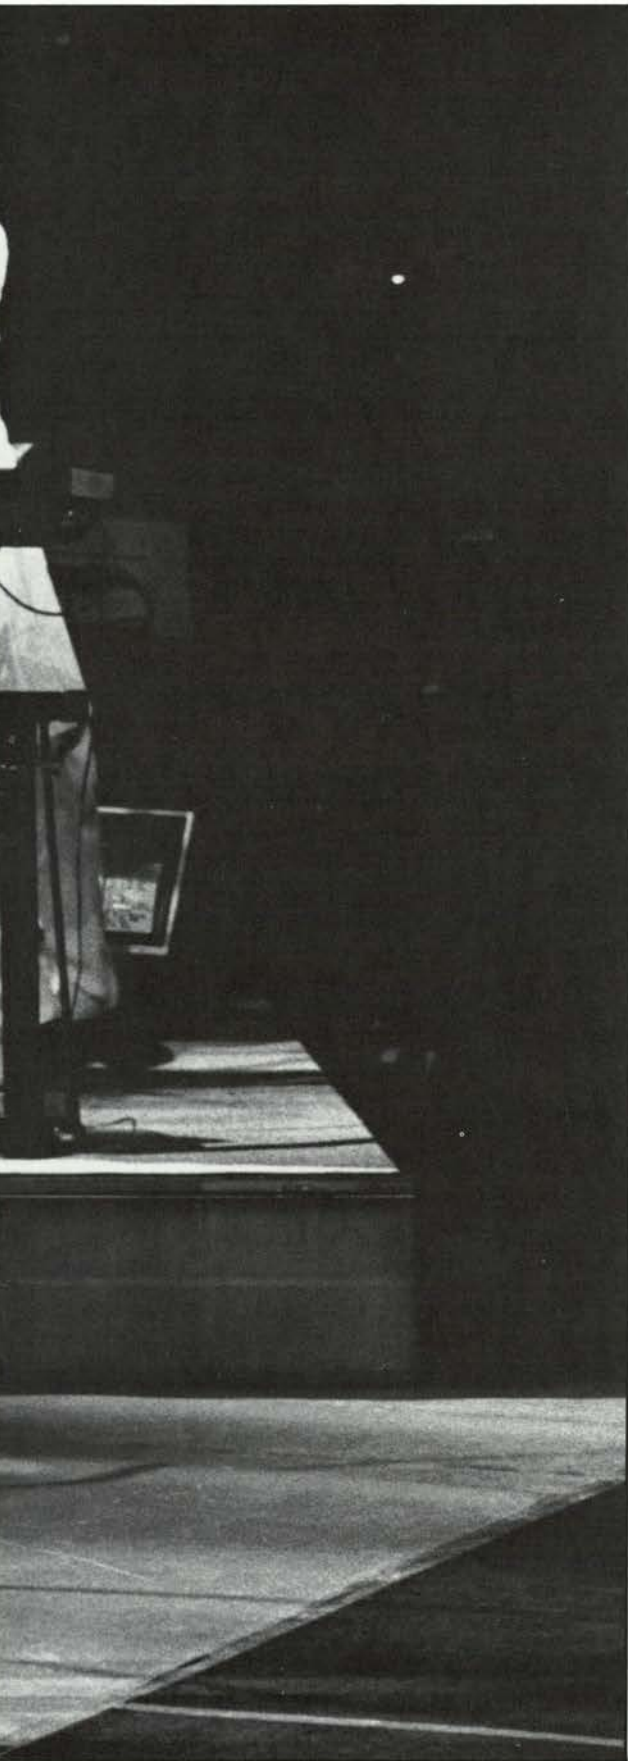

The last big event of the 1985 Moms' Weekend was the Interfraternity Council Sing which was held at Gill coliseum, Saturday evening. This year's IFC Sing involved around 500 people and featured 11 different acts.

Overall, Moms' Weekend 1985 was deemed a huge success and was enjoyed equally by students and moms alike.

OSU GOES INTERNATIONAL

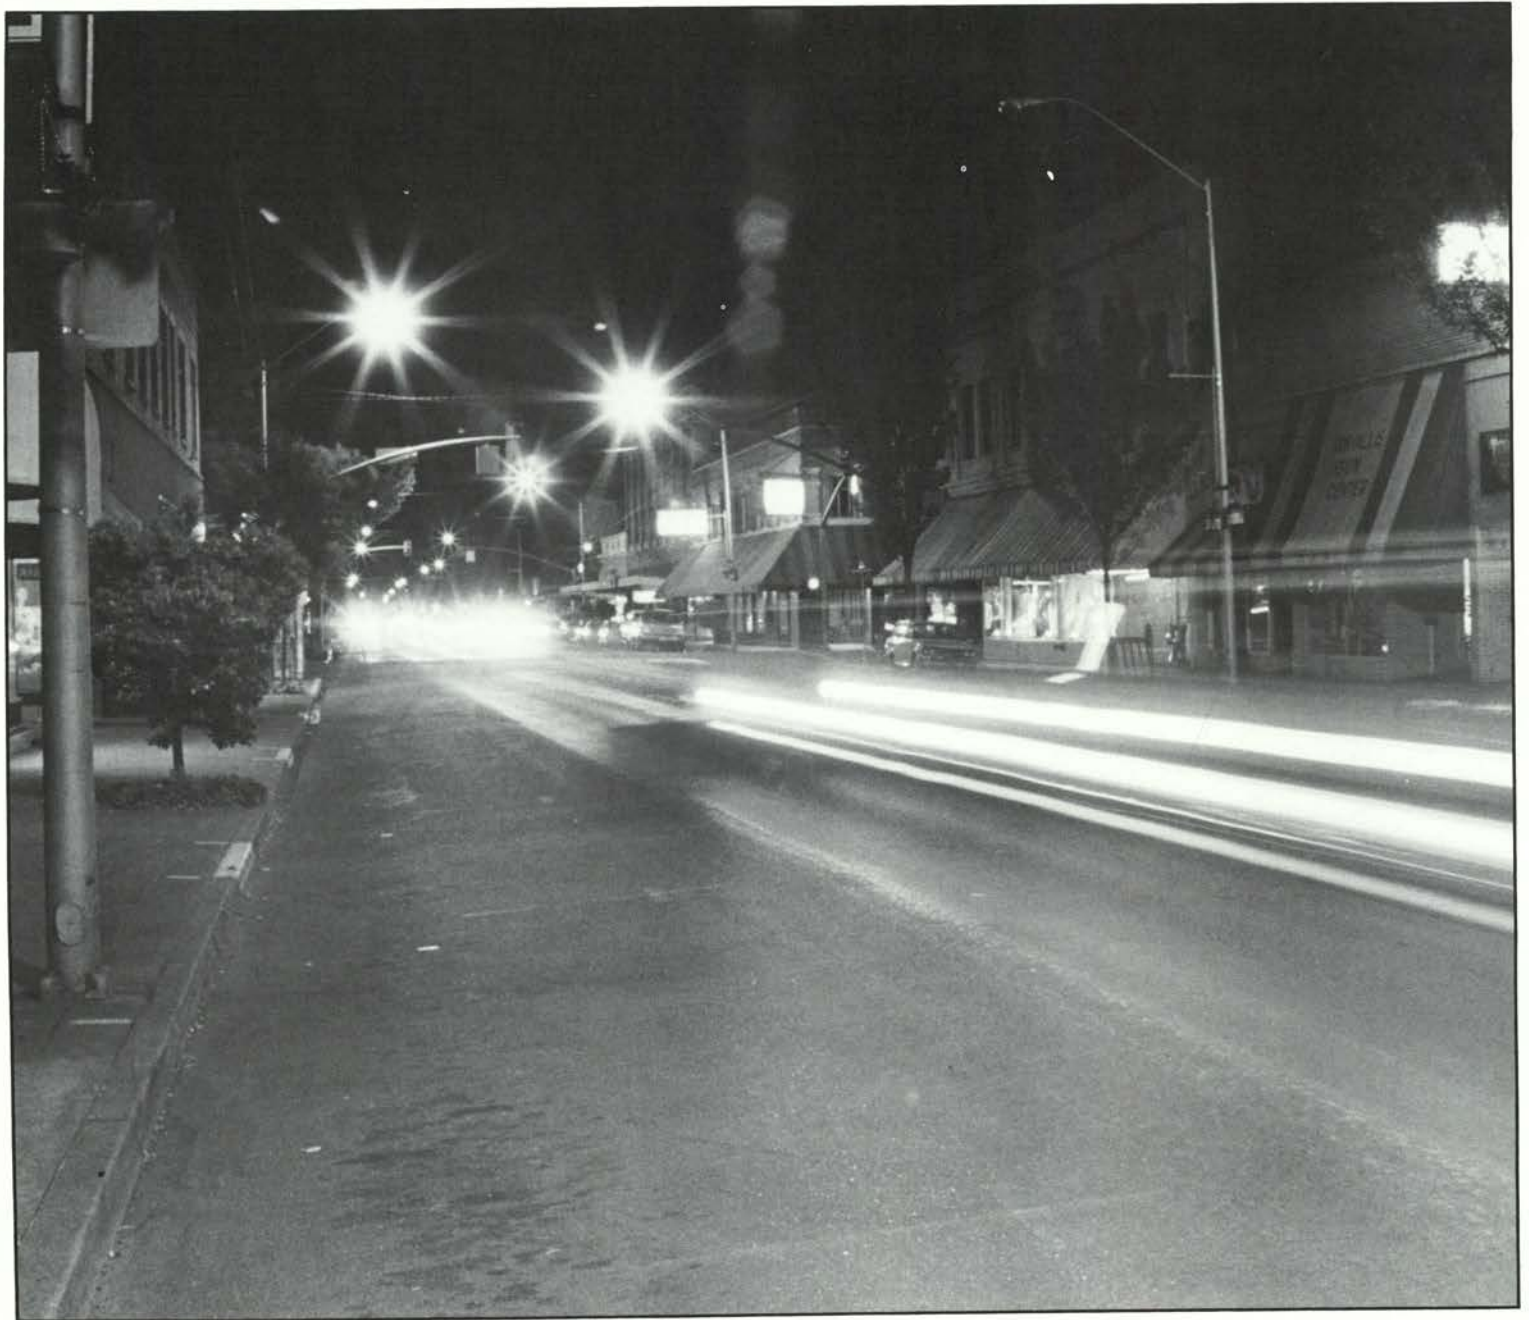

The OSU program to study abroad is organized by the International Education office in the administration building. Through this program, OSU students are given a chance to attend college in another country. Students must apply first for acceptance to the program. If selected, a student is then given an orientation to their chosen program, which usually includes talking with others who have actually studied abroad. The length of a desired program can range from a term to a year. Study abroad programs are also available in the summer for those students who don't want to miss the academic year at OSU through the foreign language department.

Although Unruh was not singled out as one of the finalists, she did receive high marks in the talent portion of the contest where she performed song and dance numbers and appeared before the judges in the latest in swimwear. Jodi plans to pursue a career in television broadcasting.

The water in the Kerr Library fountain was once again turned on, at the request of OSU vice president for administration. A protest was led to get the fountain turned back on for spring.

Senator Mark Hatfield arrived at Oregon State to speak at a luncheon commemorating the purchase of the millionth volume for Kerr Library. The Senator stressed the importance of the library to college students and society as a whole, comparing bookmobiles to M1 tanks. He said books were "necessary for security and strength."

This year, OSU received a visit from Playboy magazine. The magazine's photographers were searching for prospective models to use in its "Women of the Pac-10" pictorial. Prior to the visit, various student organizations petitioned to prohibit the sale of Playboy magazine in the OSU Bookstore.

The Oregon lottery was implemented this year and has been deemed a success. The residents of Oregon can purchase lottery tickets now for one dollar and thus become eligible for cash winnings.

OSU Campus Police and Security replaced three old patrol cars with three fully equipped police Chevrolet Impalas. The new cars were especially built for police use and were purchased at the request of the director of the OSU Motor Pool.

Coca Cola, the world's largest soft drink manufacturer, took a bold step earlier this year to up the stakes in its highly competitive industry. After 99 years of being the market leader, Coke sensed a slight decay in its lion-share of cola profits and so changed its formula. Immediate response on campus was largely negative as the Superette Grocery reported a large number of one time purchases of the new product for novelty sake but little repeat business.

A NEW BEGINNING FOR THE

Years of hard work, studies, and struggles came to a finish, if only momentarily, for 3,540 OSU graduates in the third-largest graduation in OSU's history.

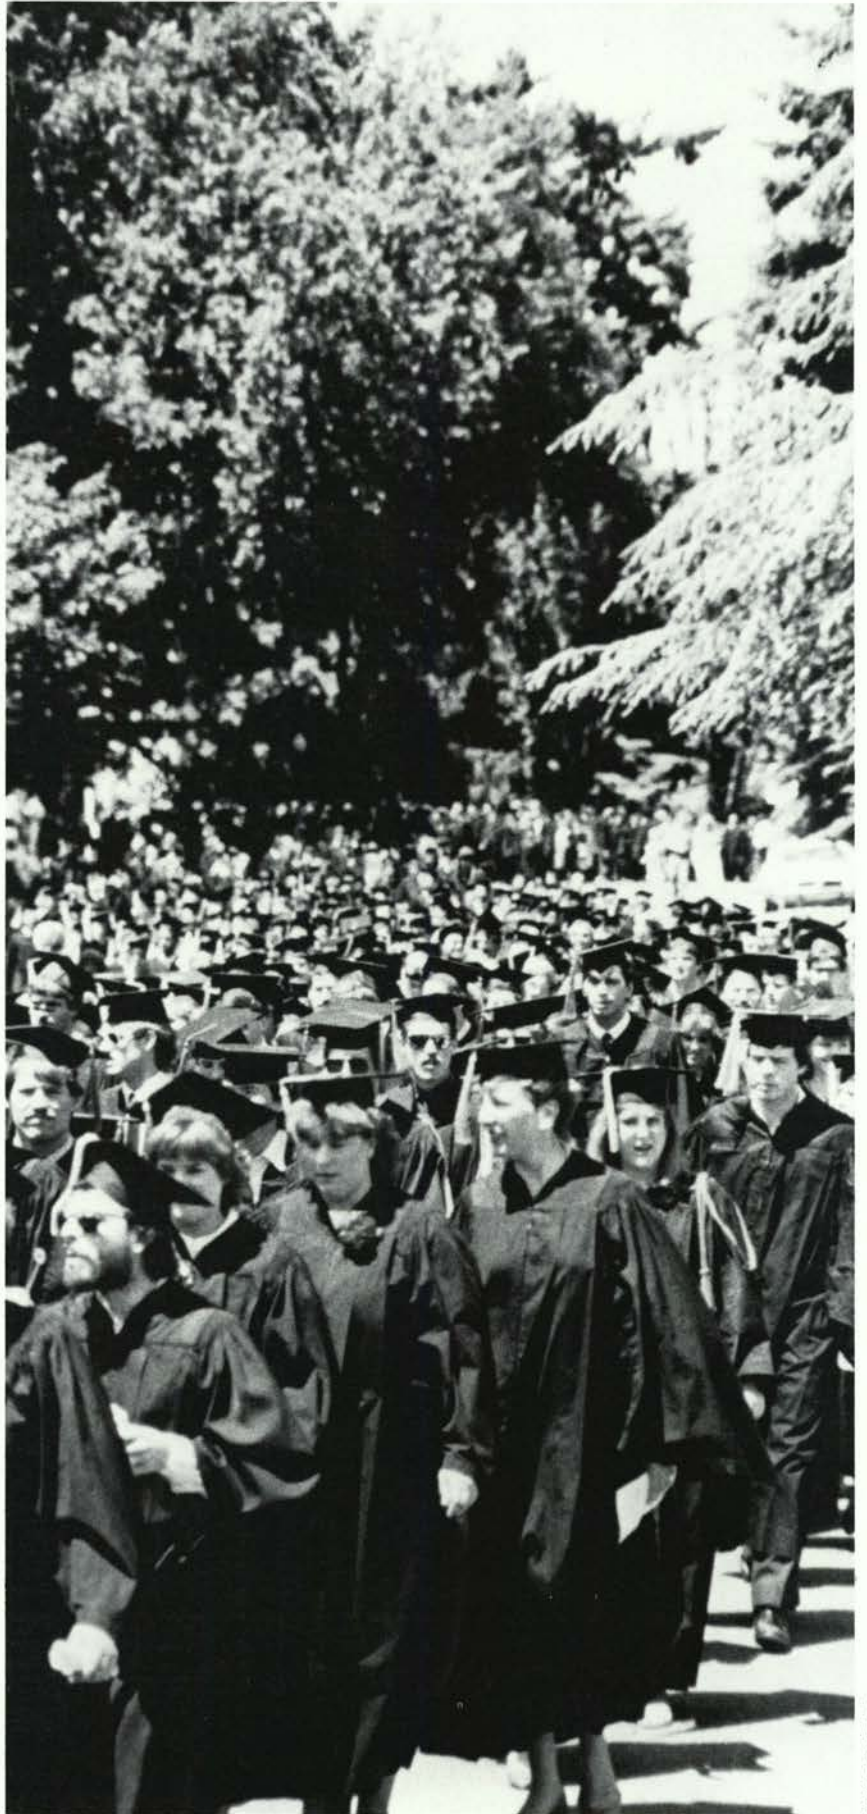

During the June 9 commencement exercise, Oregon State presented 3,679 degrees to people ranging in age from 20 to 63. Of the 2,137 men and 1,403 women in the ceremony, 199 received doctorates, 568 received master's degrees and the rest received bachelor's degrees.

The graduation represented all 36 Oregon counties, 47 states, and 64 countries.

Erick Peterson, senior class president, summed up the year by stating, "we entered Oregon State University as individuals, and hopefully we'll leave as "educated" individuals. We may never see each other again, but we will always share the spirit of O.S.U. and the knowledge we acquired here."

Gary J. Epping

Energetic, ambitious, humorous, these are all words which describe Gary Epping's exceptional personality.

Epping is a senior in Business who seems to live the life of a typical Oregon State student. The difference between Epping and most of us is that he is a quadraplegic. He has been in a wheelchair for several years after a swimming accident which resulted in a spinal cord injury. Despite this, Epping leads quite an active life.

Just this last summer he journeyed to Washington D.C. for an internship with the Senate Republican Conference in the U.S. Senate. "The internship was very valuable and I experienced things I will never forget," Epping said. Some of his various other activities include traveling, dune buggy riding, partying, and watching athletic events.

Epping follows a brother and a sister to OSU. He stated the Business School as being the main reason for coming here, although he admits his love for sports also had a little to do with his collegiate decision.

Epping slyly tells the story of how he got into Beaver basketball games while still in high school. "I forged a marriage certificate and got into the games pretending to be my sister's husband," he said. "The Beav's were #1 and I was willing to do anything to see them play."

His love for sports is still very much apparent. He brags about never missing a home football game in his four years at college, and you can bet whenever the basketball team is in town he'll be there at courtside rooting them on.

A graduate of Sacred Heart High School in Salem, Epping is an active member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity. "I really enjoy living in a fraternity, I have had four great years living in the house and will miss it a lot when I graduate."

After graduating with a BA in International Management and Finance, Epping hopes to get a job which involves traveling. "I would like to get a job with a multinational corporation so I can do a lot of traveling rather than sitting behind a desk," Epping said about his career plans. He also expressed an interest in one day owning his own business if things work out the way he plans.

Epping's enthusiasm and ambition make it quite clear that he will be doing much more than sitting behind a desk after he graduates.

Jeff Obert

Jeff Obert is a senior in Chemical Engineering from Riverside, California. He started college at San Diego State, then transferred to Oregon State.

He chose Oregon State because the Chemical Engineering department was good, he likes trees, small towns, rain and lots of green. He didn't like crowds, freeways and smog.

One of the biggest differences he noticed between the two colleges was the personal attention he got here. The department head knows him personally and "the professors know who you are." He likes it when they know his name. He feels people here take themselves less seriously and are less concerned with materialistic things.

Jeff hopes to be working this summer in either Washington or the Bay area. He would like a job as a process engineer in a chemical plant or refinery.

Extra activities for Jeff include Tau Beta Pi president, member of the Society of Women Engineers, and AIChE, a social group. He is a committee head for a high school outreach program that speaks to high school students about engineering and the need to take math.

His biggest hobby is sky-diving. He is a member of the OSU Sky Divers. Last spring a friend encouraged him to try it. "It was scary, you need quick reactions, but you feel good about yourself," Jeff comments. He had a malfunction on his first jump. His main canopy didn't open completely, so he had to release the main one to activate the reserve.

He enjoys the Sky Diving group which he describes as "mellow, concerned, open and helpful. We work as a team and help each other out." He jumps every weekend in the spring and every three or four weeks in the winter.

Jeff has had many memorable times at OSU. His best time was his first jump. He also recalls one Halloween he sat up in a tree outside the Women's Building making spooky noises. He likes playing soccer and spending time with friends.

"OSU has been a real good time in my life. I've had my most intense learning experiences here. I've also met the best friends of my life. It's a beautiful place and I'm really happy I came here. I feel it has prepared me for the next years very well, both professionally and socially."

Derryl Willis

Derryl Willis never seems to be at a loss for words. "You are your voice and your voice is you," is one of his favorite expressions. He admits that he loves to talk and he talks a lot.

Derryl is a Political Science and French major from Medford, Oregon. He would like to go on to law school and study international law.

He loves languages. Besides French he understands some Spanish, Italian, Farsi and German. Derryl became good friends with a French exchange student during high school. They have kept in contact and he hopes to visit him this summer. His ultimate dream would be to live near Paris. But if he can't be there, he's a northwestern person.

Much of Derryl's time is taken by the OSU choir and working at Dixon. He loves racquetball, hiking, camping, fishing and any outdoor things.

Singing is one of his favorite activities. He sang for President Byrne at his inaugural breakfast, dinner, and ceremony. He has also had some interesting experiences singing at weddings. His big sister at the Alpha Delta Pi house was getting married and he was asked to sing. While he was singing, the bride's train knocked over a candle and almost started a fire. Someone also fainted during a duet, but they couldn't stop singing because the music was canned.

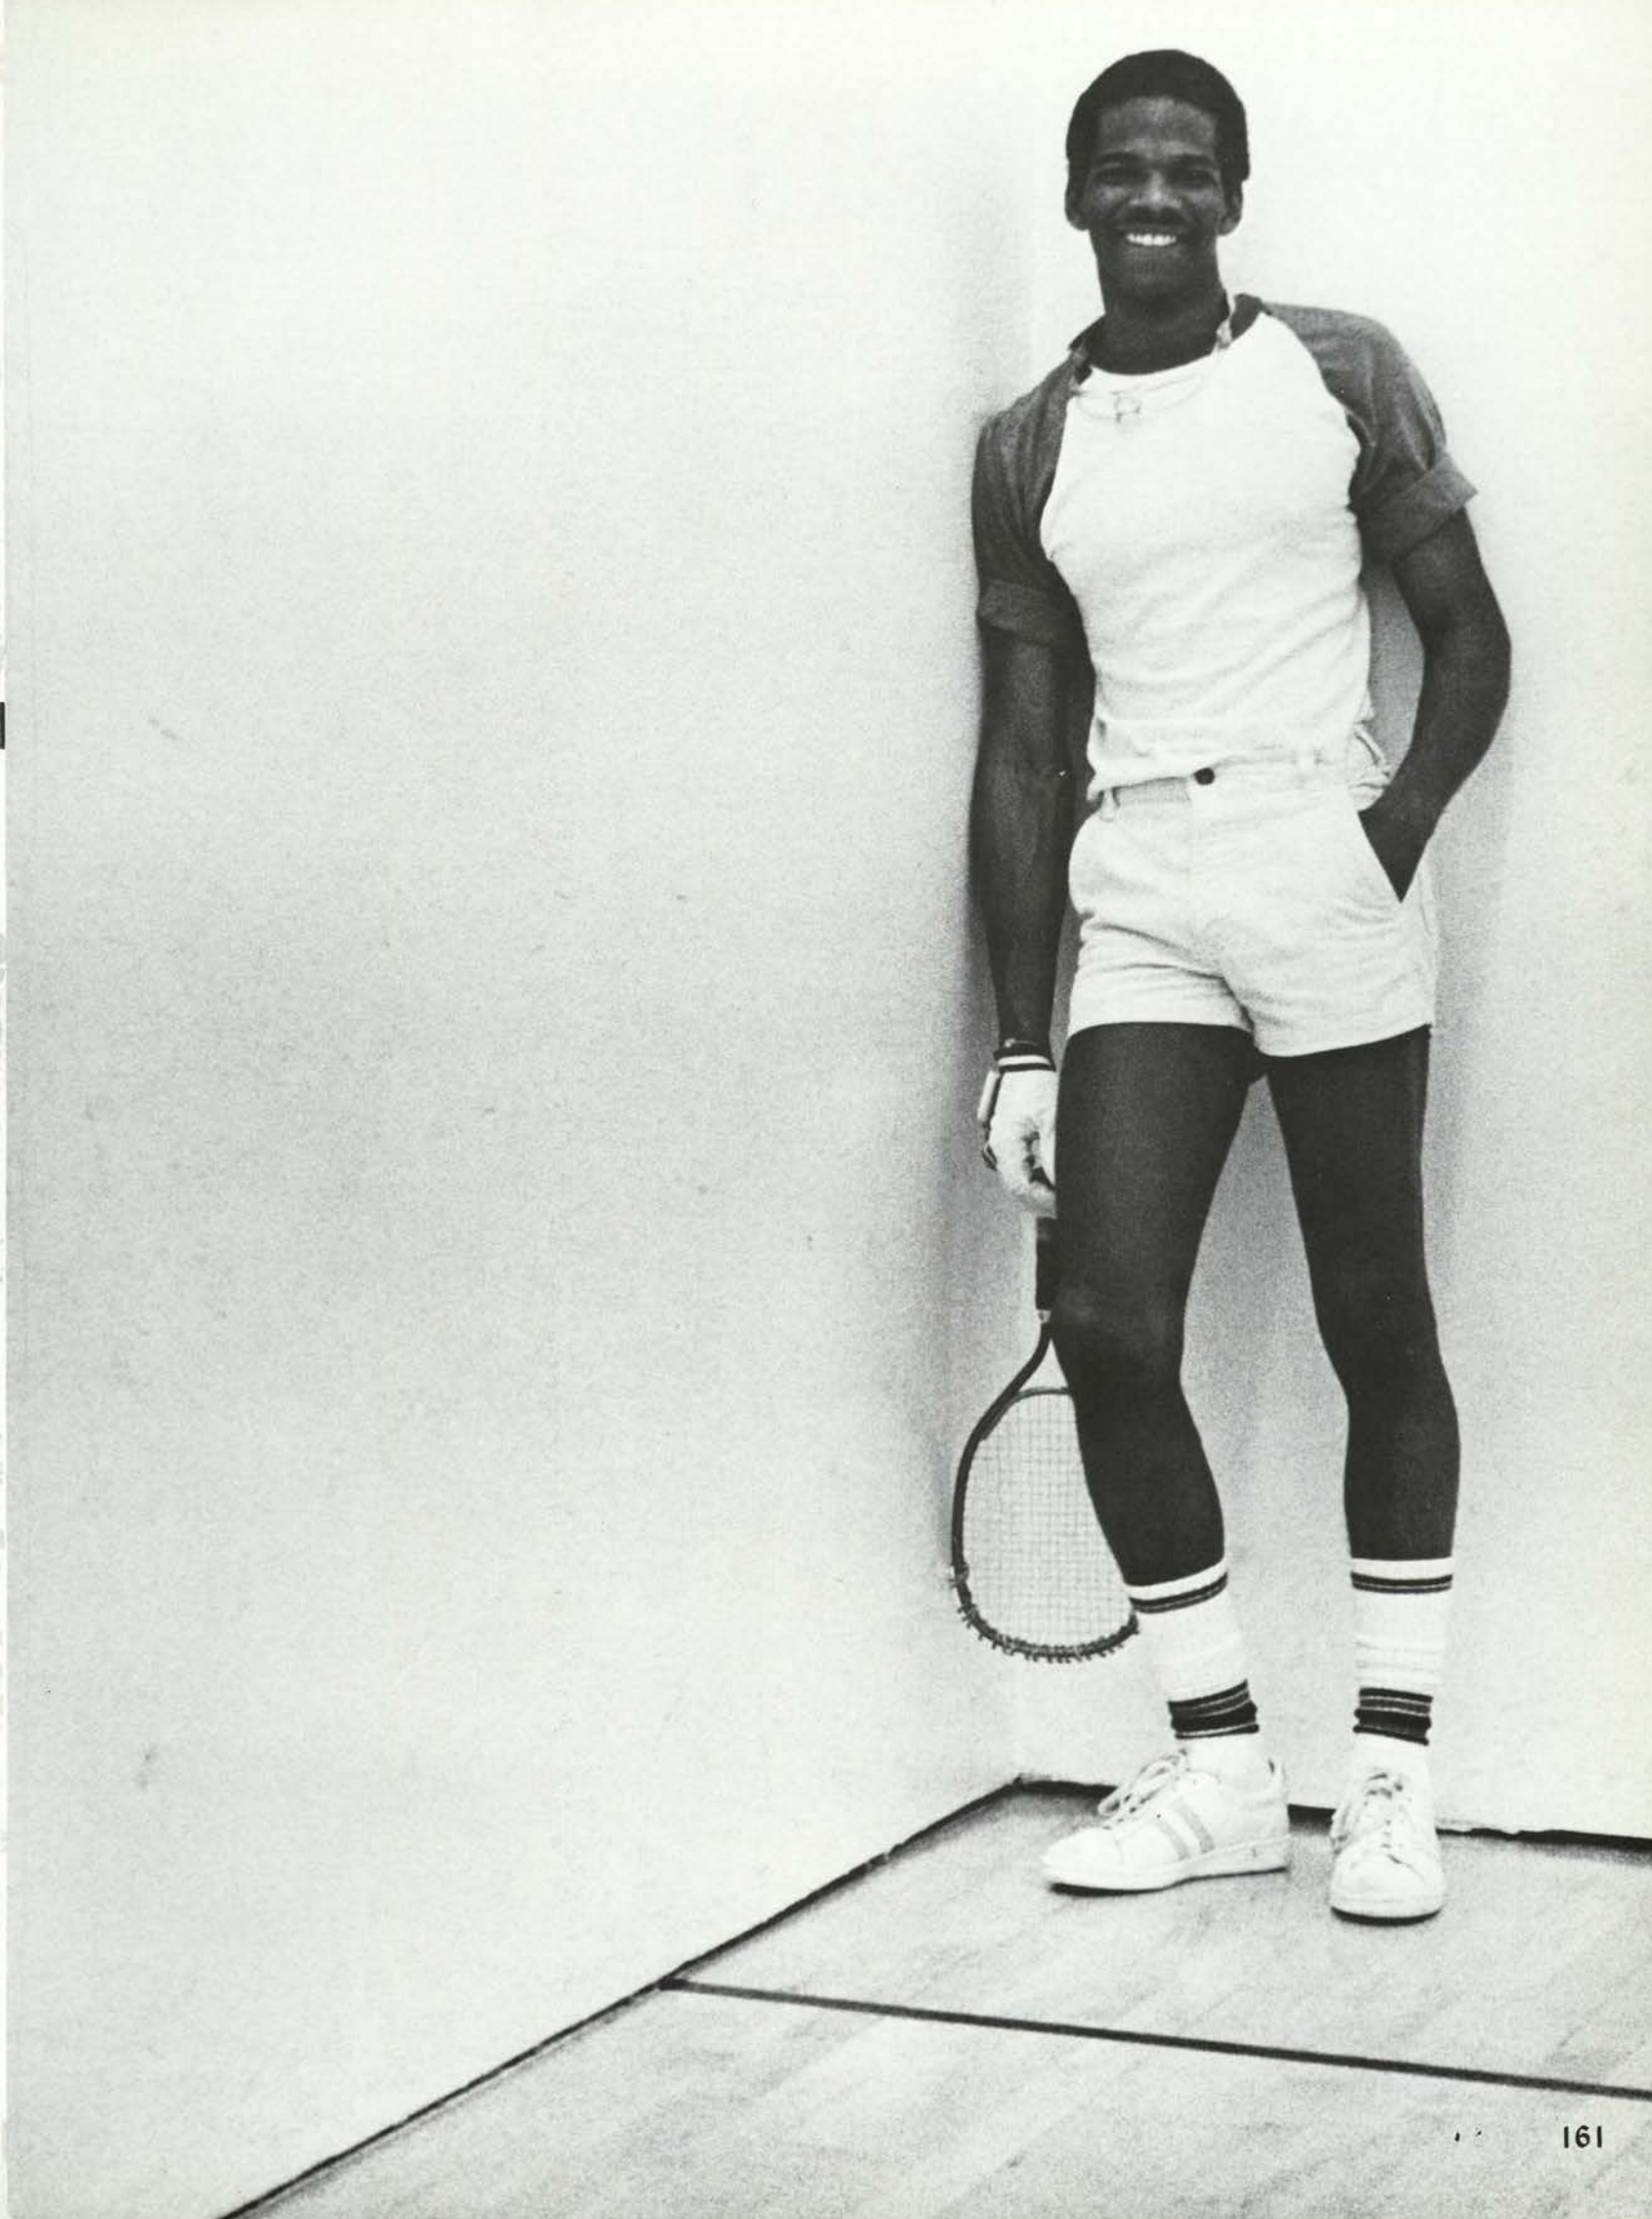

Derryl feels his experiences at OSU have been very rewarding. He has lived in the dorms, in a fraternity, and now he lives alone. He thinks everyone should experience all three. As a member of Pi Kappa Alpha, he comments, "I think it is a great house and they are the greatest bunch of guys."

When Derryl was 15, McDonald's went through Medford looking for kids to be in their newest t.v. commercial. He didn't expect to get a part, but he took his place as #306 in line and waited for his interview. He was asked back to be interviewed in front of the final board. Right before he went, he had to go to the dentist. When he got there his face was numb and he could barely talk! The board decided to put him on anyway.

He hoped to get enough to buy a 10-speed bike and ended up making over $500 a month at first. Now it is shown only once in a while, but they pay him at least $264 each time it is shown.

One of the biggest influences on Derryl's life at OSU has been his voice teacher, Don Jeffers. He is a "phenomenal person who does so much for the community and the students," says Derryl.

Rebecca Clench

Classes are completely different here at OSU compared to what Rebecca Clench is used to. "Our classes are all pass or fail, we don't use letter grades." Rebecca is an exchange student from Robert Gordon's Institute of Technology in Aberdeen, Scotland.

The teaching style is different for her. She's used to taking lots of notes from lectures and studying from them. They don't use the books very much. During her first few weeks of school at OSU, she took lots of notes and put her books on a back shelf. She realized she was missing something and asked someone in her class where they were getting all their information. "By the time I realized I was supposed to be doing so much reading, I was way behind."

According to Rebecca, students here take their education more seriously than they do in Scotland. "It is probably because they have to pay so much. All students in Scotland get their tuition and fees paid by grants from the government."

Rebecca has noticed many differences in the two countries. "I can't say one is better than the other, they're just different," she says. She was surprised at how much people snack here. In Scotland, places to buy food are generally only open at mealtimes. She says she was quick to pick up on the snacking habit, but she hasn't acquired a taste for American chocolate yet.

"Living accommodations are much better here," says Rebecca. "It's almost impossible to find a place to live in Aberdeen. When you do get one, it's not as nice as they have here. It generally doesn't have carpeting, just stone floors."

Terminology has caused some problems. "People will start laughing at things I say and I won't know what is wrong," says Rebecca. "Some words that are ordinary words for me have bad meanings here, and the other way around."

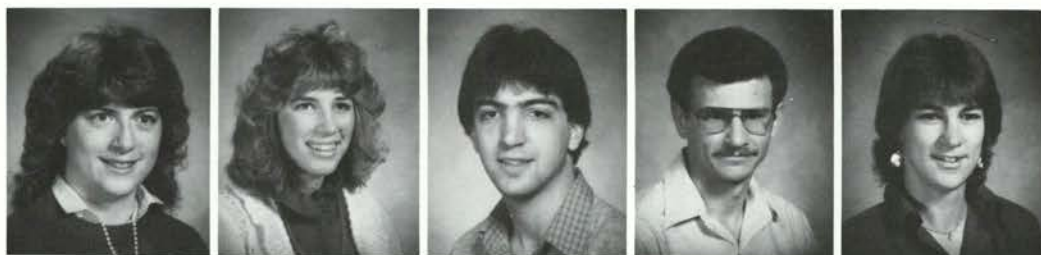

Since Rebecca was involved in the OTC, Officer Training Corps, in Scotland, she decided to participate in Army ROTC while she's here. Belonging to OTC is an extracurricular activity in Scotland. It's more like a club than a class. She joined to "meet people, guys in particular." Her university is spread out, it's not all in one section of town. Since she's in Home Economics, almost everybody who takes classes where she does are girls.

"I like having the university so close together like it is here," she comments, "because it's easier to find out what's going on and you can join in easier." One of her goals while she is here is to "meet as many people as I can."

Rex Cortesi

Many OSU students have seen him juggling for years in the M.U. Ballroom or M.U. Quad, many have wondered what compels him to spend so much time juggling. His name is Rex Cortesi and he is a graduate student in math.

Rex has been juggling for six years. When asked what got him started he said, "Two oranges, I just picked them up one day and decided I wanted to juggle, I used the same two oranges for six months."

Rex says he juggles for the fun of it, but occasionally takes jobs. "I never really go looking for jobs, I just take them as they come along."

A few years ago Rex taught an Experimental College class on juggling, but after running into problems with getting rooms to juggle in, he gave up and started his own club. He said one of the main reasons for starting the club was to obtain the right to reserve rooms to juggle in.

"I never get sick of juggling, part of it's the challenge and I just think it looks good," Rex said about why he enjoys juggling. He must like it in order to juggle more than 10 hours a week.

One of Rex's funniest juggling experiences happened while he was doing a job for an outdoor sale called the Crazy Days Sale. He was being paid to walk around and juggle three balls all day.

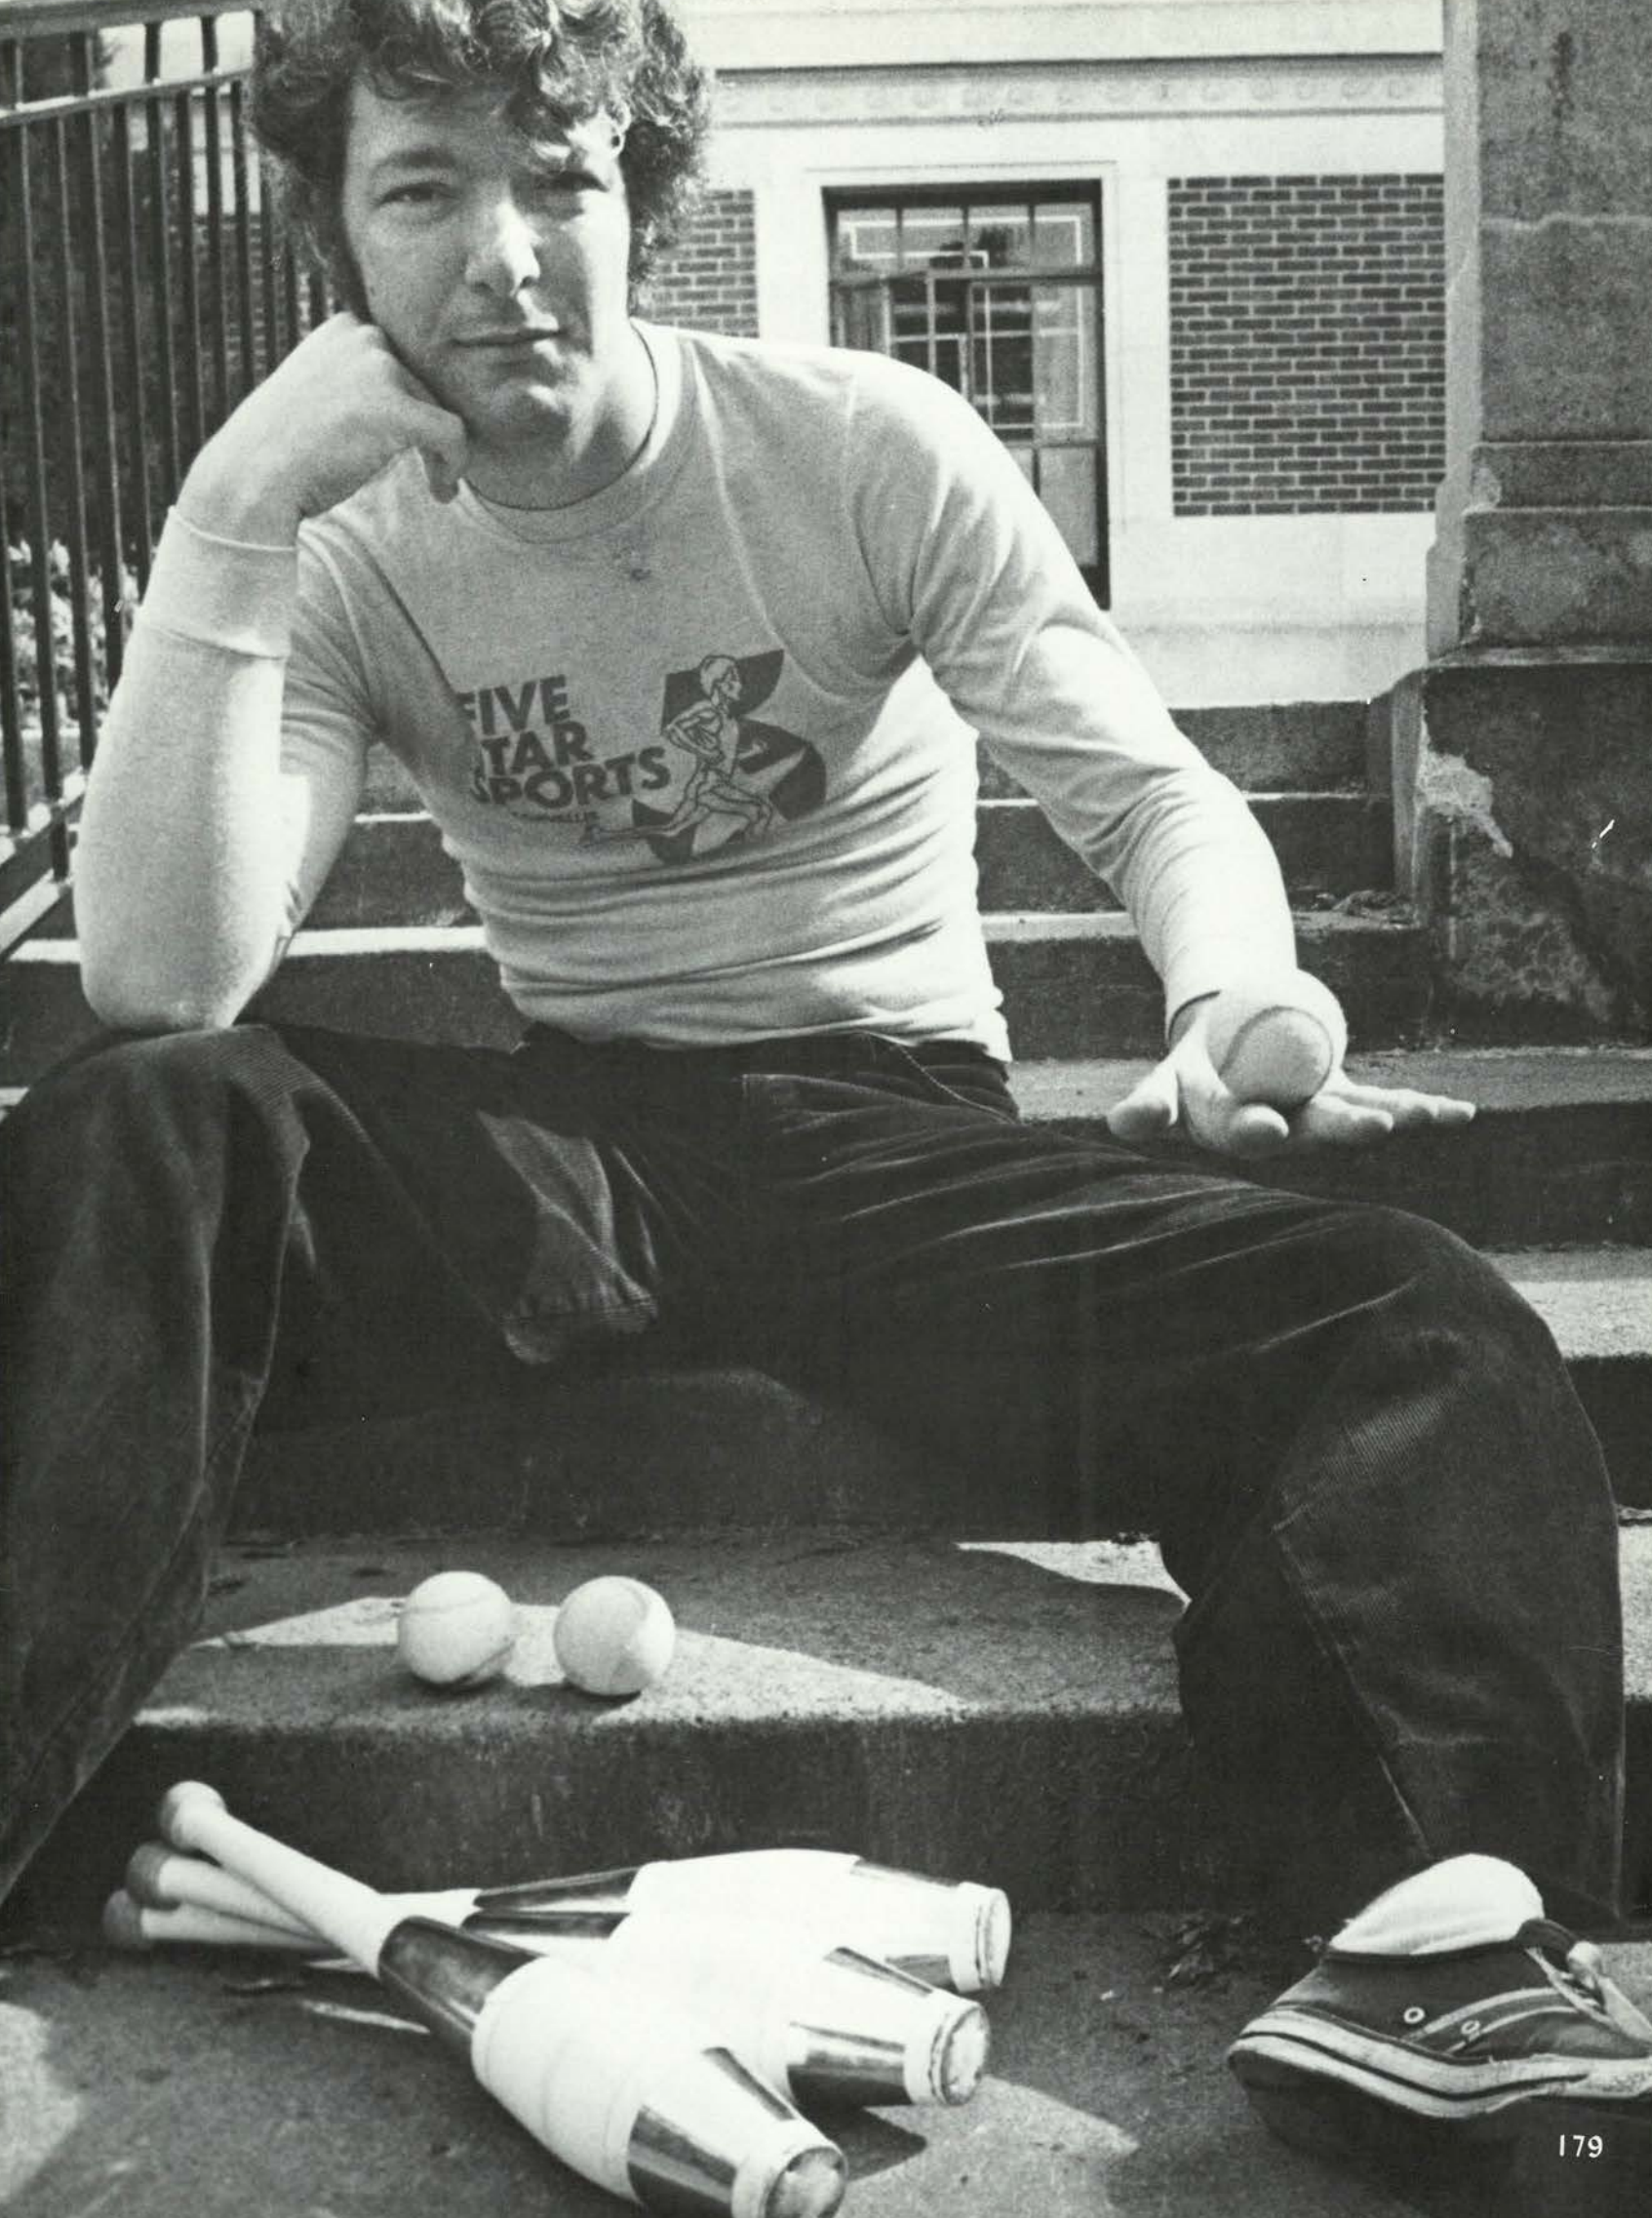

One time he was going down a set of stairs and against his better judgement, kept juggling as he went down. "I didn't want to drop a ball because I knew it would fall into the bushes at the bottom of the stairway and I would never find it," he said.

"Well needless to say I dropped a ball but it didn't exactly go into the bushes," Rex said. The ball took a couple of bounces and fell into a woman's open handbag at the bottom of the stairs. Just as Rex was going to ask the woman for the ball, she picked up her handbag and began to walk away. When asked if he ever got his ball back he said, "Of course, juggling balls are expensive."

After he finishes his graduate studies in a year or so Rex hopes to be involved in teaching and research. If he can do either half as well as he juggles he should be quite a success.

The OSU Alumni Student Council sponsors events to promote the Alumni Association here in Beaver Country. This eight member group and it's advisor, Kevin McCann, want to convey to the students that the university isn't just a place where you take classes and graduate. Oregon State is a part of the undergrads life that will be with him forever. We of the Alumni Student Council want students to realize that being an Alumnus isn't far off. A good Alumni Association makes for a better university. Fun runs, OSU basketball on "Big Screen TV", and bands at Commencement are among the events we organize.

The key word at KBVR-FM is "positive". In our day to day activities as well as in the programming that we broadcast, we here at KBVR believe that any espoused negativity just hits you back in the face like so much spit in the wind. And faith in this doctrine has returned to us the same rewards.

Besides serving as a learning facility for hundreds of OSU students interested in the field of radio, simultaneously we've strengthened our reputation for quality programming and professional attitude.

KBVR-FM is recognized nationally as one of the leading and most progressive college radio stations in the country, almost the antithesis of what some people believe Corvallis is all about.

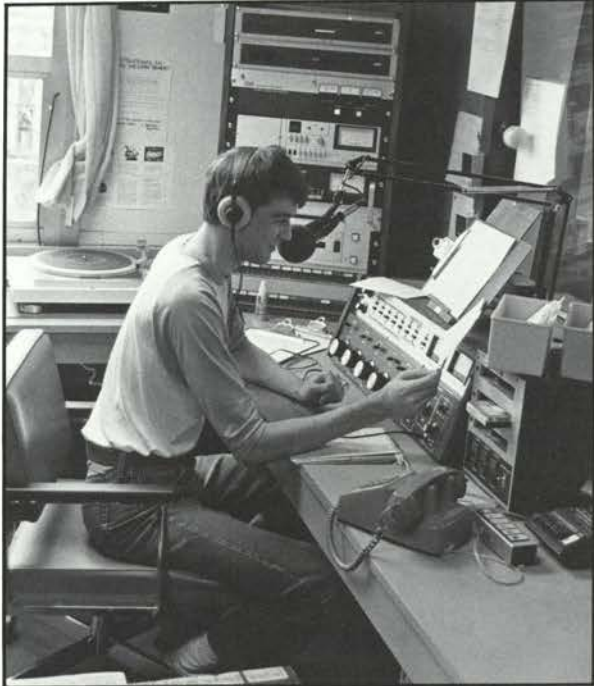

Although the thrust of KBVR-FM's programming is the "Alternative Rock" mode, exemplified by bands like the Violent Femmes, Shriekback, Dead Kennedy's, The Bangles, and Corvallis' own Crazy 8's, there is also Morning Jazz programming, as well as a full-line of specialty programs that run the musical gamut from Classical, Reggae, and Sixties to Funk and Soul, Elemental, and Hardcore Punk.

There is truly a place waiting for everyone who comes to KBVR-FM, and also a smile thrown into the bargain.

"The AGC Student Chapter's primary purpose is to provide services to students majoring in Construction Engineering Management. The chapter is proud to be one of the most active clubs on campus. The chapter provides academic services, social functions and above all else, helps bring the construction industry and CEM students closer together.

There were many memorable experiences for AGC members this year. Highlights of the year included: attendance of 38 student chapter members at the AGC National Convention held in San Francisco; building the fastest and best engineered recycled racer for Espree day and hosting our Annual "Contractor Night" where George Labuan, a retiring CEM professor, was honored for his many contributions to the OSU construction program."

Women in Communications, Inc. is an organization for anyone, male or female, who is interested in communications as a career field. This includes majors such as journalism, speech communications, advertising, marketing and broadcast. WICI hosts a career day for students each year, as well as several programs designed to promote understanding of freedom of the press, speech and information. We are also interested in the progress of women. The OSU Chapter is part of a large professional organization which has chapters across the country, yet we have regional and national officers in our chapter.

In today's increasingly complicated society, more and more demands are being placed upon technically educated people. At the forefront is the engineer. To be a good engineer, we at the American Society of Mechanical Engineers feel you must be able to do three things well: identify the problem, solve the problem, and communicate the solution. College teaches the first two, ASME the last.

PICTURE YOURSELF

The sun is out! Your next midterm isn't until tomorrow morning, and all your friends have a bad case of senioritis. What can you do? Obviously studying is out of the question. At Oregon State, the sun can cast a magical spell, bringing out the wild and sometimes crazy antics of OSU students.

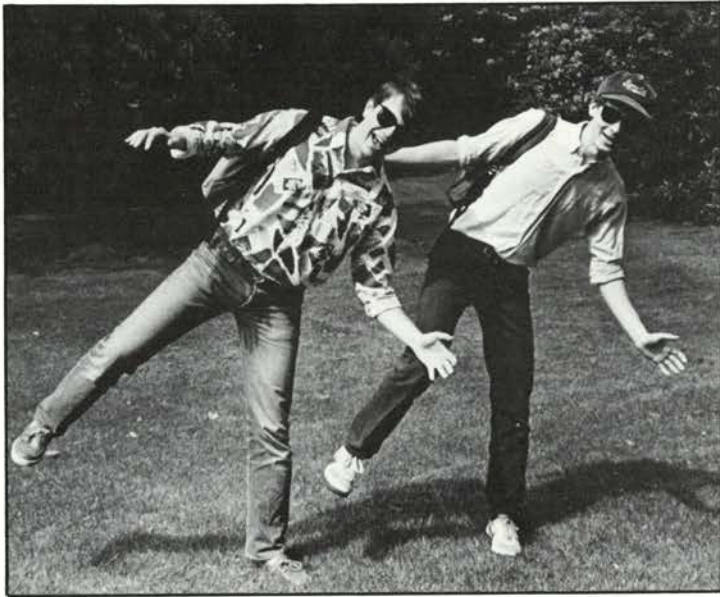

The pictures found on these pages are a testimony of this Phenomena. Our roving yearbook photographers stopped passer-bys and asked them to give us their best smile, their most bizarre look, or any contortion, activity, and/or props that they wanted us to remember them by — as OSU students Picture Themselves.

UNSUNG HEROES

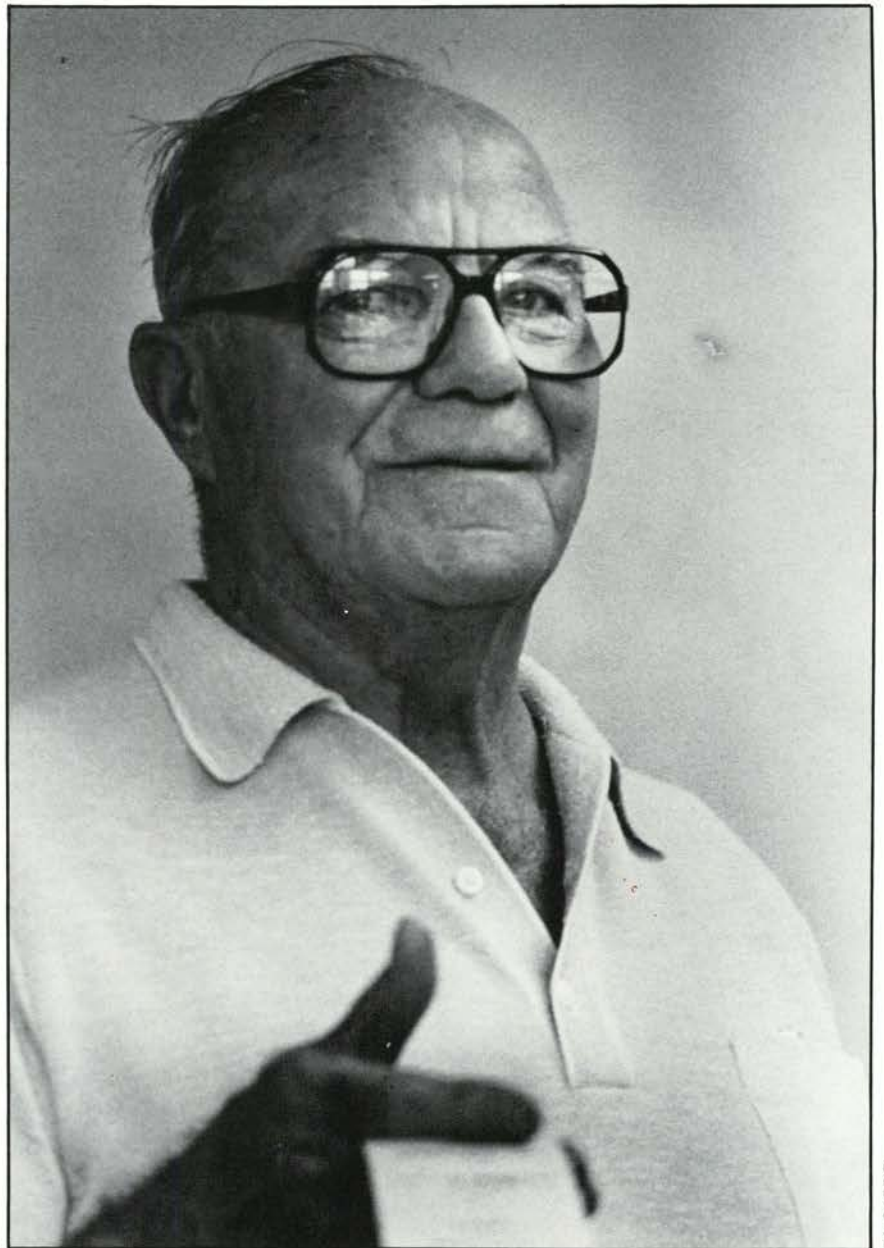

OSU is blessed with many outstanding people that make contributions which often go unnoticed. They are a vital part of the university as they assist students and faculty in their daily activities. These helpful and friendly people help smooth out the sometimes bureaucratic operations here at OSU, and although unsung, their contributions are greatly appreciated. OSU salutes these "Unsung Heroes."

ORLANDO ROPP

Orlando Ropp, a retired salesman from South Carolina and now a current resident of Corvallis, has been working five nights a week for the last six years at the Memorial Union parking lot on the Oregon State campus.

Ropp, better known as the "Parking Lot Man" to most Oregon State students, stands in the confines of his booth during his shift and checks cars in and out of the parking lot. According to him, "The busiest times are when the kids go home and do their thing and then come back to go to the library." "I don't have too many problems during my shift," said Ropp. "Most people are good about paying, but there are those few who speed on by the booth without a second thought."

Ropp, with a chuckle and his usual friendly smile, says he enjoys working with people, especially the students, and has had many good experiences at OSU. Along with his good experiences, Ropp remembered one particularly bad experience. "I was sitting in the booth and one of those big campers pulled up to the driveway. The driver underestimated the room he had and hit the booth. I thought the booth was going to tip right over with me in it, but luckily he only tore off the corner of the booth, and I survived."

GRACE GUTIERREZ

Anyone who has ever entered the Daily Barometer office with a question or a complaint has had the chance to meet the friendly secretary behind the desk, Grace Gutierrez.

Gutierrez is a relative newcomer to Oregon State. By August, she will have worked in the Barometer's office for one full year. But working at the newspaper's front desk is only a part of her busy life. Her family, as well as hobbies such as cross-country skiing, volleyball and knitting, all fill her time.

"I also have one other 'hobby': I really enjoy working here," she said. Then, with a smile, she added, "But don't let anyone know that!"

Gutierrez helps students that come into the office seeking information, or those who have complaints, in addition to maintaining records on all the ad sales. The variety she finds in her job makes coming to work each day fun. "I really enjoy meeting people, whether they are just coming in, or I'm working with them."

The U of O (!) graduate must also put up with the ad sales staff and their practical jokes. One time, two members of the staff attempted to get Gutierrez to bite into a styrafoam cup, under the guise of determining who in the office had the most perfect "bite." The real motive behind their "measurement" was a pitcher of beer to the person who guessed correctly whether she would actually bite it or not.

"I didn't trust them. I wasn't sure what might happen to me," she laughed.

Just another day at the Baro for Grace Gutierrez.

ORVILLE POWELL

Day or night, you can count on them to protect the students and faculty of OSU. Under the command of Orville Powell, Director of Police and Security, is an organized staff of 11 officers committed to maintaining order on campus.

Powell has had 28 years experience in law enforcement as Chief of Police in Sweet Home and Reedsport with the last 5 years spent at OSU. Powell likes Corvallis and finds it challenging building a police department which is efficient and respected. "Our main goal is to provide safety and security to all the students and faculty at OSU. "We will protect and serve the university in any way that falls within our realm," says Powell.

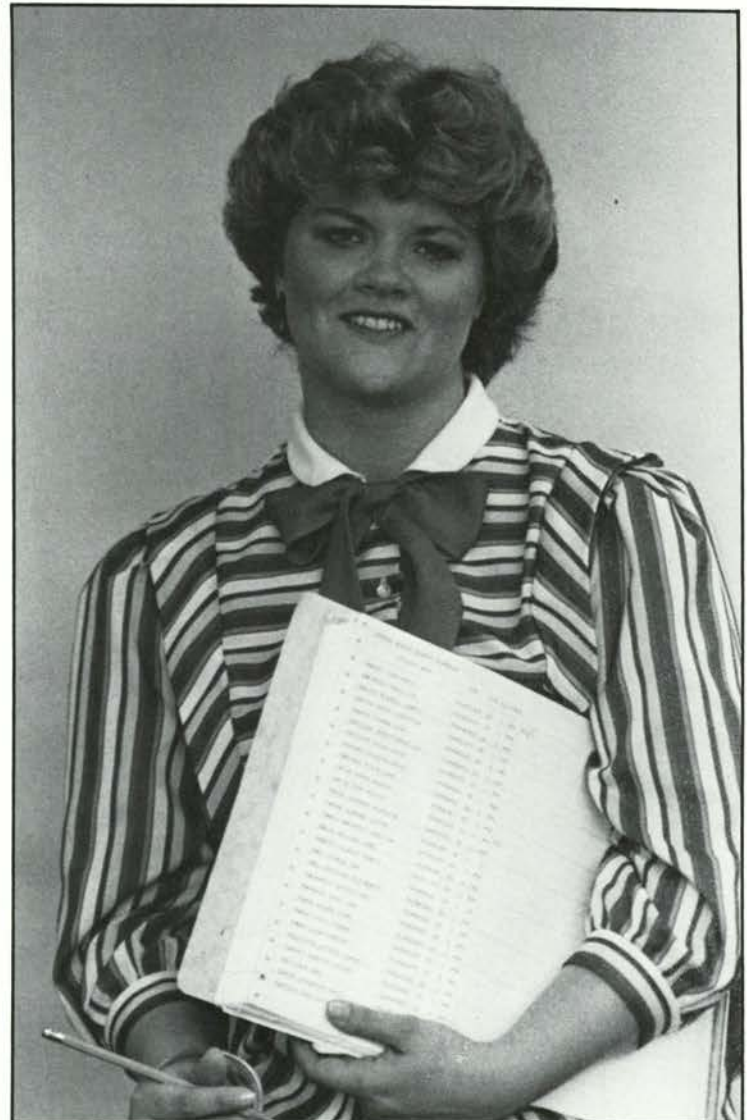

Besides patrolling the campus and preserving harmony, Campus Security assists student groups during programs, helps students with class projects, and provides additional employment to anyone who is interested.

Powell is a firm believer in every university having their own police agency. He feels this limits unrest among students, and helps them trust and identify with the officers in his department. Powell runs a successful program at OSU, and with the continued support of students and staff, he hopes to maintain the high standards and confidence of the OSU community.

DORTHY ELLIS

Dorthy Ellis' face is a familiar one to many Oregon State University students who frequent the Kerr Library. She holds the title of Head of Circulation which charges her with the checking in and out of books, the billing of overdue books, storage, and the ordering of requested books.

Ellis has been a resident of Corvallis for 21 years along with her husband who just recently retired from OSU as a professor and Director of Health Care and her two sons who are graduates of Oregon State. She has been working at Kerr Library for 20 years. During those years, the library has undergone tremendous change.

In the early 60's the crowded, but stately original library was replaced by the current structure on the corner of Benton Place and Jefferson Way. The old library, now Kidder Hall, and all the "charm and character of an historic New England building but we had really out grown it," recalls Ellis who came to OSU the year following the move. Several years later, a sixth and final floor was added to the new building, and, within the last two years, the library reached the landmark distinction of shelving its millionth volume.

"I have had nothing, but good experiences here. There are those days though, when things just don't go as planned," stated Ellis. "But, I think if I had had any real bad experiences, I probably would have quit by now!"

Along with her job at Kerr Library, Ellis has been working in the cafeteria at Good Samaritan Hospital for the last 18 years. She stated that she enjoyed both of her jobs very much and planned to continue working at both for quite awhile.

BARBARA WILSON

If anyone in the Interfraternity Council (IFC) has a problem or a question it usually goes to Barbara Wilson.

Wilson is the IFC secretary and does the majority of correspondence and office work for the IFC.

A 1976 graduate of McNary High School in Salem, Wilson is married and has a five-year-old daughter.

She has been the IFC secretary for 2½ years, a job she said she enjoys very much. "It's fun, there is always something going on, the guys I work with are great," she said.

Wilson is involved with many IFC activities. She is responsible for making sure all plans and arrangements run smoothly for the IFC Sing and rush week.

According to Wilson, the office is rarely boring. Things such as office romances keep things exciting. She said it's always fun to keep tabs on new developments in the romances. She is quick to add that none of these romances involve her of course.

Wilson said one of her more difficult tasks is dealing with calls from prospective students' mothers. "It's always tougher speaking to mothers because they have such specific questions about scholarship and living arrangements," she said.

Wilson's warm and friendly personality make it easy to see why students and her get along so well.

The most precious commodity in Corvallis during spring term is the sun. There are many ways OSU students enjoy their free time, but the goal is universal: to get the ultimate tan. And when the sun is uncooperative, for a modest fee one can buy some sun at the local tanning salon. Fake and Bake is becoming popular at OSU, but for most, there is no alternative to the real thing.

CALLAHAN SIX

Sorting the mail for dorm residents is a tedious job, but it is an important link for news from parents, friends, and the rest of the world.

Each room must have a certain character called its own. These residents have used their creativity to establish comfortable living quarters; providing for the three S's: studying, socializing, and sleeping.

IRA GABRIEL

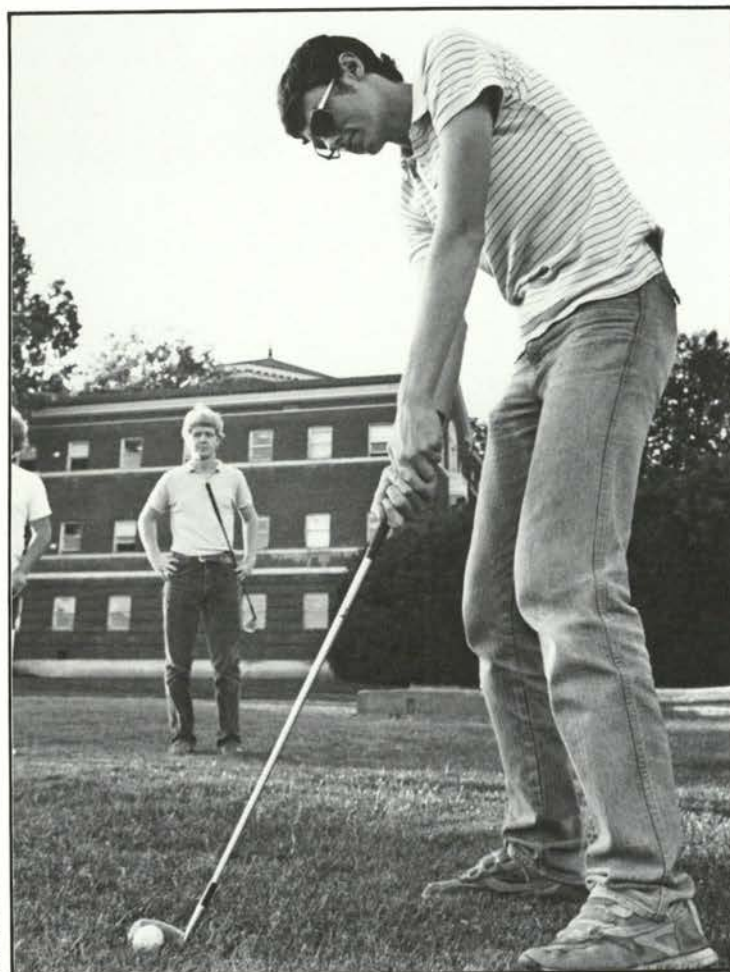

DORM LIFE

The word "dorm" holds a multi-faceted meaning for many students at OSU. Where else could a person experience music and parties at all hours of any night, waiting endlessly for a washing machine, gourmet slop distributed everyday by the University Food Service? It's the same place where you have an independent room surrounded by 400 other students sharing late-night cramming for a calculus final, waiting for mail, ordering Woodstock's pizza and establishing closer friendships.

Randomly brought together by the OSU Housing office, roommates become friends and learn more about people as they venture through the parties and finals weeks of college. Holding a different definition to each person, "dorm life" remains forever a memorable part of each person's college experience.

Alpha Chi Omega sponsors an annual frisbee golf tournament to raise money for their national philanthropy — Cystic Fibrosis.

Alpha Chi Omega stresses diversity, individuality, scholarship, campus and community involvement. Alpha Chi members are active in Blue Key, Mortar Board, Talons, Phi Chi Theta (business honorary), University Singers, O.S.U. Rally, KBVR-TV, Barometer, Jaycee's, Panhellenic, varsity athletics, O.S.U. Fashion Show, and O.S.U. Student Foundation, to name a few.

In 1983, "Chi" Chapter of Alpha Chi Omega, here on the O.S.U. campus, was selected as the most outstanding Alpha Chi chapter in the nation.

In Spring of 1984, Alpha Chi and Theta Chi received first in the Intra-fraternity Council Sing contest with their production of "Godspell".

ALPHA DELTA PI

GREG BANNER

"Corvallis Girls" by Ravid Dee Loth

The East coast Alpha Delts are hip,
I really dig the sundecks there.
And the Southern Chapters with the way they talk,
Knock me out when I'm down there.

But OSU is the best of all
The very finest in sororities.
Yah, I couldn't wait to get back to Cornvalley,
Back to the cutest Alpha Delts of all.

Hey, they're snooty and snotty sorority girls,
But tha's all right with me,
'Cause they love to party all night long,
And keep their house mom up till three.

They're anti-granola and pro-Reagan,
Capitalistic all the way.
They're all Daddy's girls and he Buys them Sprees if they get above a C.

They think they're neat, they think they're fine,
I really think they're tops.
Their GPA may not be first,
But, man, can they chug those hops.

I've been all around this great big campus,
And I've seen all kinds of girls.
Yah, but where 23rd and Harrison meet,
You'll fine the best girls in the world.

I wish they all could be Alpha Delta Pi's . . .

ALPHA OMICRON PI

KATHY LAMB

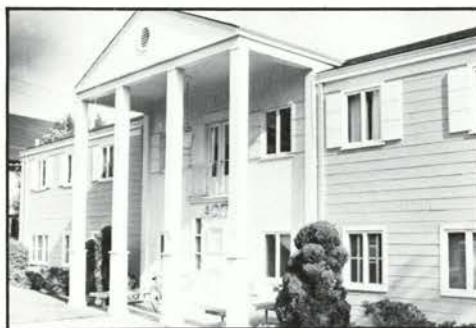

Sisterhood is vivid to the common eye; all accomplishments celebrated and joys shared. Yet each is able to be her own individual.

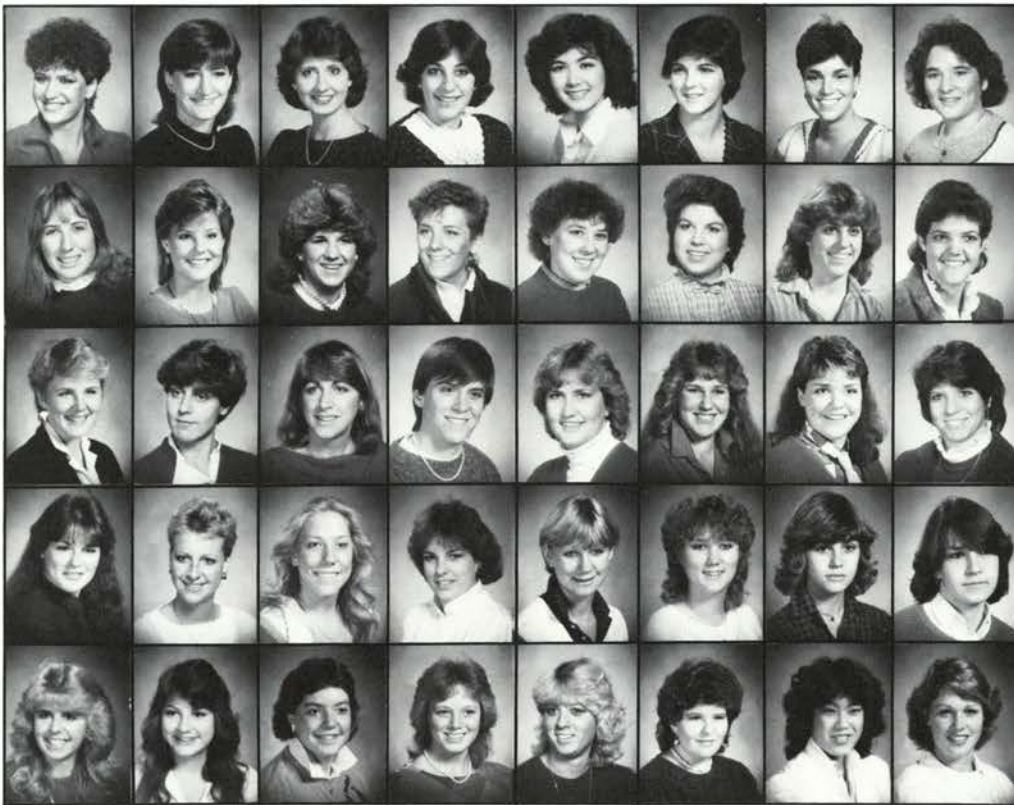

Alpha Omicron Pi is one of many sororities on campus, yet very unique. Being a home and family for over half a century at Oregon State, it is a place set within the heart of each member. It is a place where one can learn about herself while fulfilling hopes and dreams.

Each member is active in the house as well as on campus. Current campus achievements include station manager of KBVR radio, reporters for the Daily Barometer and members in many academic honoraries. There are a diversity of fields of study, from education and business, to technical journalism, each girl hoping to put her mark on the world. With a background of Alpha Omicron Pi and Oregon State University it is highly likely she will.

ALPHA PHI

Hey! Look at us! We've had a facelift! It's only been 10 years since our last one, and, boy, are we excited! At last, a modern look for the Alpha Phi house! Everyone around here is all teeth. "Smiles everyone, Smiles!" Sometimes I think I watch too much T.V.

First floor is like Grand Central Station sometimes, the phone ringing, and girls everywhere talking and laughing. There goes the doorbell again. Who is it? Some hapless Phi who forgot her key, escorted by the Woodstocks' Pizza man. Or is it the other way around? You never can tell around here!

Well, it's getting late. Time to brave the northern wind of the sleeping porch and climb into my warm bed. Ahhhh ... relaxation at last. OH! What's this in the bottom of my bed? RICE CRISPIES?!!!! Thanks girls - I'm gonna get you for this!

GOODNIGHT

Alpha Phi is more than a sorority filled with Sally Rally's. We're a group of people, thrown together by chance, with a common desire to become friends. And through our friendship we have formed a bond that binds us all together. Whether we are laughing or crying, playing or fighting. A feeling of sisterhood pervades the rooms where Alpha Phis of every kind have lived for years, and we will always treasure the times, good and bad, that we have shared together as sisters in Alpha Phi.

ALPHA XI DELTA

GREG BANNER

Alpha Delta chapter is one of 102 Alpha Xi Delta chapters across the nation. One of the unique qualities of our house is the fact that we stress individuality. Also, sisterhood is something the Alpha Xi's value and we always have fun together in activities we do.

Our philanthropy is respiratory health and our mascot is a teddy bear. We also participate in many Greek and university events, including Mom's Weekend. As our house picture shows, we had an interesting time with our Mummies during OSU's annual Mummies Weekend. Not only did we find time to go shopping with our Mummies, but we also were able to take in the many activities the university offered. The Fashion Revue at the M.U. was exciting to one Mummy, who exclaimed, "Oh I love the white draped linen-look for summer." A function that evening offered our Mummies a chance to "come out of the closet" and "hang loose." "Mummie Dearest" provided Friday night entertainment at the Milam movie and Saturday was spent shopping and going to the Renaissance Fair. The evening was "wrapped up" at Mummies Mattress Factory. The whole weekend was a "frightful undertaking," leaving us "dead" tired.

CHI OMEGA

GREG BANNER

CHI OMEGA

It's another one of those days at the Chi Omega house and here I am, staring at the first page of my Writing 327 term paper, due tomorrow. I'm pondering on whether or not I should include Einstein's theory of . . . what is it called? I look up in awe.

Around me are 40 of my sisters that are in the same situation as I, weeks behind in their studies. Midterms must be tomorrow. I come to the conclusion that study tables are becoming the most popular room in the house. I get up to open a window.

Back to my paper. The half-page is still there but the words are becoming blurred. My head bobs. The idea of toothpicks and NoDoze is beginning to become attractive to me.

The throbbing in my head slowly becomes a beat, music starts to fade in, becoming louder, now blaring! No books, no papers. Just Chi O's in their best threads. Into their cars they go, racing off to drain Corvallis' money machines. They are determined to find fun times in Corn Valley, wherever and if they can be found.

Bingo! Mission accomplished!

There are men . . . three of them? I can't tell . . . there are Chi Os in the way and the lights are now dimmed. But through it all, money, credit cards and Chi O's pearly white smiles can be seen (someone please open a window!). Take a look at those muscles. This is just like that scene from . . . Mr. Mom?

I was just about to hand one of those gorgeous hunks a $20 bill when . . . "Hey, who closed the window?" Horrors. I come to realize that I am once again staring at that first page of my paper. Oh well . . . so much for Chippendales, here's back to Cornvalley, OSU, and Chi O study tables. Yawn.

TRI DELTS

You see them all over campus, in your classes, at the basketball games and in the library. Yet what exactly are these three triangles that over 85 OSU women are wearing on their sweatshirts?

No, they are not bike reflectors, and they really aren't even triangles, they are Deltas and they hold very special meaning to the young ladies who live in the large white house on 26th street.

But what is a Tri Delt?

A Tri Delt is a woman who has set very high standards for herself and her chapter, and the Theta Mu Chapter at OSU is an excellent example.

A Tri Delt has set academics as her number one priority and as a sorority, Tri Delta has consistently ranked among the top three houses in grades.

A Tri Delta is active on campus. She is involved in ASOSU Senate and task forces, Student Foundation, Panhellenic and all class honoraries, among many others.

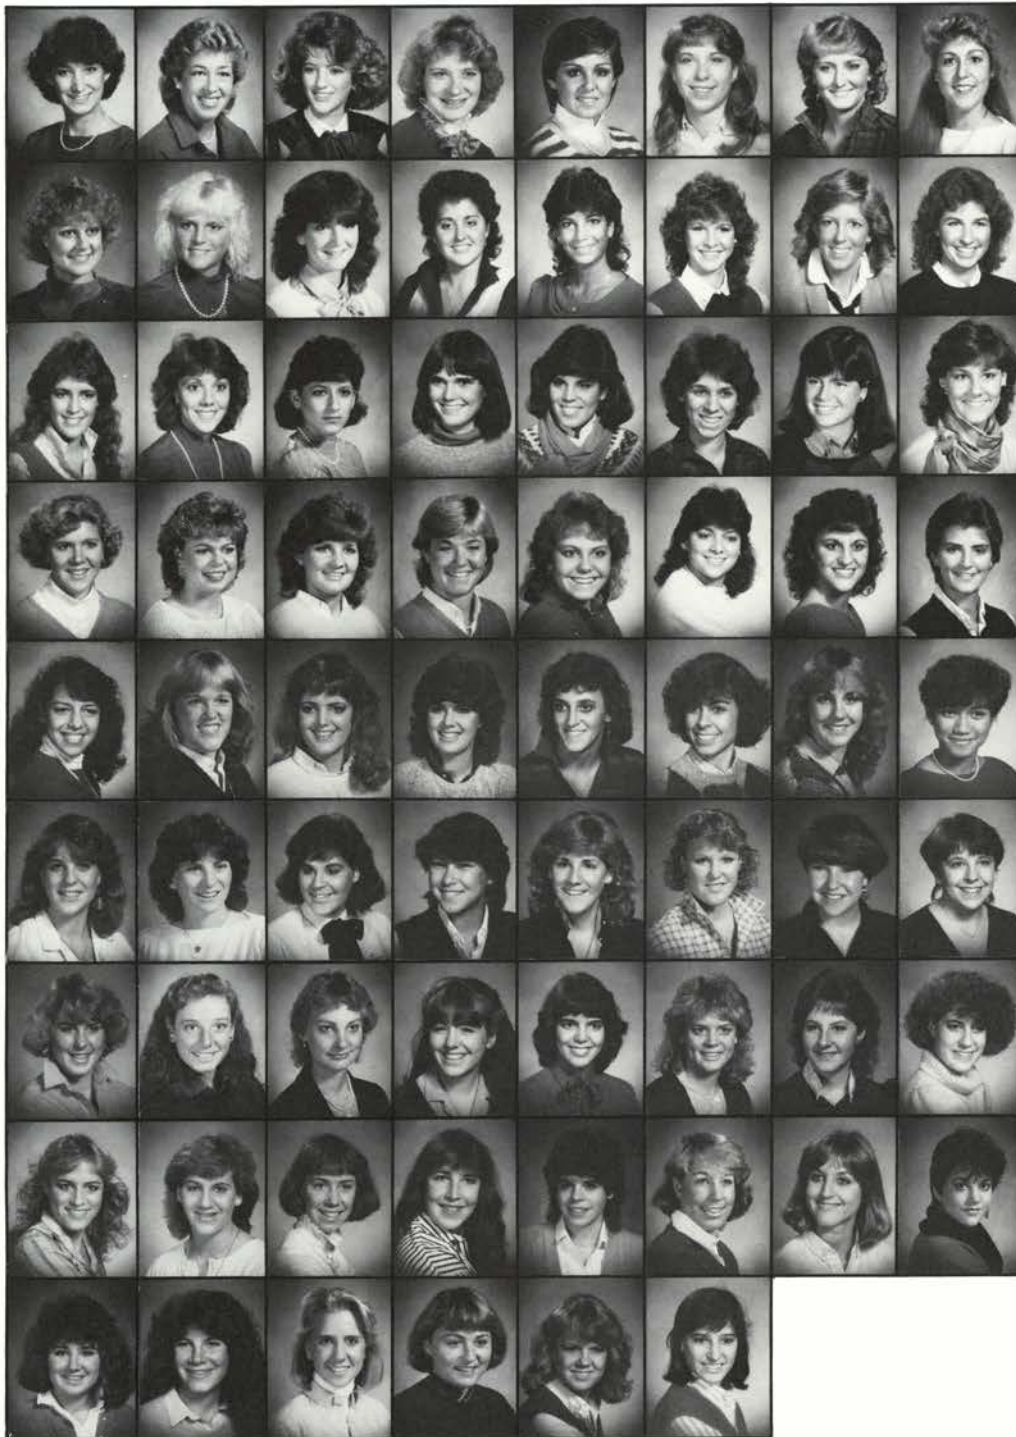

Yet above all else, A Tri Delta is one who shares a sisterhood that is strong in membership and very rich in tradition. Thousands of Tri Delta sisters share common bonds that started over 100 years ago.

A Tri Delta has much in common with her sisters. She shares high morals, goals and a strong sense of Christianity. Yet each radiates an essence of individuality that adds to the diverse interests within the house.

But overall, a Tri Delta is a special person to her sisters, one who displays her individuality, Christianity and love for Tri Delta by wearing her stars and crescent badge over her heart.

GREG BANNER

Life at the Dee Gee house is an experience that members will remember for the rest of their lives. From the moment one pledges, gets initiated, and then graduates, their life is touched by the love and friendship of their D.G. sisters. We are a very diverse group of girls and we have so much fun! From wake-up breakfasts where everyone "attempts" to get up, to the little notes of encouragement and friendship that are left on desks — from the hard work and fun that we put into IFC Sing, to our mascot, the Happy Hannah Doll. This is what makes a D.G. special!

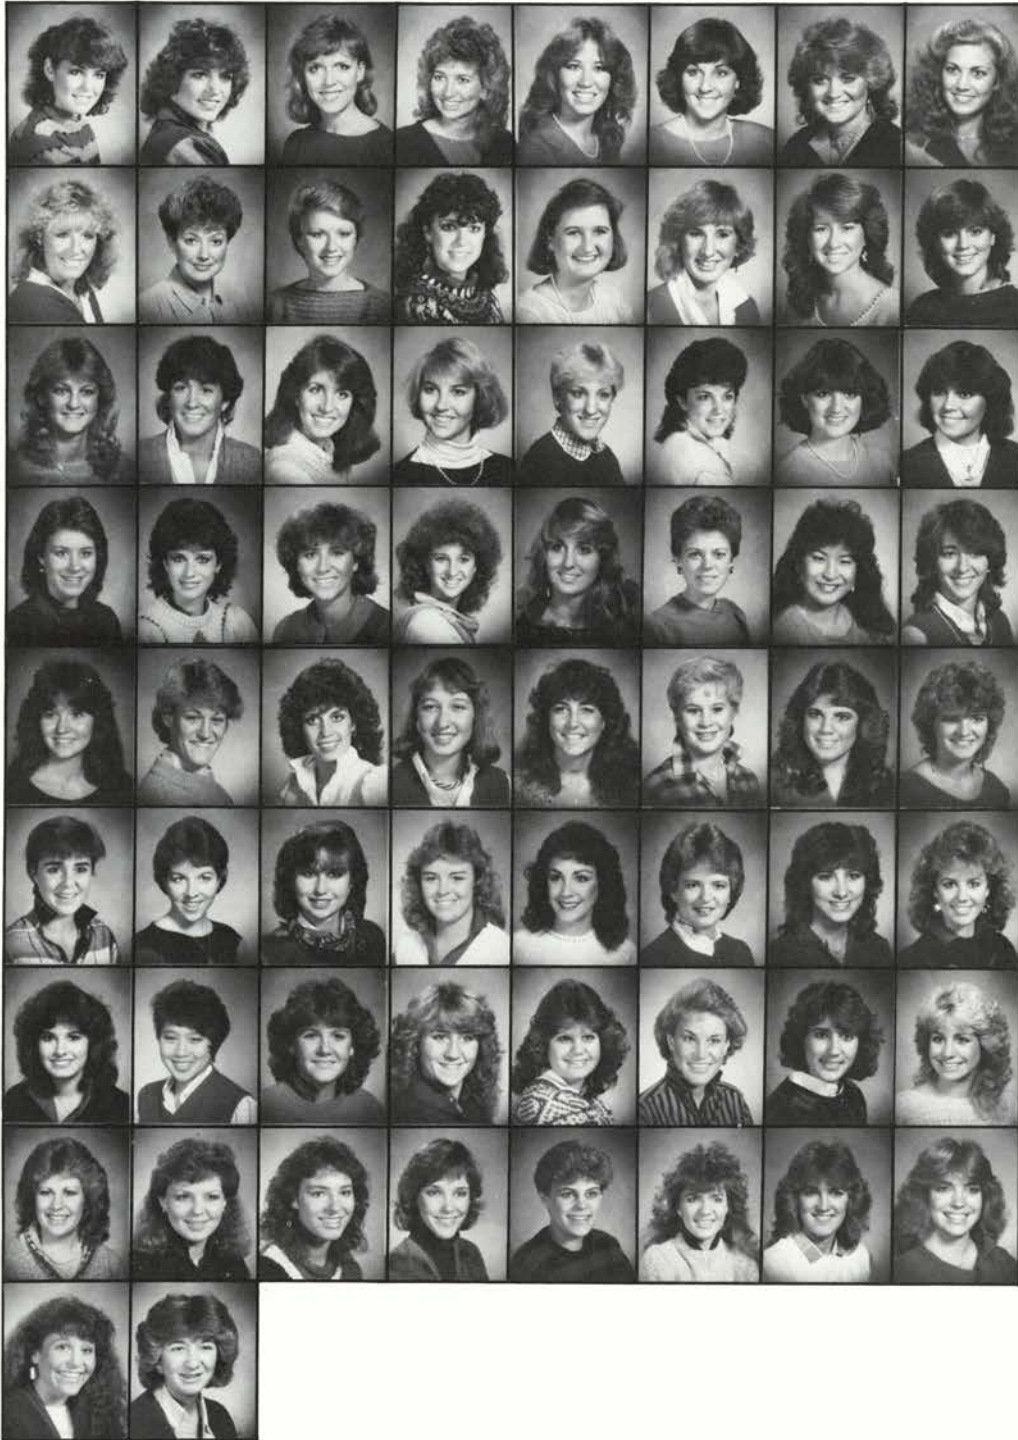

We take school and grades very seriously, but the most important lesson we learn can never be taught in a classroom or read from a history book. We learn how to live and relate to sixty other girls and maybe put up with each other's bad habits — but always recognize the many more positive points that prevail. We learn to accept everyone for what they are and that's important.

With the many national and province awards our chapter has won over the years, one can say that Delta Gamma is a fantastic sorority in all ways!

Kappa Alpha Theta — a distinguished sorority at OSU. The women of KAT are as diversified as they are accomplished, and are active on campus, and in the community.

A number of members are involved in Panhellenic Council, SAIC, Talons, KBVR-TV, Order of Omega, Barometer, Athletics, Rally, Greek Columns, MUPC, ASOSU, Circle K and many other activities.

KAT works towards the academic and social growth of its members. Thetas pride themselves in keeping a high academic standing and are always within the top five grade point averages for sororities. Thetas enthusiastically participate in charitable activities within the local, university, and national levels.

Kappa Alpha Theta contributes to the betterment of the greek system and the individual and societal growth of women.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

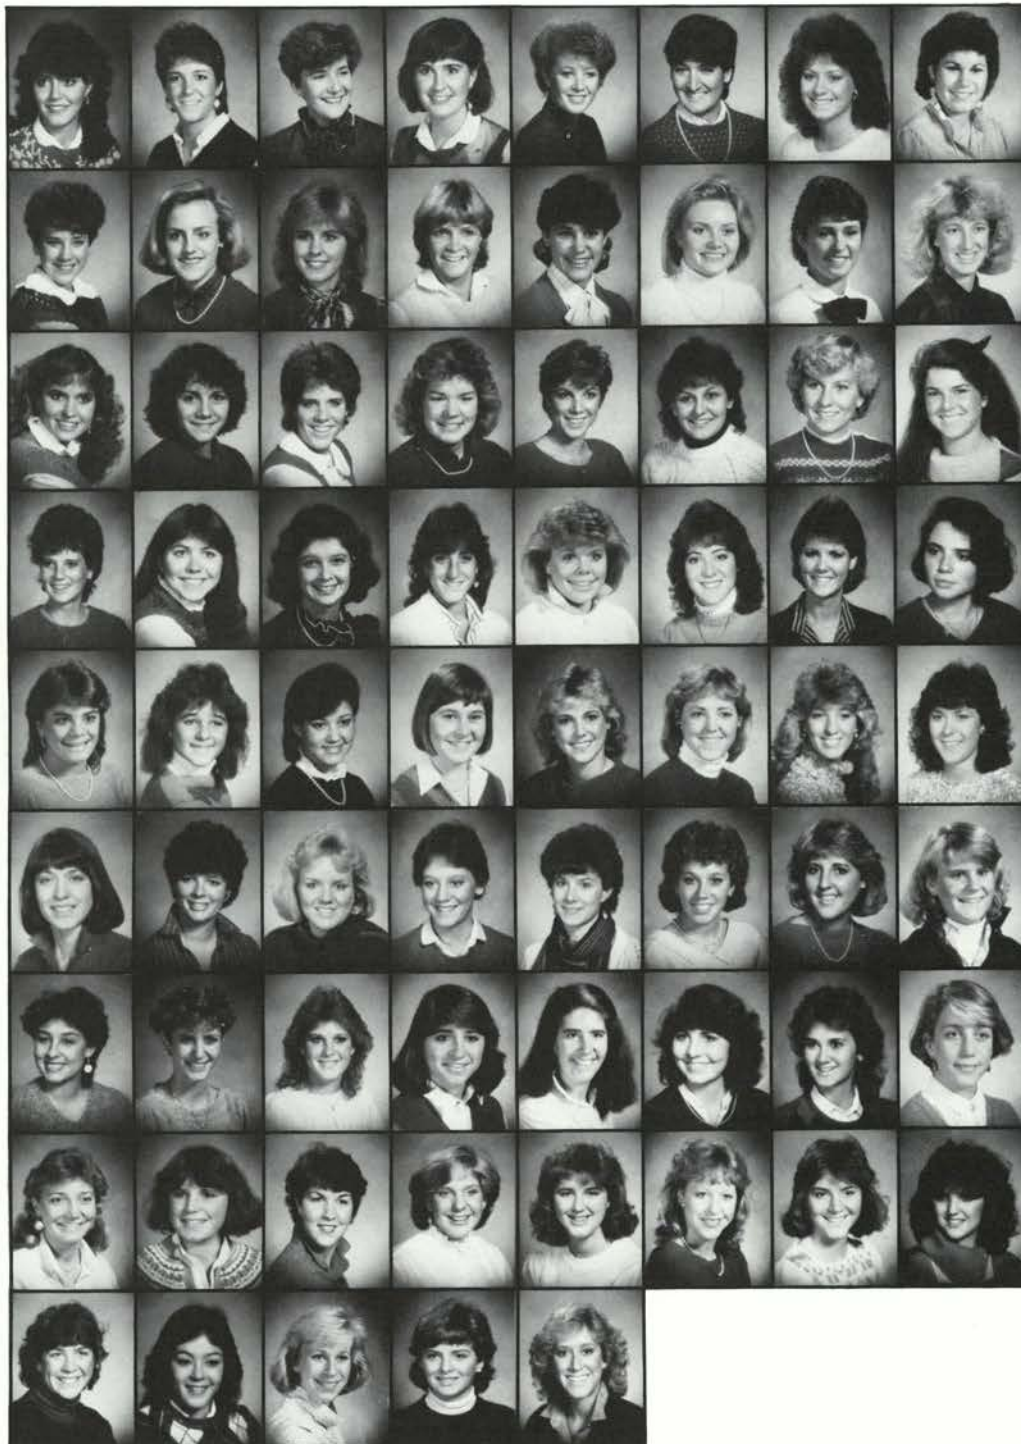

When asked why she chose the sorority she did, freshman Sally S. of Kappa Kappa Gamma was quoted saying, "I love my house. It gives me goals and direction in life. We are always doing things for the needy such as wake-up breakfast for other fraternities, door signs during finals week and fundraisers for worthy causes." Our reporter asked Sally, "What organizations do you provide for?" "Well" said Sally, "every Spring Break, without fail, our entire house vacations in Palm Springs. Some of the sisters have spent all their allowances on clothes and make-up. They have exhausted all their resources. Some dads can be so cruel! Others might have missed the deadline for the university emergency loan program. So we set up a fund to assure all our members can get to the sun. After all, spring term would be miserable without a good tan base.

Friend ... Who you are and what you mean to me are expressed of what life means to me. I am thankful that in this time our paths merge. Only the future knows how long we will travel the same ways, certain only that our lives will be changed because of our common experiences. Let us enjoy the walk together and celebrate the person each of us brings to the journey and the friends we are becoming along the way.

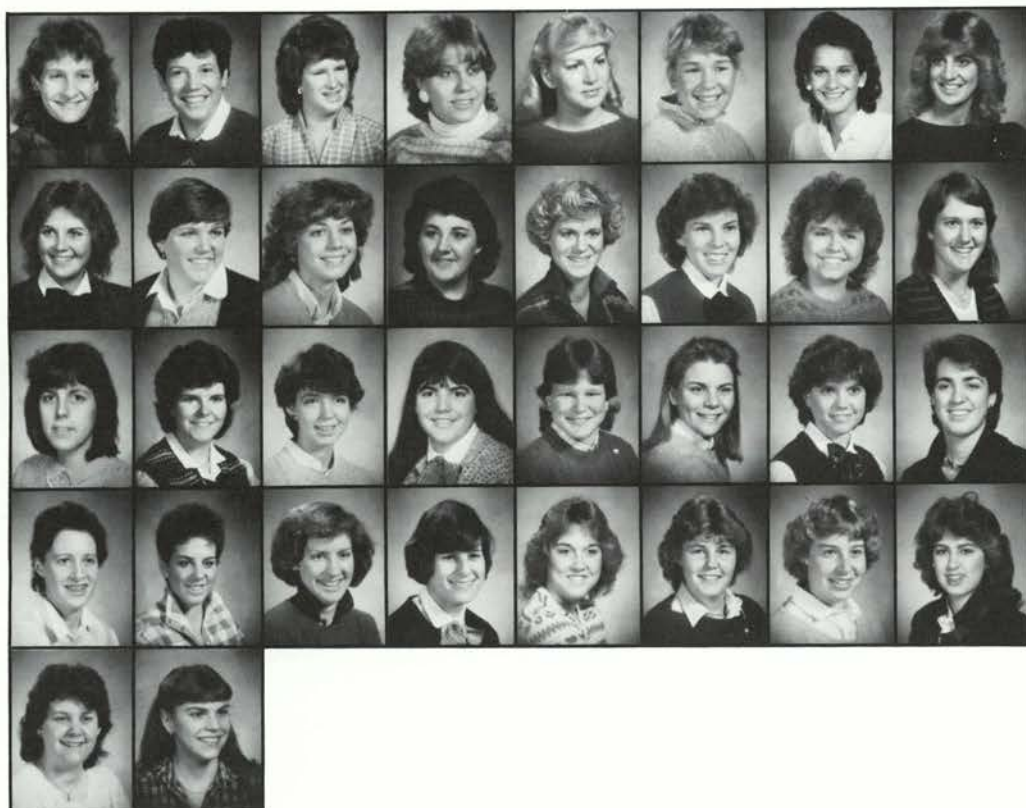

The women of Sigma Kappa take pride in themselves and the feeling of fun and good times is enhanced by participating in Greek Week, Derby Days, starting water fights with neighbors, and contributing to the strong Greek system here at OSU.

Sigma Kappa is more than just four years of functions, smorgasboard, and rush retreats. It's a lifetime of friendships made through the Greek system and sisters in the house. It's knowing that your time at OSU isn't just receiving a degree, it's a time of learning, laughter, and commitment.

DRINKING

"What's the name of the game?" yells a beer drinker sitting in a circle with a group of other beer drinkers.

"THUMPER!" the group yells back as they all beat their legs in unison like a drum.

"How do we play it?" the first drinker asks the group.

The rest of the circle knows their response. "Fast and dirty!" they yell back.

"Why do we play it?" he questions the group again.

The circle again yells back, this time with a response not suitable for print. It's all part of one of the many drinking games that have become synonymous with the term "party" at Oregon State.

Rolling Stone Magazine made the observation, "If bread is the staff of life, then beer is life itself."

Everyone has to sleep, but if college students spent that precious slumber time pursuing their favorite activity, they would drink eight hours a day. Consuming alcohol — beer is the drink of choice — is the most popular form of recreation for college and university students everywhere.

The 80's mark a cessation of excess, a renewed yearning for control—except for drinking games. These are deliberate, less spontaneous forms of imbibing that are becoming elaborately ritualized. Some form of drinking games can be found at just about any party on campus. Whether it's a Greek or an Independent party, really doesn't matter.

PHILANTHROPIES

I don't know if you ever noticed but one day every fall term a funny thing happens. If you're out real early in the morning on campus you'll see a bunch of guys walking around with silly black derbys on their heads. Girls will run up to a guy, kiss him and take off with his hat. This funny phenomenon is just part of all the unique gags and stunts people are involved with in the name of philanthropies.

Each fraternity and sorority has a special organization or cause they try to raise money for. The fun starts when groups try to come up with original ways to earn more money. Tri-Delts can be seen teeter-tottering hour after hour in rain, sleet or snow. And Gamma Phi's have been getting all wet in their dunk tank no matter how wet it is outside.

Rumor has it every winter term the men of OSU flood the tanning booths in hopes of capturing the title of DeeGee's Mr. Bathing Beauty.

Reports have been filed that hordes of OSU women ransack the Sigma Chi house during Derby Day in search of a big Teddy Bear.

"Grown up" college students ride tricycles and little bikes around campus, in the dark, with no lights to the chagrin of campus security, all for the Sigma Nu trike-a-thon.

The penny has been devalued as having next to no worth, but not in the Alpha Delts Big Man on Campus popularity contest. The winner is determined by which candidate receives the most pennies in his name.

Philanthropies have grown with the Greek system and will continue to be an important aspect of it.

B.M.O.C. competitors try for "twit of the year" honors.

This fall term, the men of Acacia saw another fine performance by its bowling team, being league champs and an all-fraternity second. The swim team also managed a league championship and took third all-university honors. The annual "Nite on the Nile" housedance was held.

Winter term was highlighted by a visit from our national advisor and a trip to Berkeley, CA for a regional retreat. The house was represented on both the all-university water polo and co-rec-basketball championship teams.

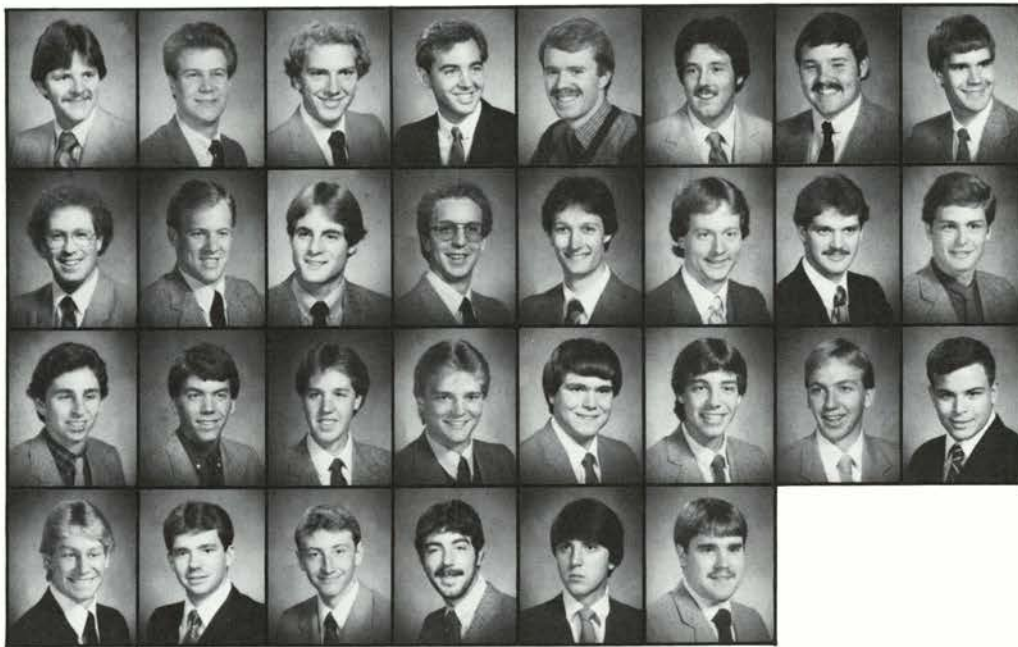

Elsewhere in the sports world, we were represented by a competitive wrestling team, a strong basketball team and SPAM. The Acacia swimmers also managed to wrangle the Delta Gamma Anchor Splash trophy this year.

Spring brings on perhaps the most noteworthy of all Acacia's events, Mary's Peak Marathon. The marathon is recognized as one of the largest Greek-sponsored philanthropic events on campus. It involves both local and state police and is co-sponsored by such corporations as Hewlett-Packard, Pepsi-Cola and Miller Brewing Company. In 1983, $2400 was raised for the Shriner's Burn Center, our national philanthropy.

The race itself is run on a thirty-mile course for Avery Park to the top of Mary's Peak. Teams consist of 10 men and 10 women, the men running half or quarter mile legs and women running quarter or eight mile legs. Last year there were over 1000 participants.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

GREG BANNER

Alpha Gamma Rho is the only social-professional fraternity at Oregon State. This means our membership is limited to students majoring primarily in agriculture and forestry. Since most members come from similar backgrounds they have starting blocks for becoming acquainted.

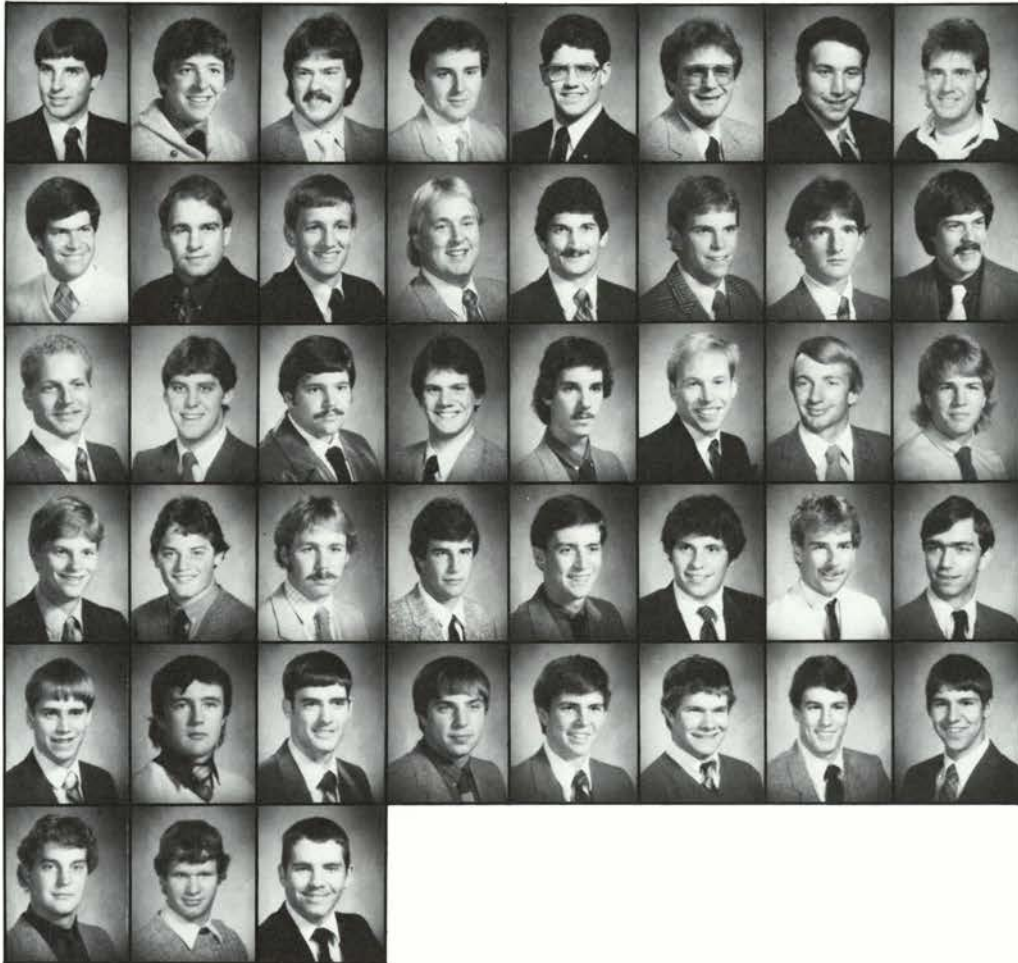

At AGR we realize everything isn't learned out of a book. For this reason we have an active social calendar scheduled by chairmen who are elected each term. Social activities range from house dances to sorority and co-op exchanges. At AGR we have Big Brother and Big Sister programs designed to help pledges become more acquainted with our house and the university.

We at AGR encourage everyone to find their own areas of interest and to pursue an active part in gaining a well-rounded education.

ALPHA SIGMA PHI

DAN DUKE

Your college experience should include much more than just time spent studying or attending classes. A complete education includes many aspects of a student's life. It encompasses academic and athletic achievement as well as social and leadership advancement.

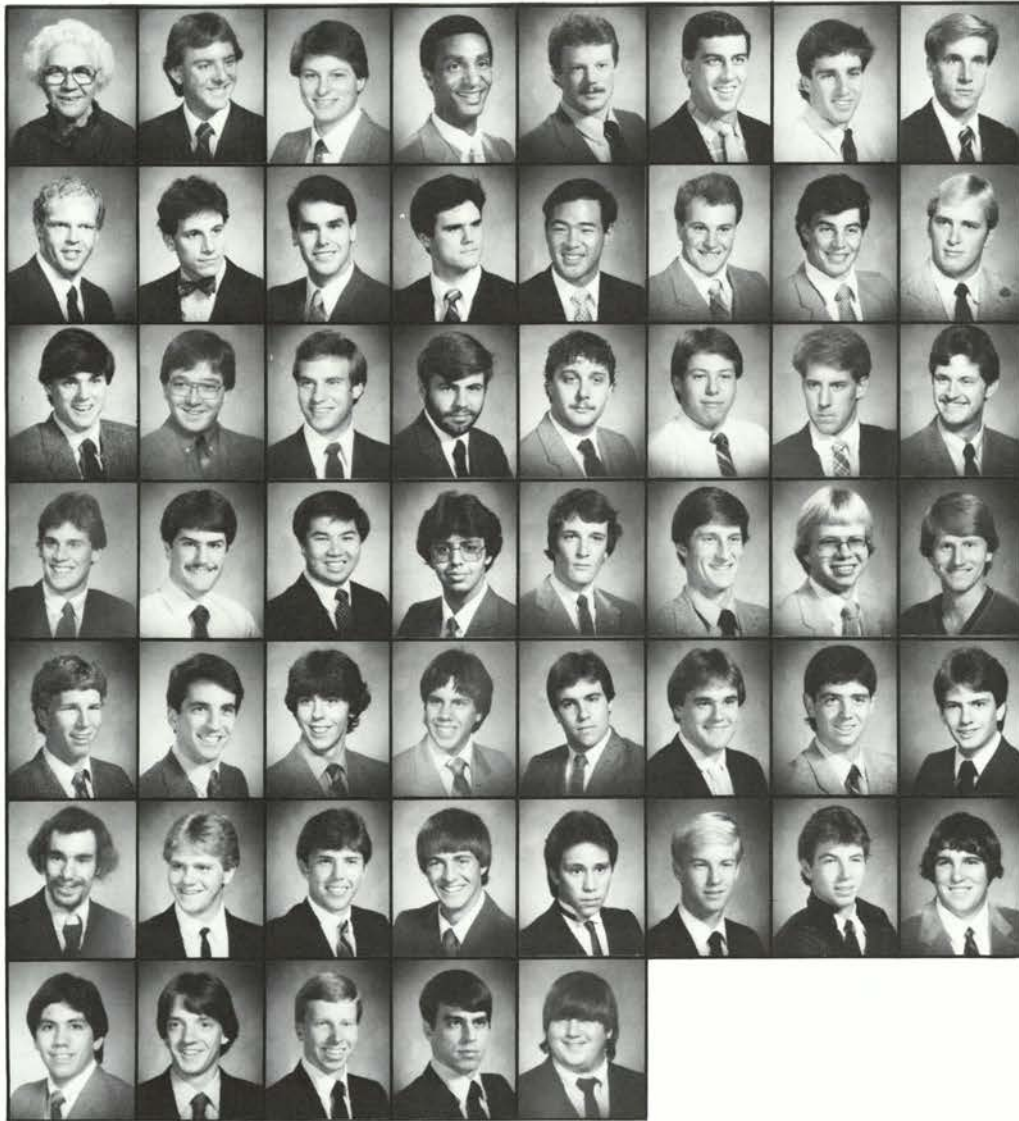

Alpha Sigma Phi is one of the strongest fraternities on campus. We feel we provide an atmosphere where all the above-mentioned qualities can be met.

The most important aspect of our house is not our activities or achievements, but rather the individuality within our membership. We don't consider ourselves as the "athletic" house, or the "studious" house, but a pleasant blend of guys from any different backgrounds who get along well with each other. Alpha Sigs are men forming good friendships, and who enjoy coming back to Alpha Sigs year after year.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

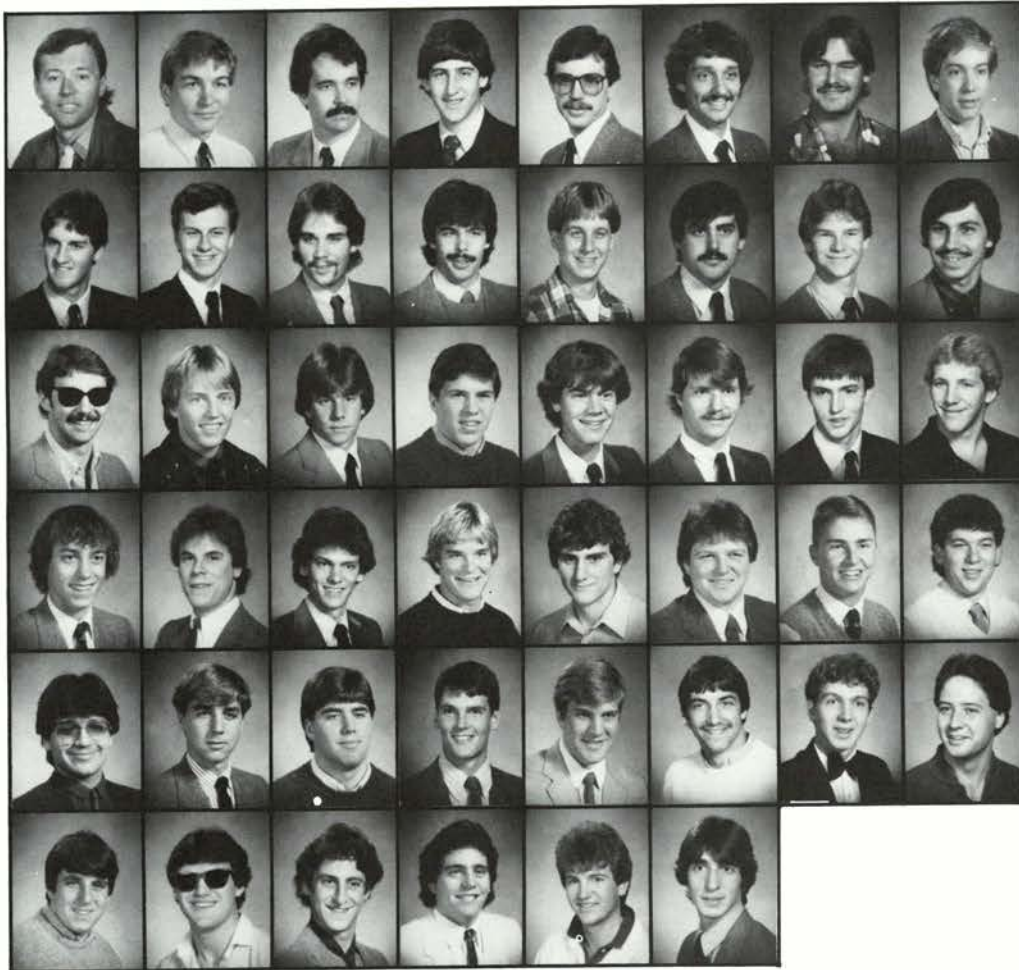

Alpha Tau Omega is the oldest fraternity at OSU and carries with it many of its past traditions.

It is often said that as much education occurs outside the classroom as within. No college education is complete without an active social life. At ATO the social life finds no comparison on campus for fun, variety, and excitement. Date dinners, house dances, sorority functions, and live bands are just a few of the activities we enjoy throughout the year.

We participate in all intramural sports and strongly encourage our members to enter as many sports as possible. In the past we have held many championship titles and plan to continue the tradition.

CHI PHI

Chi Phi is the nation's oldest social fraternity. We're a brotherhood striving for excellence in all that we do, offering an opportunity for involvement with people who are learning to get along with others. We offer a unique fellowship that develops from living, working, and maturing together as a part of the fraternal and educational experiences of higher learning. Most important, Chi Phi is an association which matures the individual and sends him into the world poised and self-confident. Along with this maturation, Chi Phi members possess a group of friends to support them and to help them get the most out of Oregon State University.

In addition to the typical fraternity privileges, we stand as a fraternity with a proud past, a brilliant present, and a confident future.

DELTA CHI

GREG BANNER

From the beginning we knew we were different. We had no house officers or financial assets. Our members were from all over campus dorms, scooped in dependants and the best of the rest of us. Greeks still meant people from Athens. We started slowly with a strong foundation. Learn as you go. Summer and fall rush program added a hand full of quality mento our ranks and we were off and running. A leaky roof and run down everything greeted us as we moved in. Fall term seven thousand dollars later we've got Playboy manion west. Hugh would be pe proud girls running topless champagne fountain and rooms full of pillows just kidding but seriously here we are in the middle of the eighties and going on 1999 by the time we're out of school the only place left of real individualism will still be Delta Chi when we get together to do something such as a group picture for the yearbook we at Delta Chi do things just a little bit different.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

GREG BANNER

In 1985, one would have to immediately describe the Delta Sigma Phi Fraternity as "a large potential, a new face." Delta Sigma Phi is growing, improving, leading in new directions with its Engineered Leadership Program. Character development, athletic participation, scholastic excellence, social involvement and leadership encouragement is the basis for the Engineered Leadership Program. Only

Delta Sigma Phi has Engineered Leadership; preparing its members for their present academic endeavors and throughout their professional careers. Any fraternity can offer social events, housing, meals, and fellowship, but Delta Sigma Phi offers more with Engineered Leadership, spirit, and hard work.

David: Thank you! Thank you! You're too darn nice. Boy, Paul, Efrem and the boys sure sound crazy tonite.

PAUL: David, we're in Corvallis, there's magic in the air and, frankly David, I'm just happy to be a part of it.

David: Oh yes, audience, we all know that magic is TOTO, Headlining Moms' weekend. Proving once again that this town is the music capital of the West. Folks, we've really got a good show for you tonite. But first, let's draw the lucky number. The first number is a six, the second a nine. Oh those crazy Delts. Who rigged the machine? Now for our special Delt guests:

Let's say hello to Mike Ray. Mike, so how are the grades?

Mike: Well Dave, quite frankly, I don't put much stock in grades.

Dave: And here's John Wrenn. John, what have you been up to lately?

John: Hey dude, I was gonna go shreddin' at the half-pipe dude, but somebody ripped my stick!

DELTA UPSILON

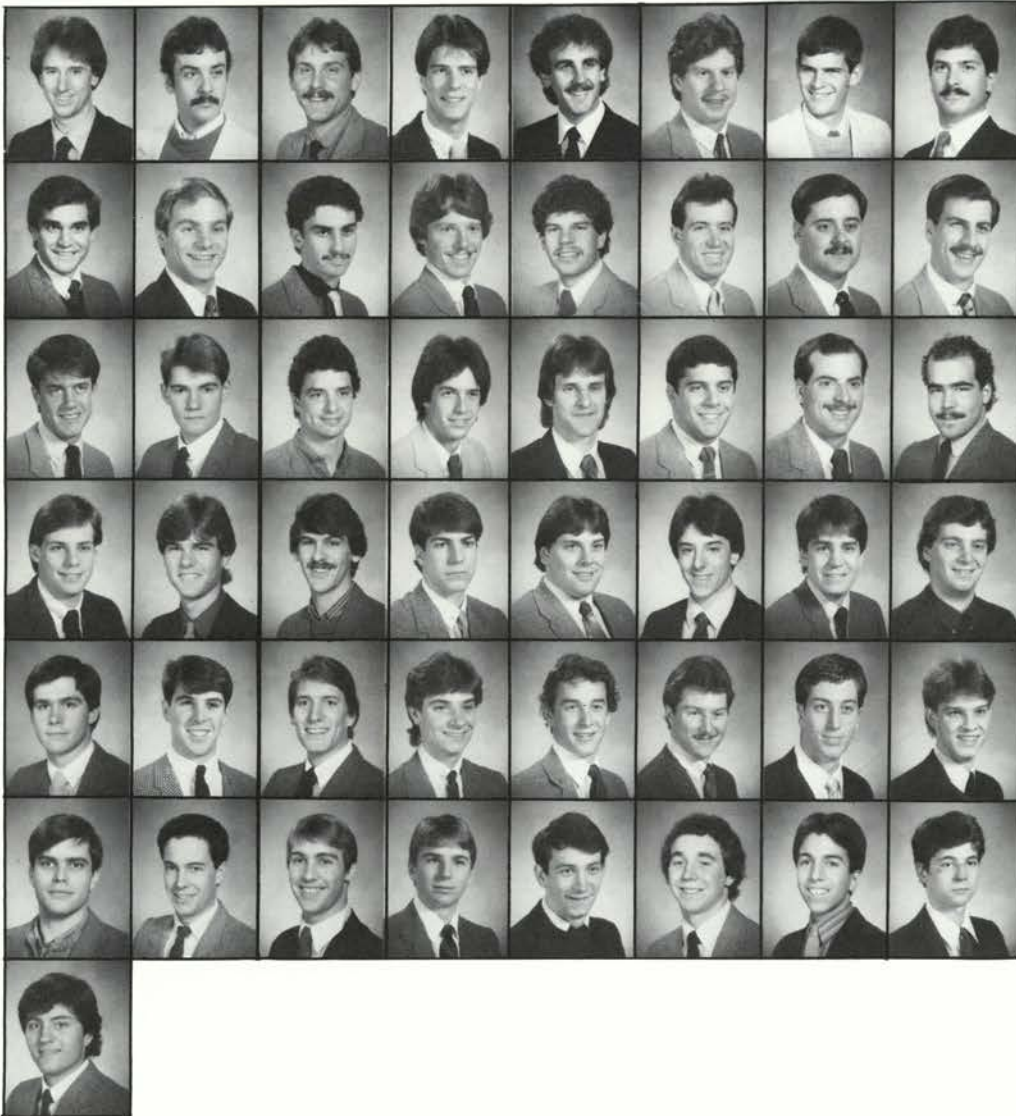

HISE STUDIO

Founded in 1834 and chartered at Oregon State University in 1922, Delta Upsilon prides itself on being the only non-secret fraternity on the OSU campus. There are no secret rituals, officers, handshakes, or anything else which is hidden from our pledges. At D.U.'s ask and you will be told. This "open doors" policy could very well be the reason why the D.U.'s are affectionately called the "gentlemen's fraternity." D.U. houses many men from all sides of the educational, social, and athletic spectrum. We also represent many majors from

P.E. to Agriculture, to Engineering. With a wide variety of social activities, we look forward to hosting our annual Silver Bullit Hawaiian Luau each Spring term. Our attitude of achieving and maintaining academic excellence has been reflected in our term performance. Delta Upsilon has finished in the top twelve fraternities in grade performance for the past three years. The originality, diversity and hospitality that you see at D.U. are genuine and sincere, and what D.U. truly stands for.

Farmhouse Fraternity at Oregon State University is a colorful blend of athletics, brotherhood, social activities, and a positive emphasis on scholarship.

Our social programs consist of numerous activities throughout each term consisting of house dances, study breaks, wake-up breakfasts, and other functions.

Internationally, Farmhouse Fraternity has built a reputation for excelling in scholarship. Our study atmosphere helps members achieve their maximum academic level.

At Farmhouse all members are treated equally. We feel this helps promote a strong brotherhood among members.

KAPPA SIGMA

BEAVER STAFF

We at Kappa Sigma rejoice at being totally generics. After all isn't that what greek life is all about? Diversity! Bleah! Forget about that individuality crap that all the other houses stress. This last summer's newsletter informed me and my brothers that we were to buy Ralph Lauren instead of Izods. I myself was a little reluctant to throw all my 40 alligators away, but I did it for the good of the house.

Our parties have been just great this year. The chicks have been coming over in hoards to be scammed on. We had to change our judging system, those smart sorority girls caught on to the 1-10 system. But besides that we have had at least 3 parties every weekend. The brewskies are flowing continuously, and thanks to our mandatory party policy our parties should start getting even better.

Sports! What can I say, our bowling team lost. However, our polo team took first at NCAA's. Adding one more trophy to our already overcrowded awards room.

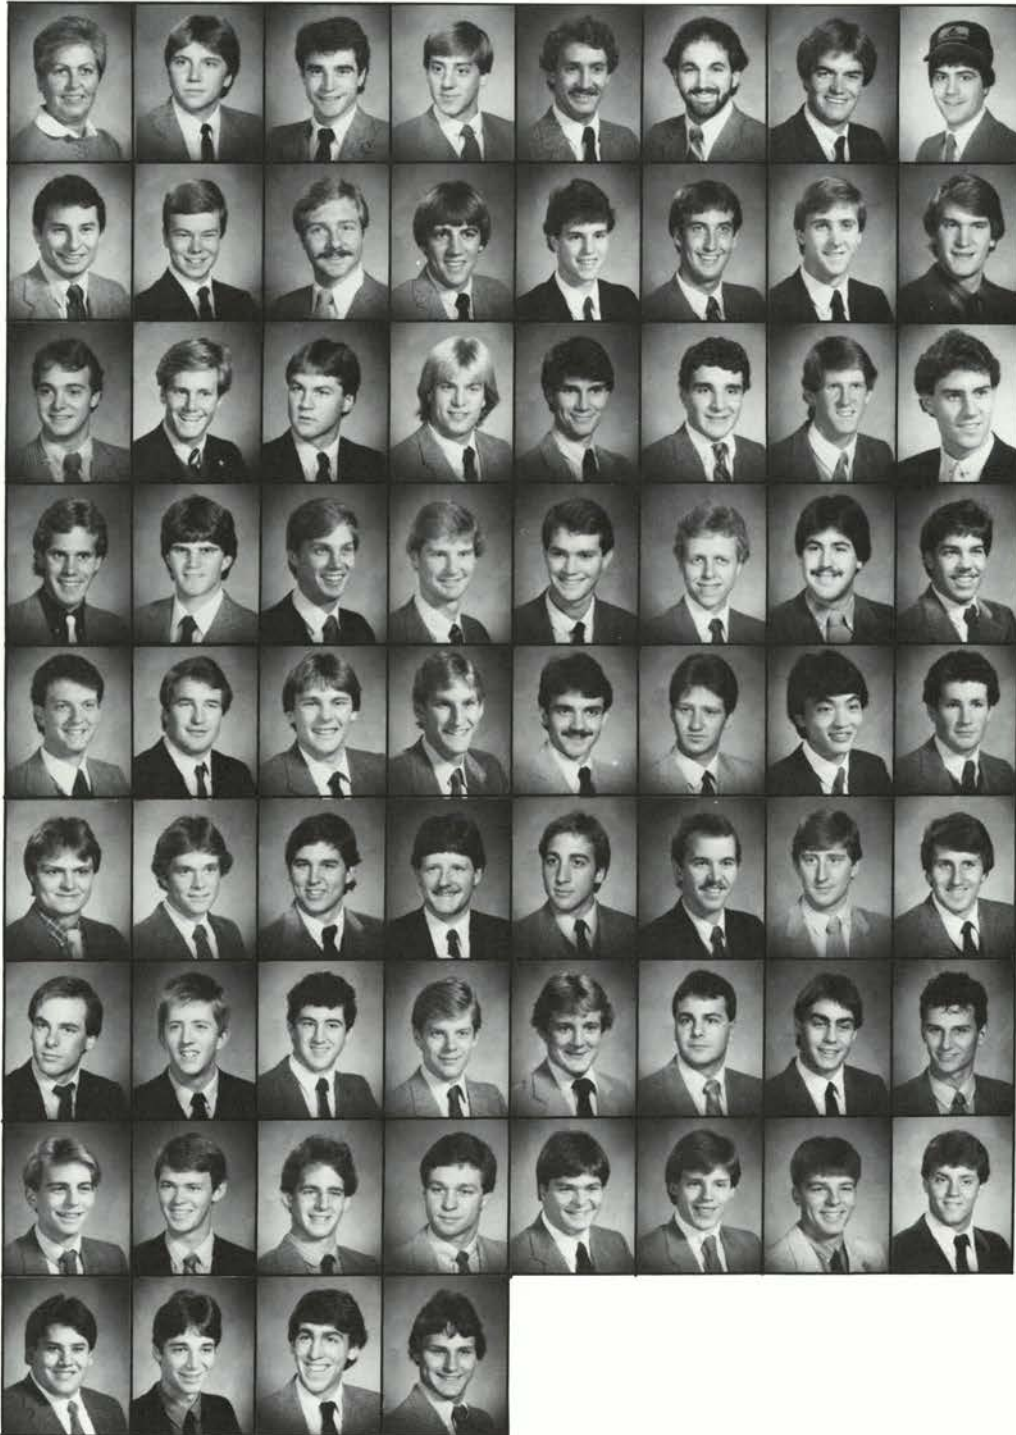

Oh yah grades, well generally we have the test files so there is really no need to go to class. If you're really having trouble you can always just sit next to someone smart. We consistently are low to medium in all house averages. Eat your heart out SPE's.

You may have heard of our nickname "the squeeks", well we're trying to lose that reputation, so this year we have only turned in 5 or 6 fraternities for various violations.

But seriously, campus leadership bar none: Mike Witteman ASOSU president and Nick VanVleet once senator elected to ASOSU vice-president. Of course I could continue on but would you read on?

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

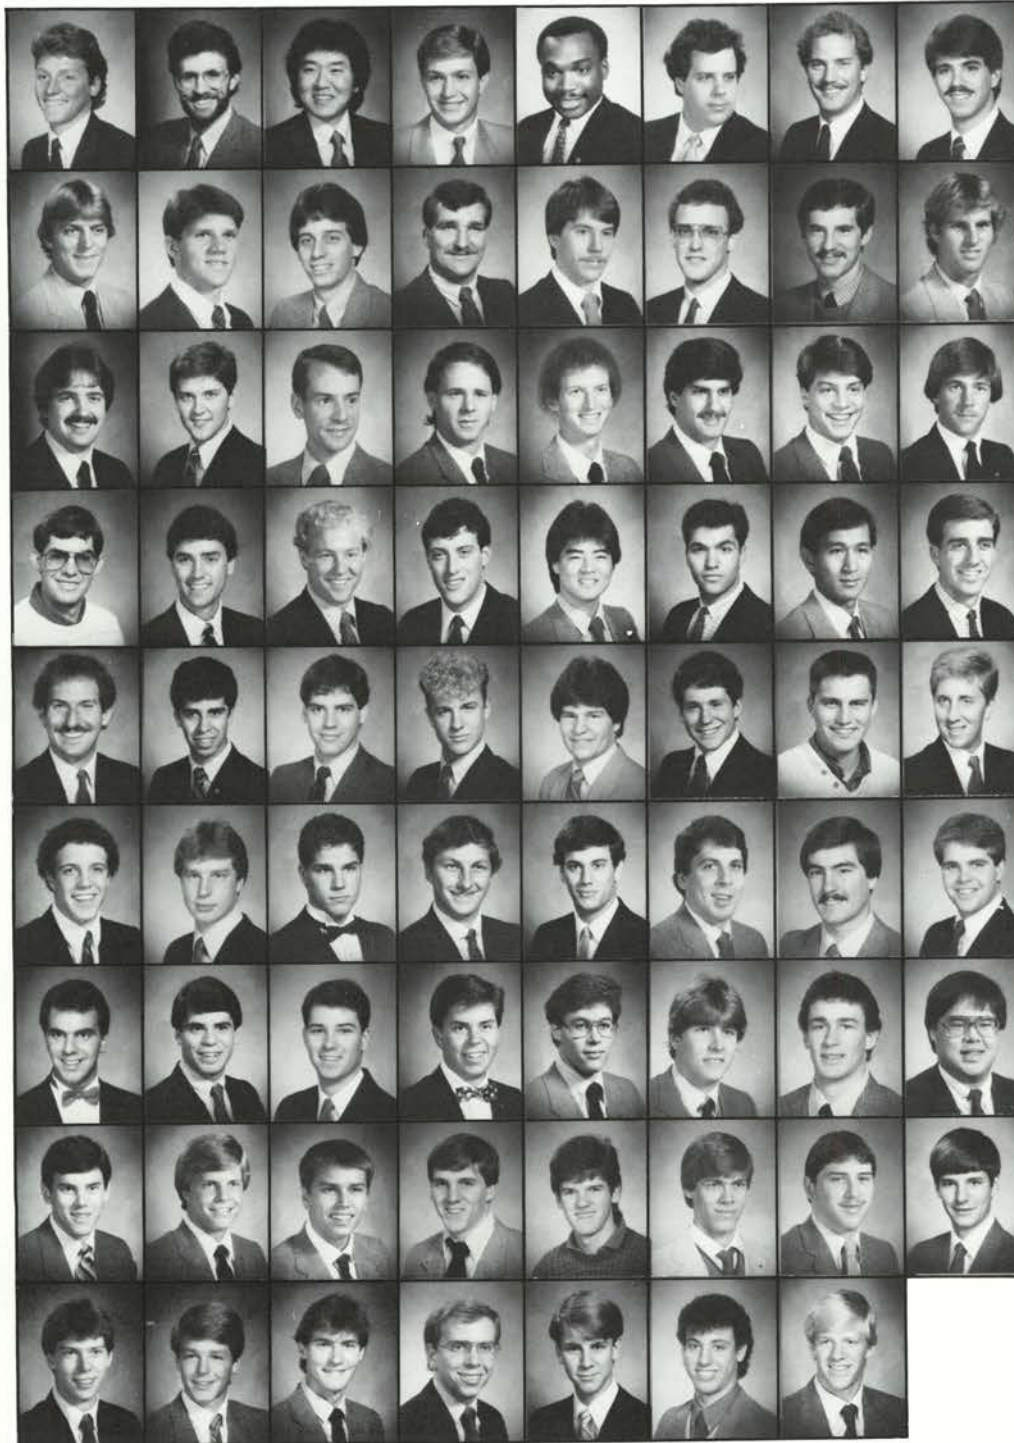

LINDA OLINGER

Our fraternity is a large house with over 100 members. We are very involved in campus, with representatives on many honoraries, ASOSU, and MUPC. We are also proud of our Crescent Court, with 53 active members. Not only do we support this involvement, but we strive for excellence in each. Besides these basics we offer much more. Our chapter has one of the largest financial aid programs in the nation, giving away at least $12,000 each year to our members at Oregon State. We have also eliminated the concept of pledgeship. Upon entrance to our fraternity you become an associate with all the rights and privileges of fully initiated brothers. All forms of physical and mental harassment are strictly forbidden at Lambda Chi. As a result of these policies and practices, we have developed a bond of unity and brotherhood which is extremely strong.

PHI GAMMA DELTA

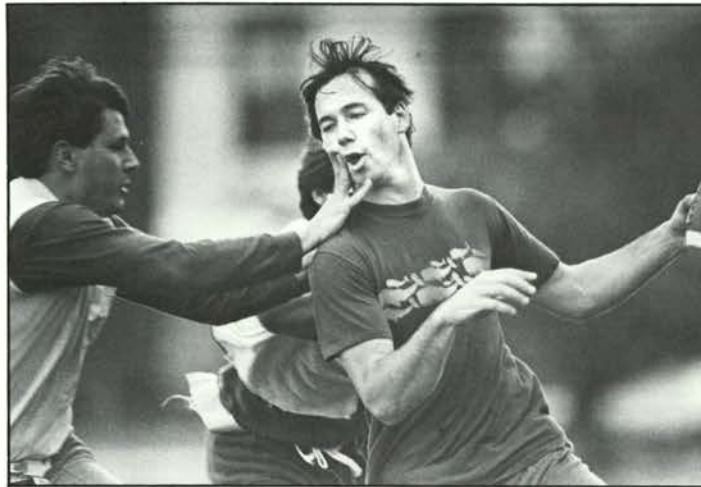

BRYANT PIERRE

PHI GAMMA DELTA

Each separate fraternity represents its own individual personality and style, providing for diversity in the system. Like many other fraternities, we at the Fiji house strongly support high academics, intramurals, community service projects, social functions, campus involvement, great meals, and opportunities to develop your leadership abilities. However, it is the diversity of membership that we are most proud of.

We at the Fiji house feel that the key to brotherhood is this unique diversity that characterizes our Oregon State chapter. Without it, we have nothing. But with it, we are able to enjoy annual achievements consisting of improvements in scholarship, intramural championships, outrageous social functions such as next year's nationally recognized Fiji Islander, and an ever-increasing role in public relations. We're a membership that enjoys enthusiastic involvement in helping each other achieve common goals.

Phi Gamma Delta knows that it is important for an organization to be sensitive to the needs of the individual as well as the group. The chapter offers the opportunity for greater individual input because of its recognized decentralization of control. All this translates into finding the best methods for achieving traditional fraternity values — scholarship, participation, and a lack of hazing — while being responsive to the goals of students in the 1980's.

PLAYBOY: Hello, I'm from Playboy, and I'm here to do a report about your Fiji Islander. I was wondering may I please speak with your President?

FIJI: I'm sorry, but we don't have a President. I'm sure I can help you.

PB: Well, tell me about the Islander, you can tell me about that, can't you?

FIJI: Basically the Islander can be described . . . you can quote me on this one . . . "As the best party in the free world." We lay about six inches of sand over the basketball court and parking lot, flowers everywhere, live band, a pond with ducks, a volcano and enough food and drink to feed 350. There's also the pre-function, na fantastic BBQ, a live band in a hidden park, five hours before the Islander begins.

PB: And that's the Islander?

FIJI: There is also a post Islander recovery function for two sun-filled days at the coast.

PB: My God!!! It must be expensive!

FIJI: Yea, but it's worth it! After speaking with that gentleman, my curiosity had reached its peak. I decided to seek out some lucky young lady who had the experience of the Islander.

And there she was walking down the street singing Do Wa Diddy — The Fiji Islander is great. This young lady had style . . . she was a material girl.

PB: Excuse me miss, I couldn't help but hear you singing about the Fiji Islander.

GIRL: It was awesome, like a big dog!

Three days of dancing, drinking, and decadence.

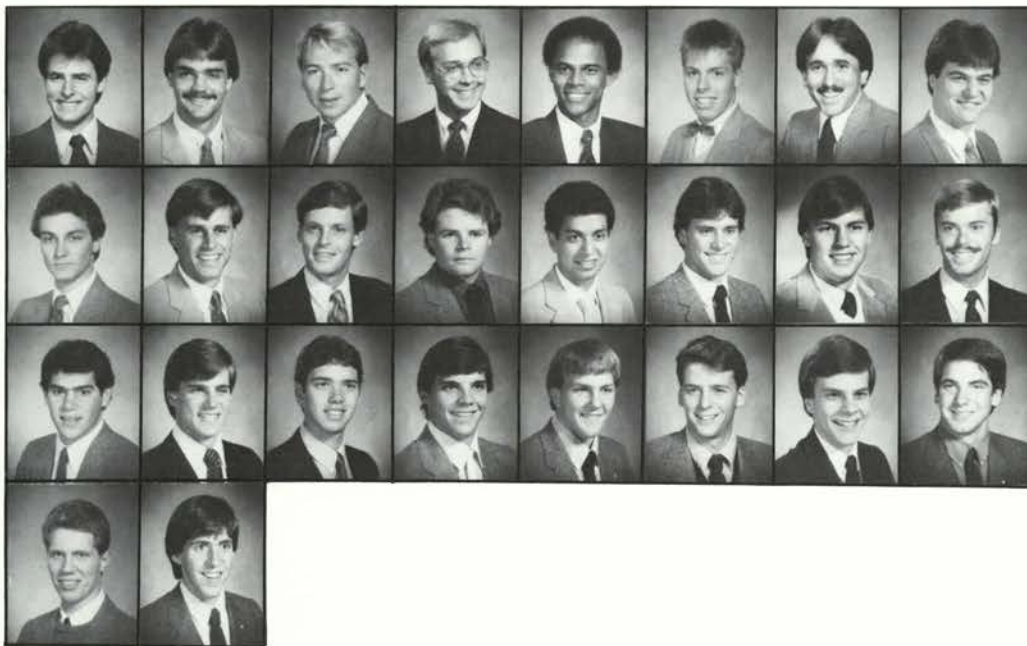

PB: What about your date? Did you have a good time?

GIRL: My date? Oh yea, he was ok, but you should have seen the neat favors I got.

Phi Kappa Psi has had a rich and fulfilling association with Oregon State University. Her origins on this campus date back over sixty years. The national fraternity has a history exceeding 130 years. Her members include leading figures in business, entertainment, sports, and even a United States President.

Being a smaller fraternity offers Phi Kappa Psi many advantages. In a smaller group a bond develops between the members that many larger associations are not capable of. When a person becomes a part of Phi Kappa Psi, rather than starting at the bottom and working his way up, he becomes a vital part of the fraternity immediately.

While scholastic work is obviously important, we feel that other elements are also necessary for a complete education. This is helped by diversity of interests in the house. Activities vary from music and the arts for some, to varsity, club, and intramural sports for others.

By providing a full and enriching atmosphere for her members, Phi Kappa Psi is succeeding at her goal, to produce a well rounded individual by taking advantage of everything the collegiate life has to offer.

PI KAPPA PHI

It must have been on a Thursday when I walked through the Callahan lounge. As I walked I thought to myself, man, this is going to be a great day! Just as I was about to leave I, uh, bumped into a girl I recognized from chem recitation. "Hi, uh, how ya doin'? I didn't know you lived in Callahan!"

"Yeah," she said, "but next term I'll be moving into DeeGees."

"Really?," I asked, "cool, I live in a house too!"

"Which one?"

"Pi Kappa Phi."

"Oh yeah, I know, Pikes right?"

"Well . . . uh . . . no, Pi Kappa Phi, you know PI KAPPS."

"Pi Kapps?"

"Yeah, the big white house on 21st and Harrison."

"Oh, the one with the four big white pillars in front."

"That's the one! Hey, like stop by sometime and we'll work on chemistry."

I left Callahan for the Admin Building to see if I couldn't get my financial aid straightened out. As I got in line, I thought I recognized the guy in front of me, so I asked, "Hey, didn't you go to North?"

"What's that? Yeah, I remember you, how's it goin'?"

"Pretty good, I'm like living in a fraternity now."

"Seriously? Which one?"

"Pi Kappa Phi, on 21st and Harrison."

"So you're a Pike now, huh?"

"No, a Pi Kapp."

"A what?!"

"A PI KAPP, man. Don't you know? PI KAPPA PHI . . . with the huge lawn and trees, next to Theta's."

"Oh, sure, now I know. The Whitehouse, bitchen!"

Our house needed some supplies, so after straightening out the finance situation I jammed on over to the Bookstore. Less than halfway there it started raining. I picked up the supplies and asked the cashier to bill Pi Kappa Phi.

"Excuse me," she said, "Phi Kappa Psi?"

"No. I said PI KAPPA PHI . . . read my lips, would ya!"

Just as I made it through our front door the phone rang . . .

PI KAPPA ALPHA

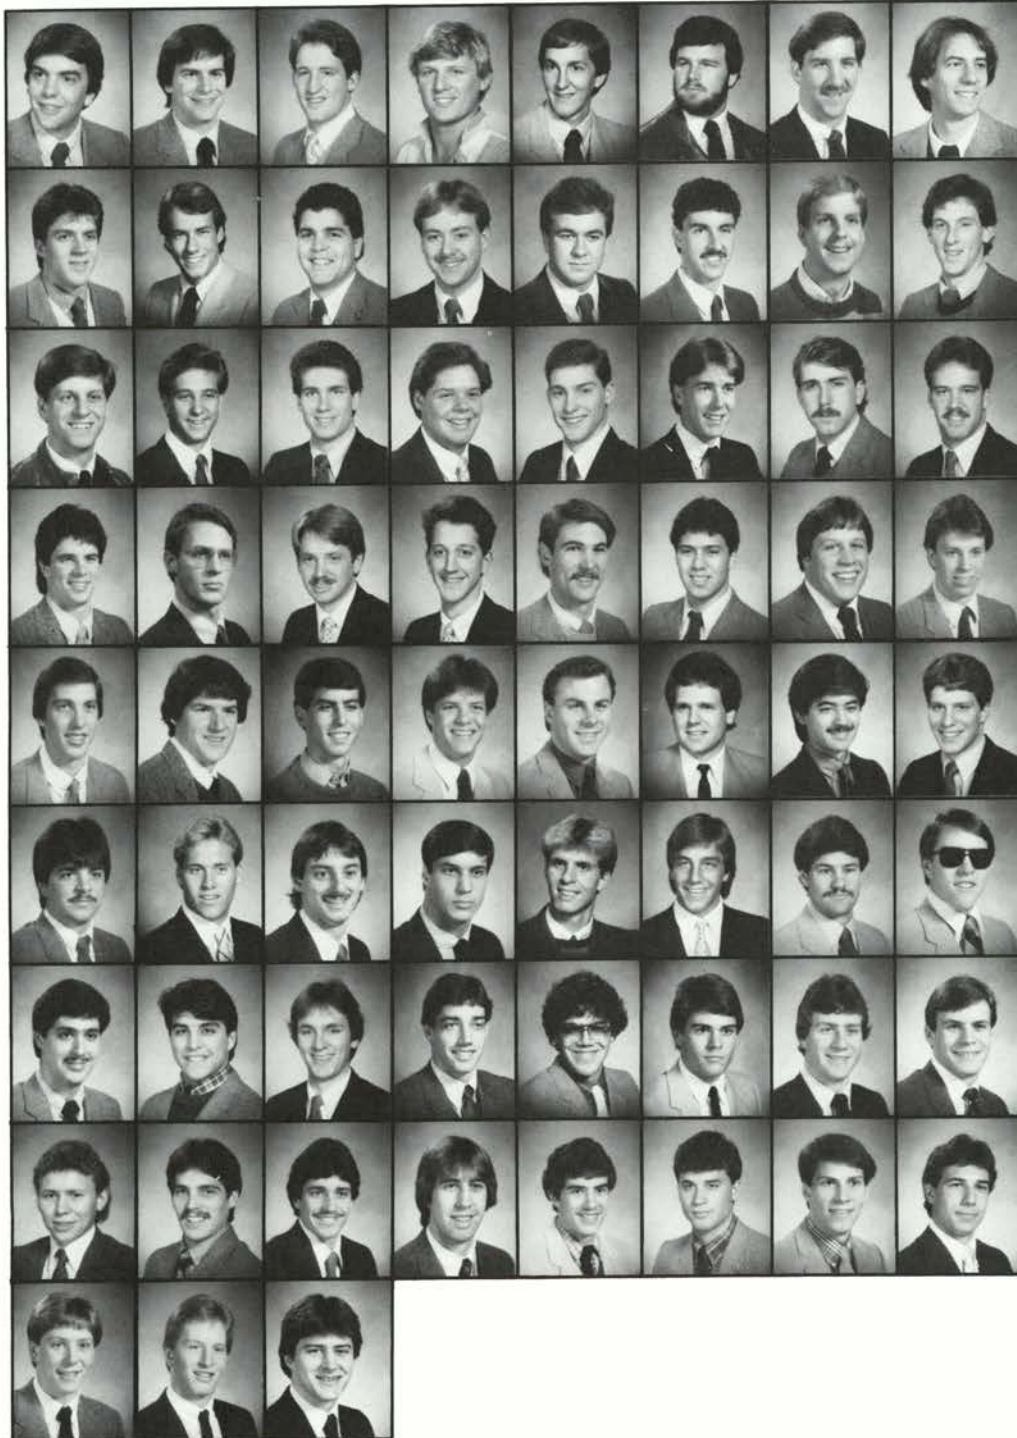

GREG BANNER

Pi Kappa Alpha represents brotherhood and friendship. We strive to better ourselves as people, and to learn and benefit from each other's interests through brotherly love and kindness. Our improvement comes out in campus and community involvement, successful social life, and competitive inter-fraternity athletics. A number of PIKES have been recognized by academic achievement organizations along with many community involvement activities. As one can see, The PIKES are a very well-rounded fraternal organization.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

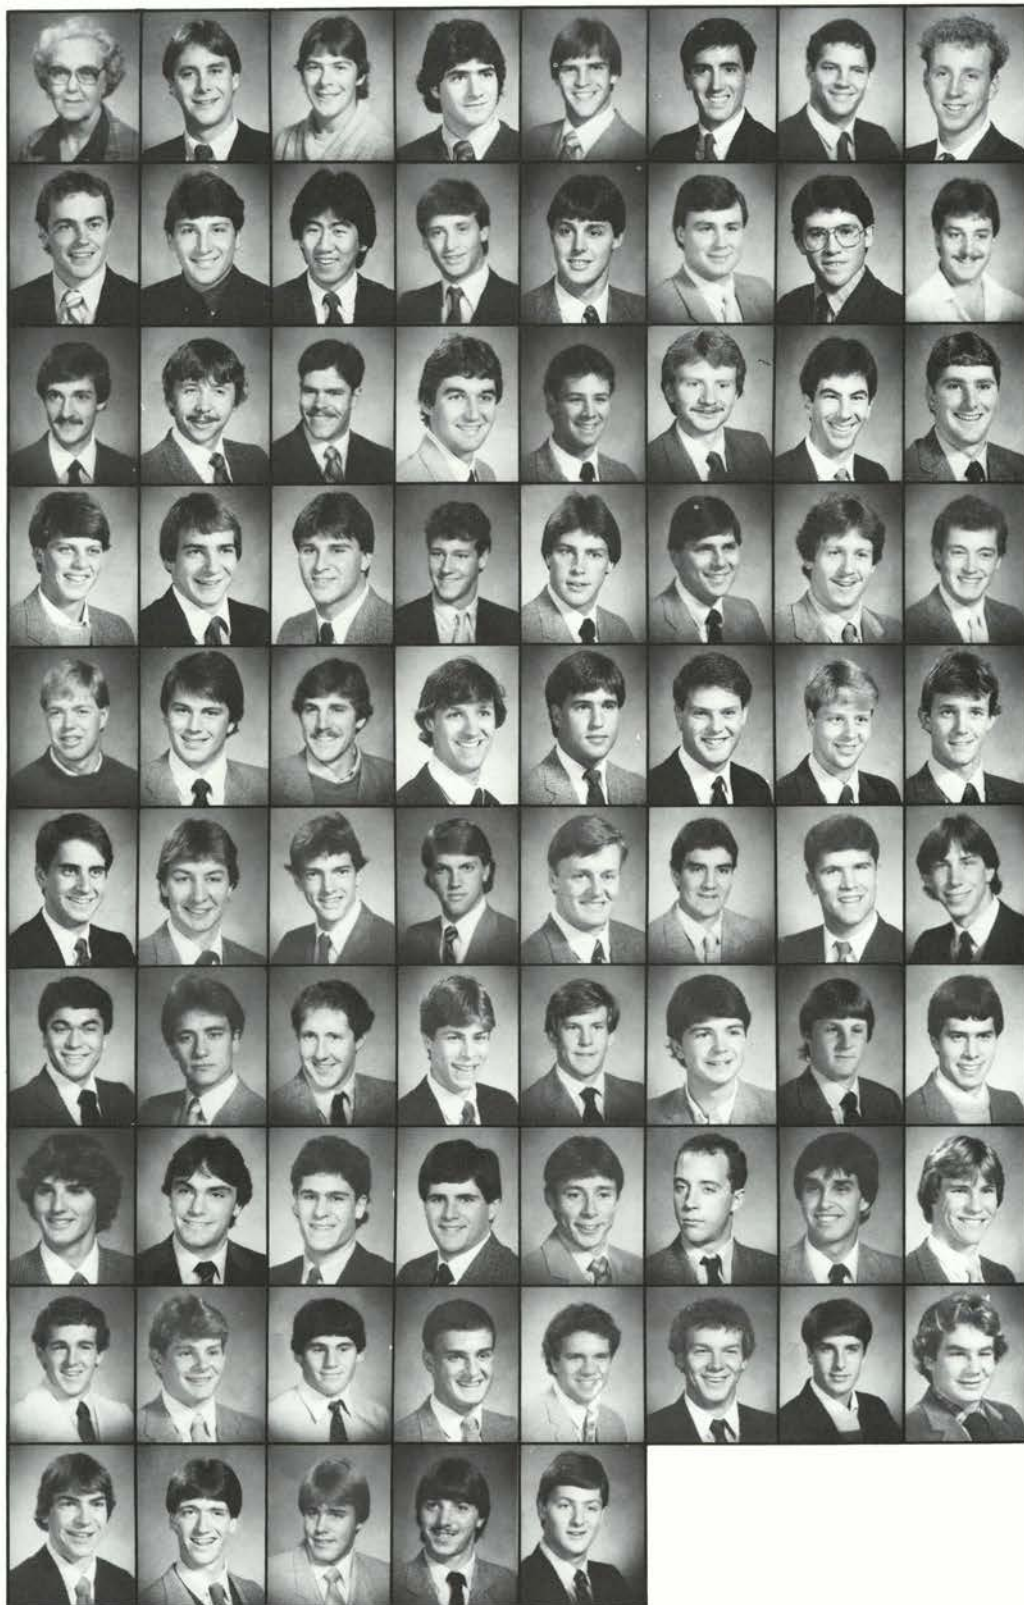

Sigma Alpha Epsilon takes great pride in being a part of Oregon State University and the Corvallis community. Being one of the largest fraternities on campus enables SAE to become actively involved in many aspects of OSU, from varsity athletics to student government.

Not only does SAE participate on campus but also in the community as well, through philanthropy events. The most recognized of these is the the Miss Oregon State Pageant. The proceeds from the third annual 1985 Miss Oregon State Pageant were donated to the Muscular Distrophy Association.

With the rigors of school, activities, and intramural athletics, freetime is scarce. But when an opportunity to relax does present itself the members take full advantage. This time is usually spent in front of the house admiring our unblemished and pristine lions.

SIGMA CHI

MATT ANDRUS

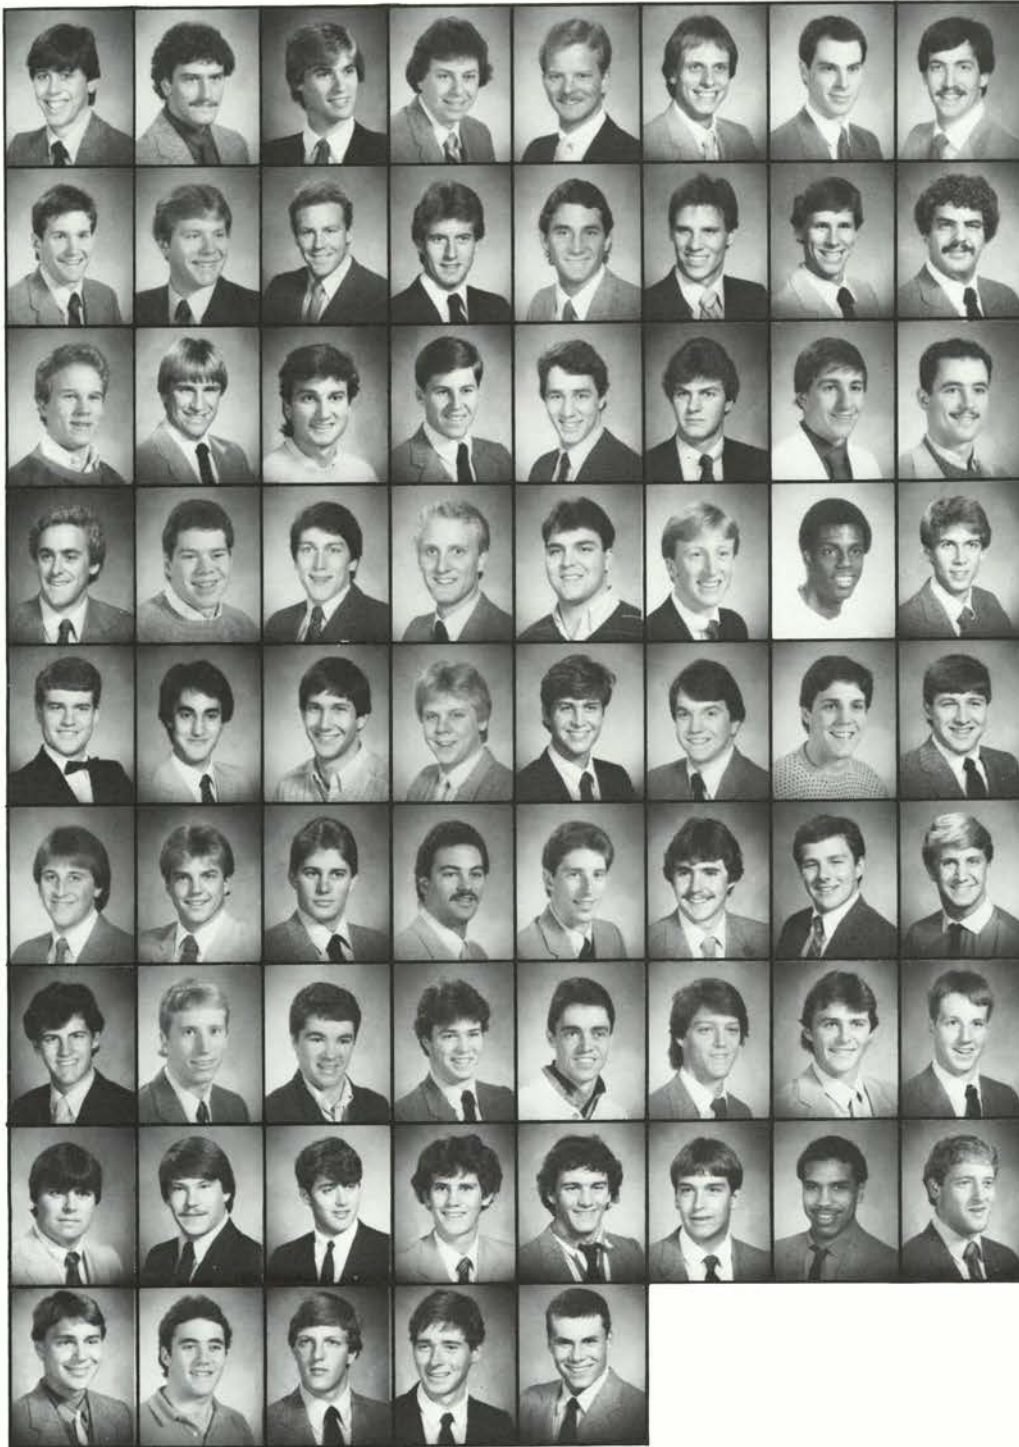

Here at Sigma Chi we take pride in our family, which includes our brothers, sweethearts, and parents. It is the combination of these three that creates our unique home.

Sigma Chi's distinction at Oregon State is due to a number of original programs, including Derby Days, a strongly competitive intramural system, and our little sisters, the Sweethearts of Sigma Chi. We also pride ourselves on an outstanding social calendar every quarter, several campus leaders, and a quiet study atmosphere five nights a week. Our most important attribute, however, is a well-rounded fraternity.

SIGMA NU

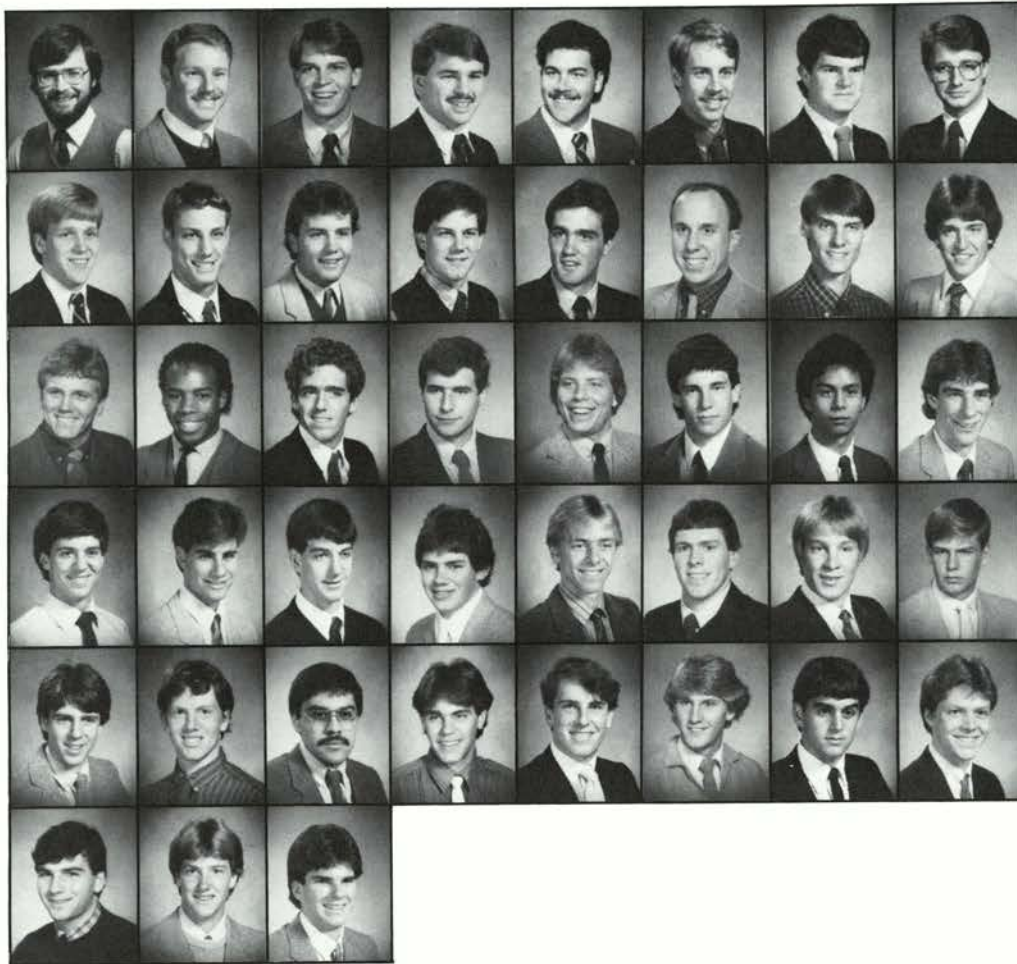

GREG BANNER

Here at Oregon State University, we strive to maintain our founder's principles, and offer an atmosphere of brotherhood and sharing. Like most fraternities at OSU, we offer the individual a chance to expand his personality through a wide spectrum of activities. A complete intramural program, weekly social functions, and a consistent community involvement keeps Sigma Nu members physically and emotionally satisfied. Naturally, these activities only supplement the academic process.

Of course, the many achievements of Sigma Nu and its members could fill a book. The principles of love, truth, and honor were the basis for the founding of Sigma Nu. These values have always been the hallmark of our fraternity and continue to be the focal point of our brotherhood today. Here at Oregon State, we adhere to these principles with the belief we can produce better men. It is this commitment that makes us a truly uncommon fraternity.

Diversity! Sigma Phi Epsilon is a fraternity sold on the idea that college life deals with so many different aspects that must not be overlooked or under-achieved. We strive for excellence in every activity we pursue. Sigma Phi Epsilon has always boasted a great athletic, social, brotherhood, and, of course, academic program. We work hard individually and as a family in order to achieve our goals. For this reason we are not only known on campus for our accomplishments, but we are also known nationally in the Sigma Phi Epsilon chain for our virtue, diligence and brotherly love. The interests here at Sigma Phi Epsilon range from Engineering to Pre-Med to Broadcasting and almost anything in between. Brotherhood is stressed throughout the house, which adds a feeling of unity and strength to the family. Being the largest house on campus this feeling is vital. Being a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon is inscribed in our motto: Pride Through Excellence!

TKE is not a position in the universe, or a transitional phase on the way to something better. TKE is a state of mind. A way of looking at the world without judging things or people on any merits but their own. TKE doesn't stand for wealth, rank, position, or honor. TKE stands for men united in an effort to become the best persons they possibly can. TKE's are athletes, nerds, wonks, preppies, and normal joes. TKE's are the guy next door and the guy on the TKE is an organization that allows men to associate together in a group that is strong enough to support members through hard times and relaxed enough to allow for individuality. At TKE, we realize each person is first an individual with personal needs, desires, and goals. TKE doesn't create men, we merely help them develop.

Seventy-nine years ago, four men decided to do something significant! Today you have that same opportunity . . . the chance to start your own fraternity.

The opportunity to be a "founding father" is unique. It translates into two words, responsibility and work. From the first day you will hold a leadership role within the chapter. You'll also help to develop programming, recruit other men, and become more involved on campus.

Fun? You bet it is! After all, all work and no play would make Jack a dull boy. There will be intramurals, parties, visits to other Phi Tau chapters, and who knows what else.

OSU running back, Donald Beavers, rejoices in the locker room after a surprising win against Wyoming. Beavers had an 89-yard punt return to put OSU on top. RIGHT Number 33, Tony Green, and number 43, Donald Beavers with a "high-five" after a win against Wyoming.

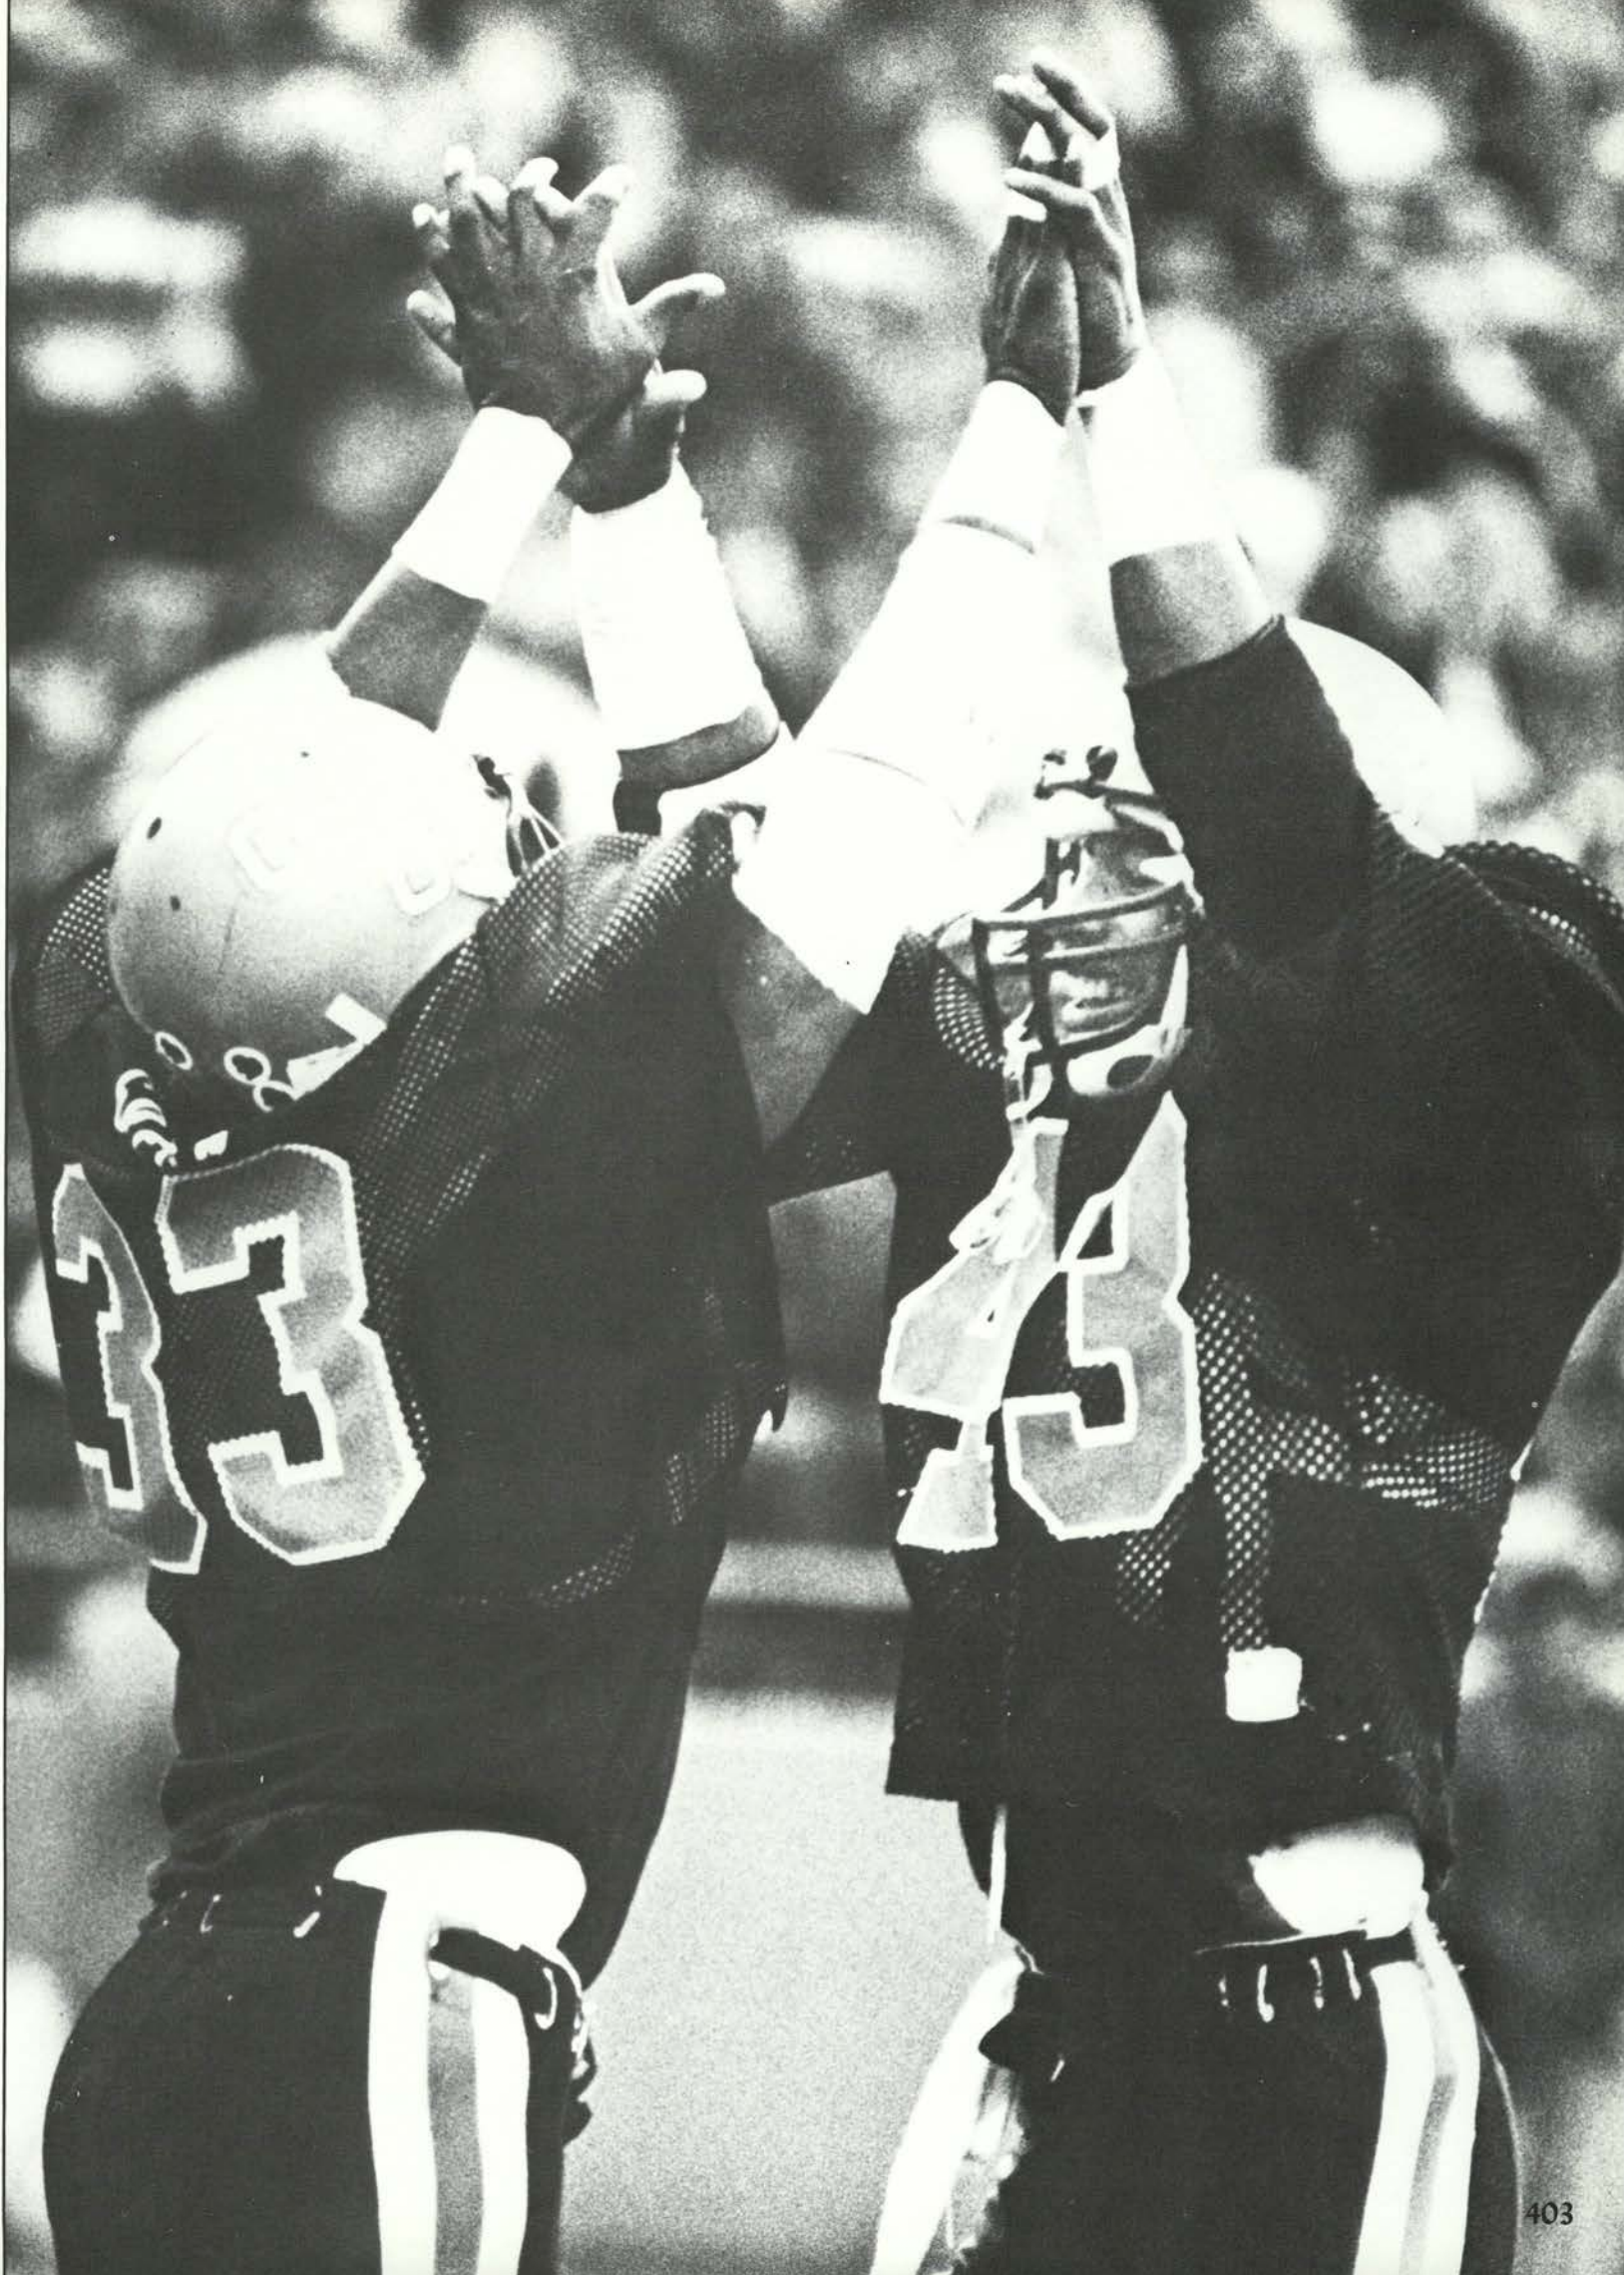

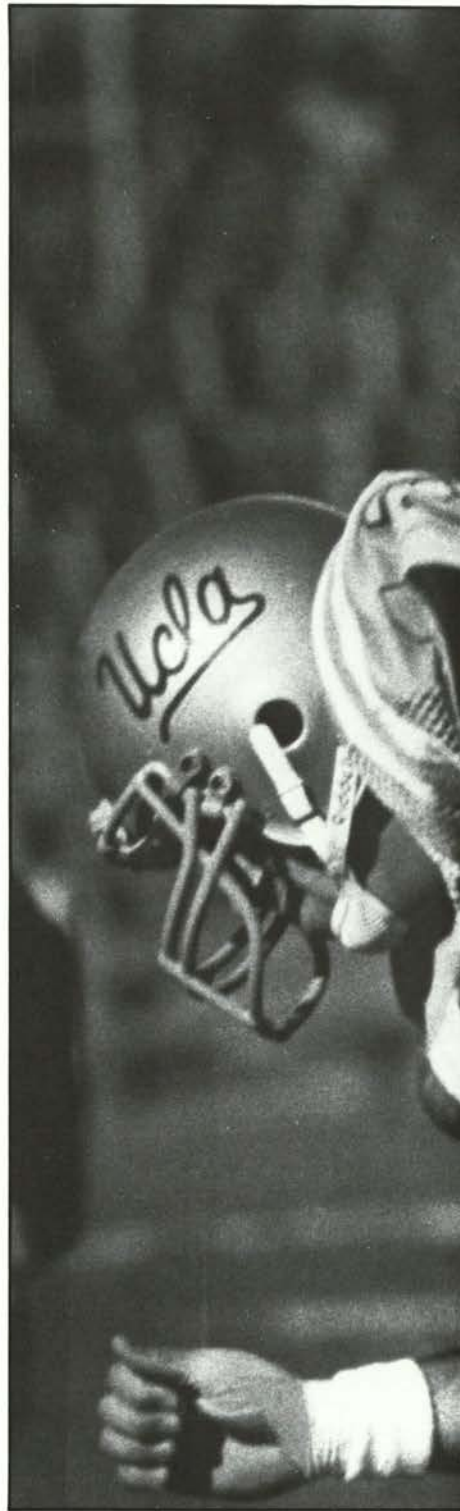

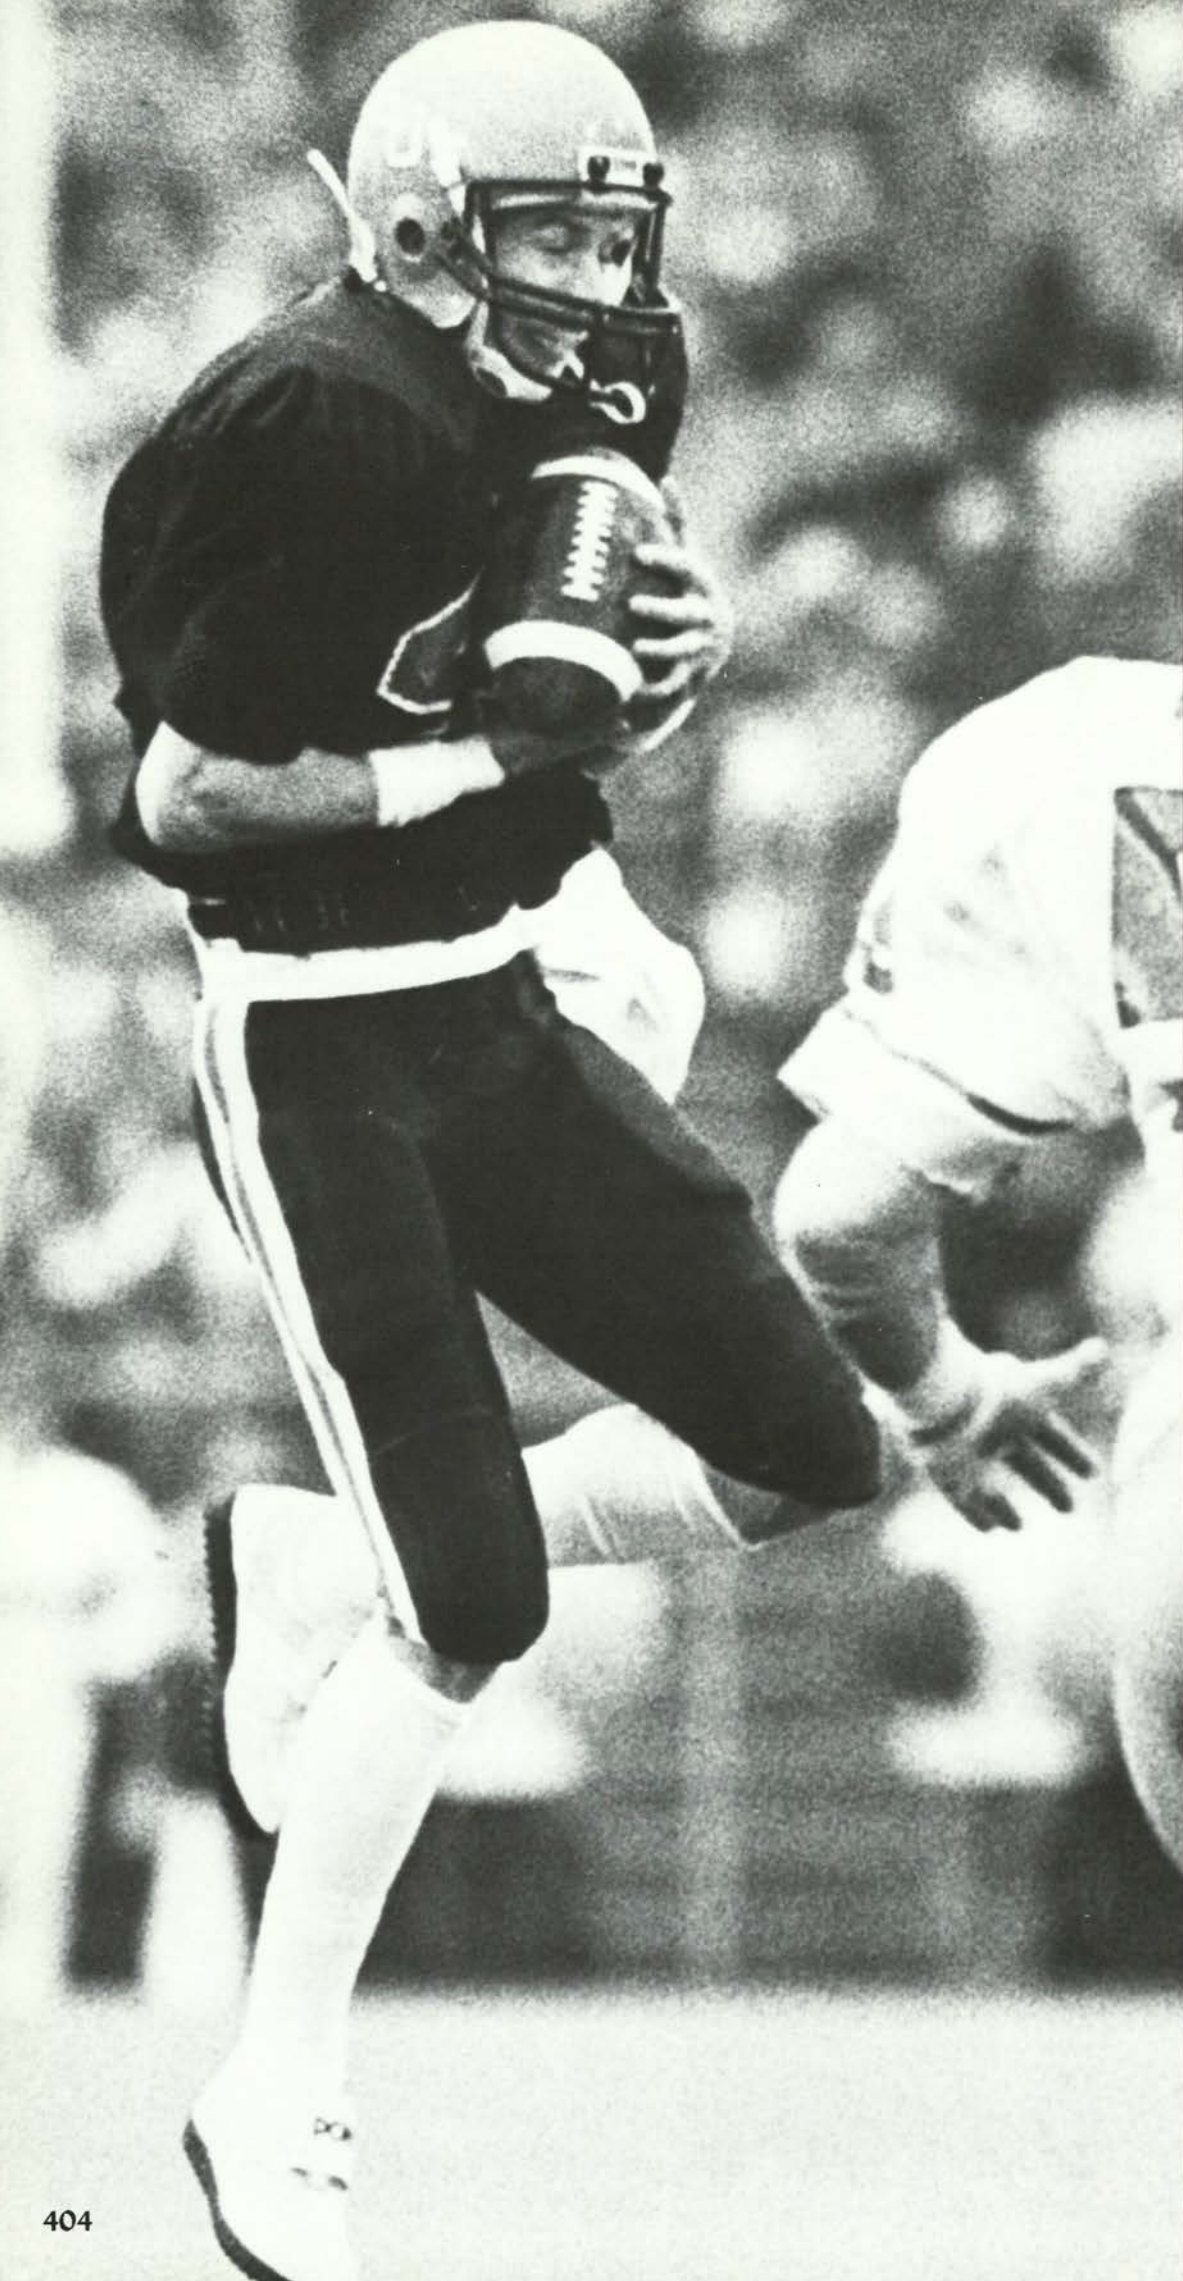

Beaver football coach, Joe Avezzano had high hopes of this — his last season — being a victorious one. Said senior wide receiver, Claude Dixon, "The talent's there. The wins have to come." These were the thoughts of several team members going into the '84 season. Yes, Avezzano certainly had the talent. The roster included Pac-10 receiving title holder, Reggie Bynum.

Bynum had 51 receptions during the season, exceeded only by OSU's Vern Burke, with 69 in 1962, and Steve Coury, with 66 catches in 1979. "All-Pac-10," Kenny Taylor contributed eight pass interceptions during the season to rank eighth on the Beaver's career list. Jim Nielson also made a fine showing late in the season with an unforgettable 54 yard kick in the civil war game. It ranked as the third longest field goal in OSU history.

So, the talent was there, but the wins just didn't come. The Beaver's 2-9-0 record showed no improvement over last year's 2-8-1 record, as Avezzano had hoped it would. Thus, Joe Avezzano's job was once again on the line. This time, though, President MacVicar wasn't here to give him one more chance. OSU's new president, John Byrne, wanted "to make some changes around here," and the football program was no exception. Hence, OSU football fans looked with optimism toward a new coach, new talent, and hopefully a refreshing success story in '85.

Defensive end, Charles Naone, applies relentless defensive pressure as he tackles his Bruin opponent.

IRA GABRIEL

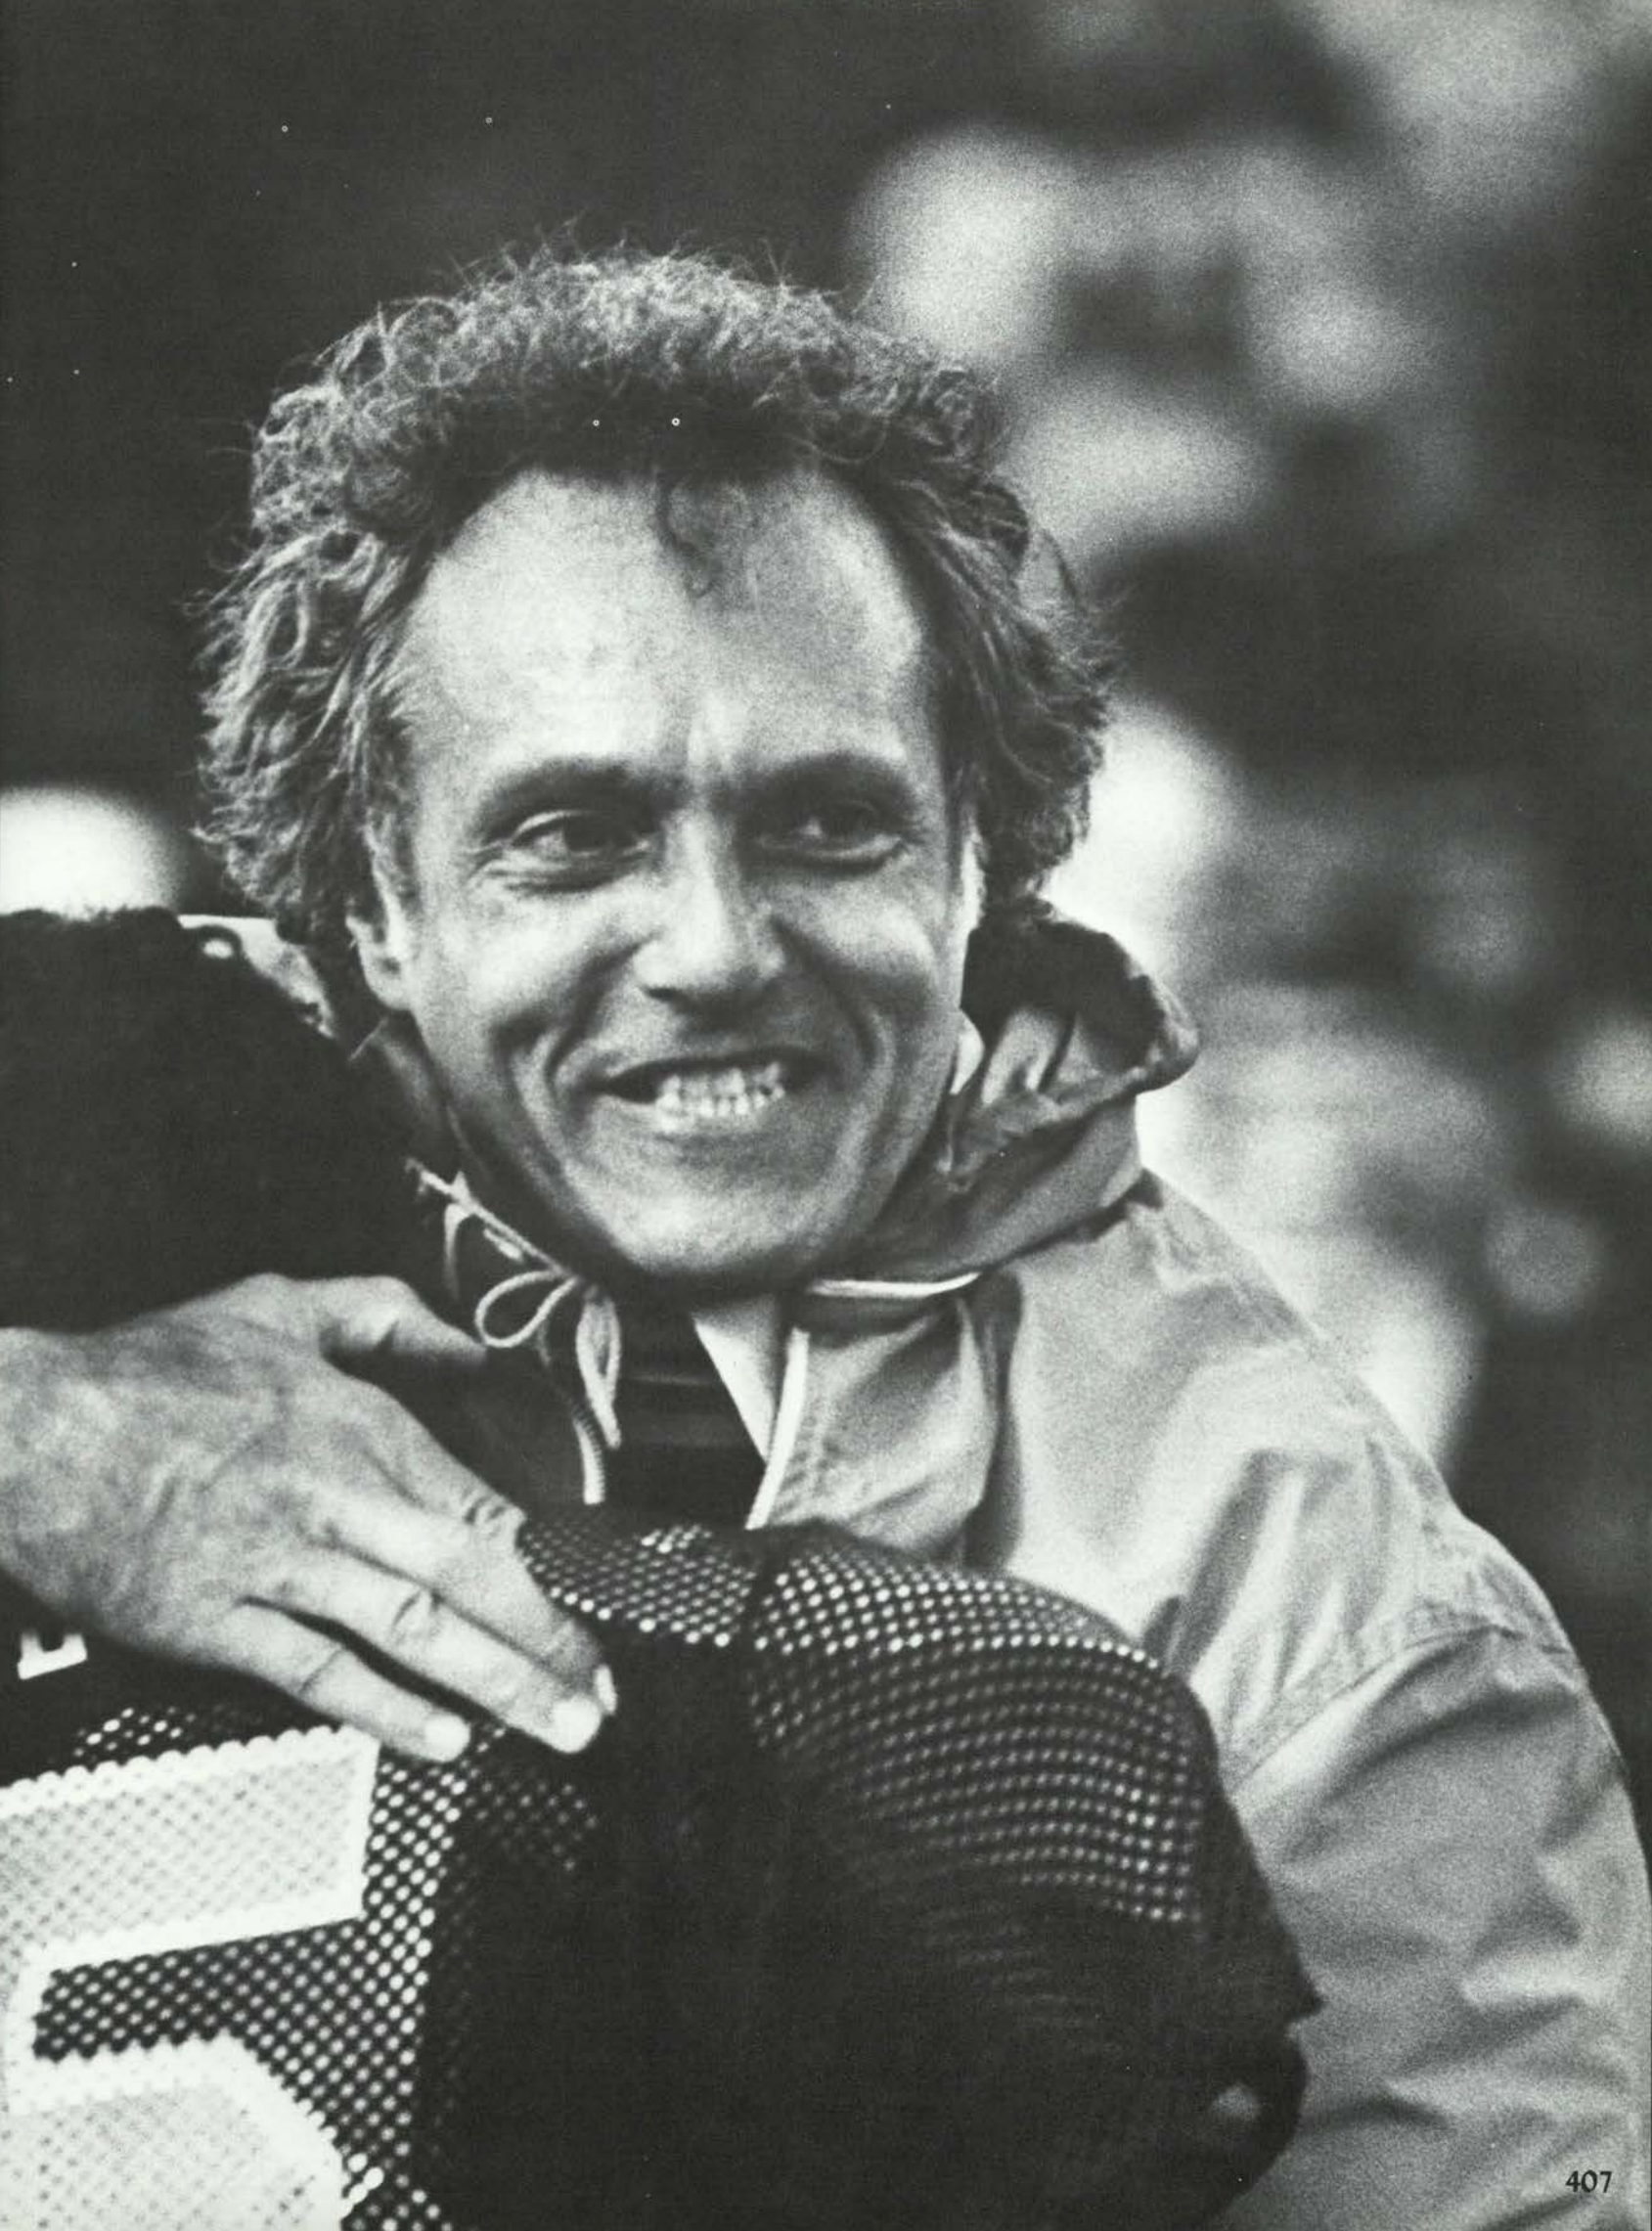

Joe Avezzano

He was hired five years ago in hope of pulling up the Beaver football team hampered by a streak of losses under the coaching of Craig Fertig. Joe Avezzano knew there was a big challenge awaiting him when he was appointed head football coach. He still maintained that "... you walk before you run. I believe Oregon State will become a winner in time."

Though he had no head coaching experience, Avezzano had worked under the great Johny Majors for eleven years. He served as offensive coordinator under Majors, following him to Iowa State, University of Pittsburg, and University of Tennessee. His last year at University of Pittsburg, while serving as offensive coordinator as well as line coach, Avezzano helped lead the team to the Sugar Bowl championship. Throughout his career Avezzano was involved in seven bowl games.

Avezzano's coaching career at OSU was not so successful, winning only six games in five years. After numerous 'second chances', OSU's new president, John Byrne, finally sent Joe packing. Joe was hired as an offensive line coach at Texas A&M. Meanwhile, the Beaver football program received a new hope, Coach David Kragthorpe.

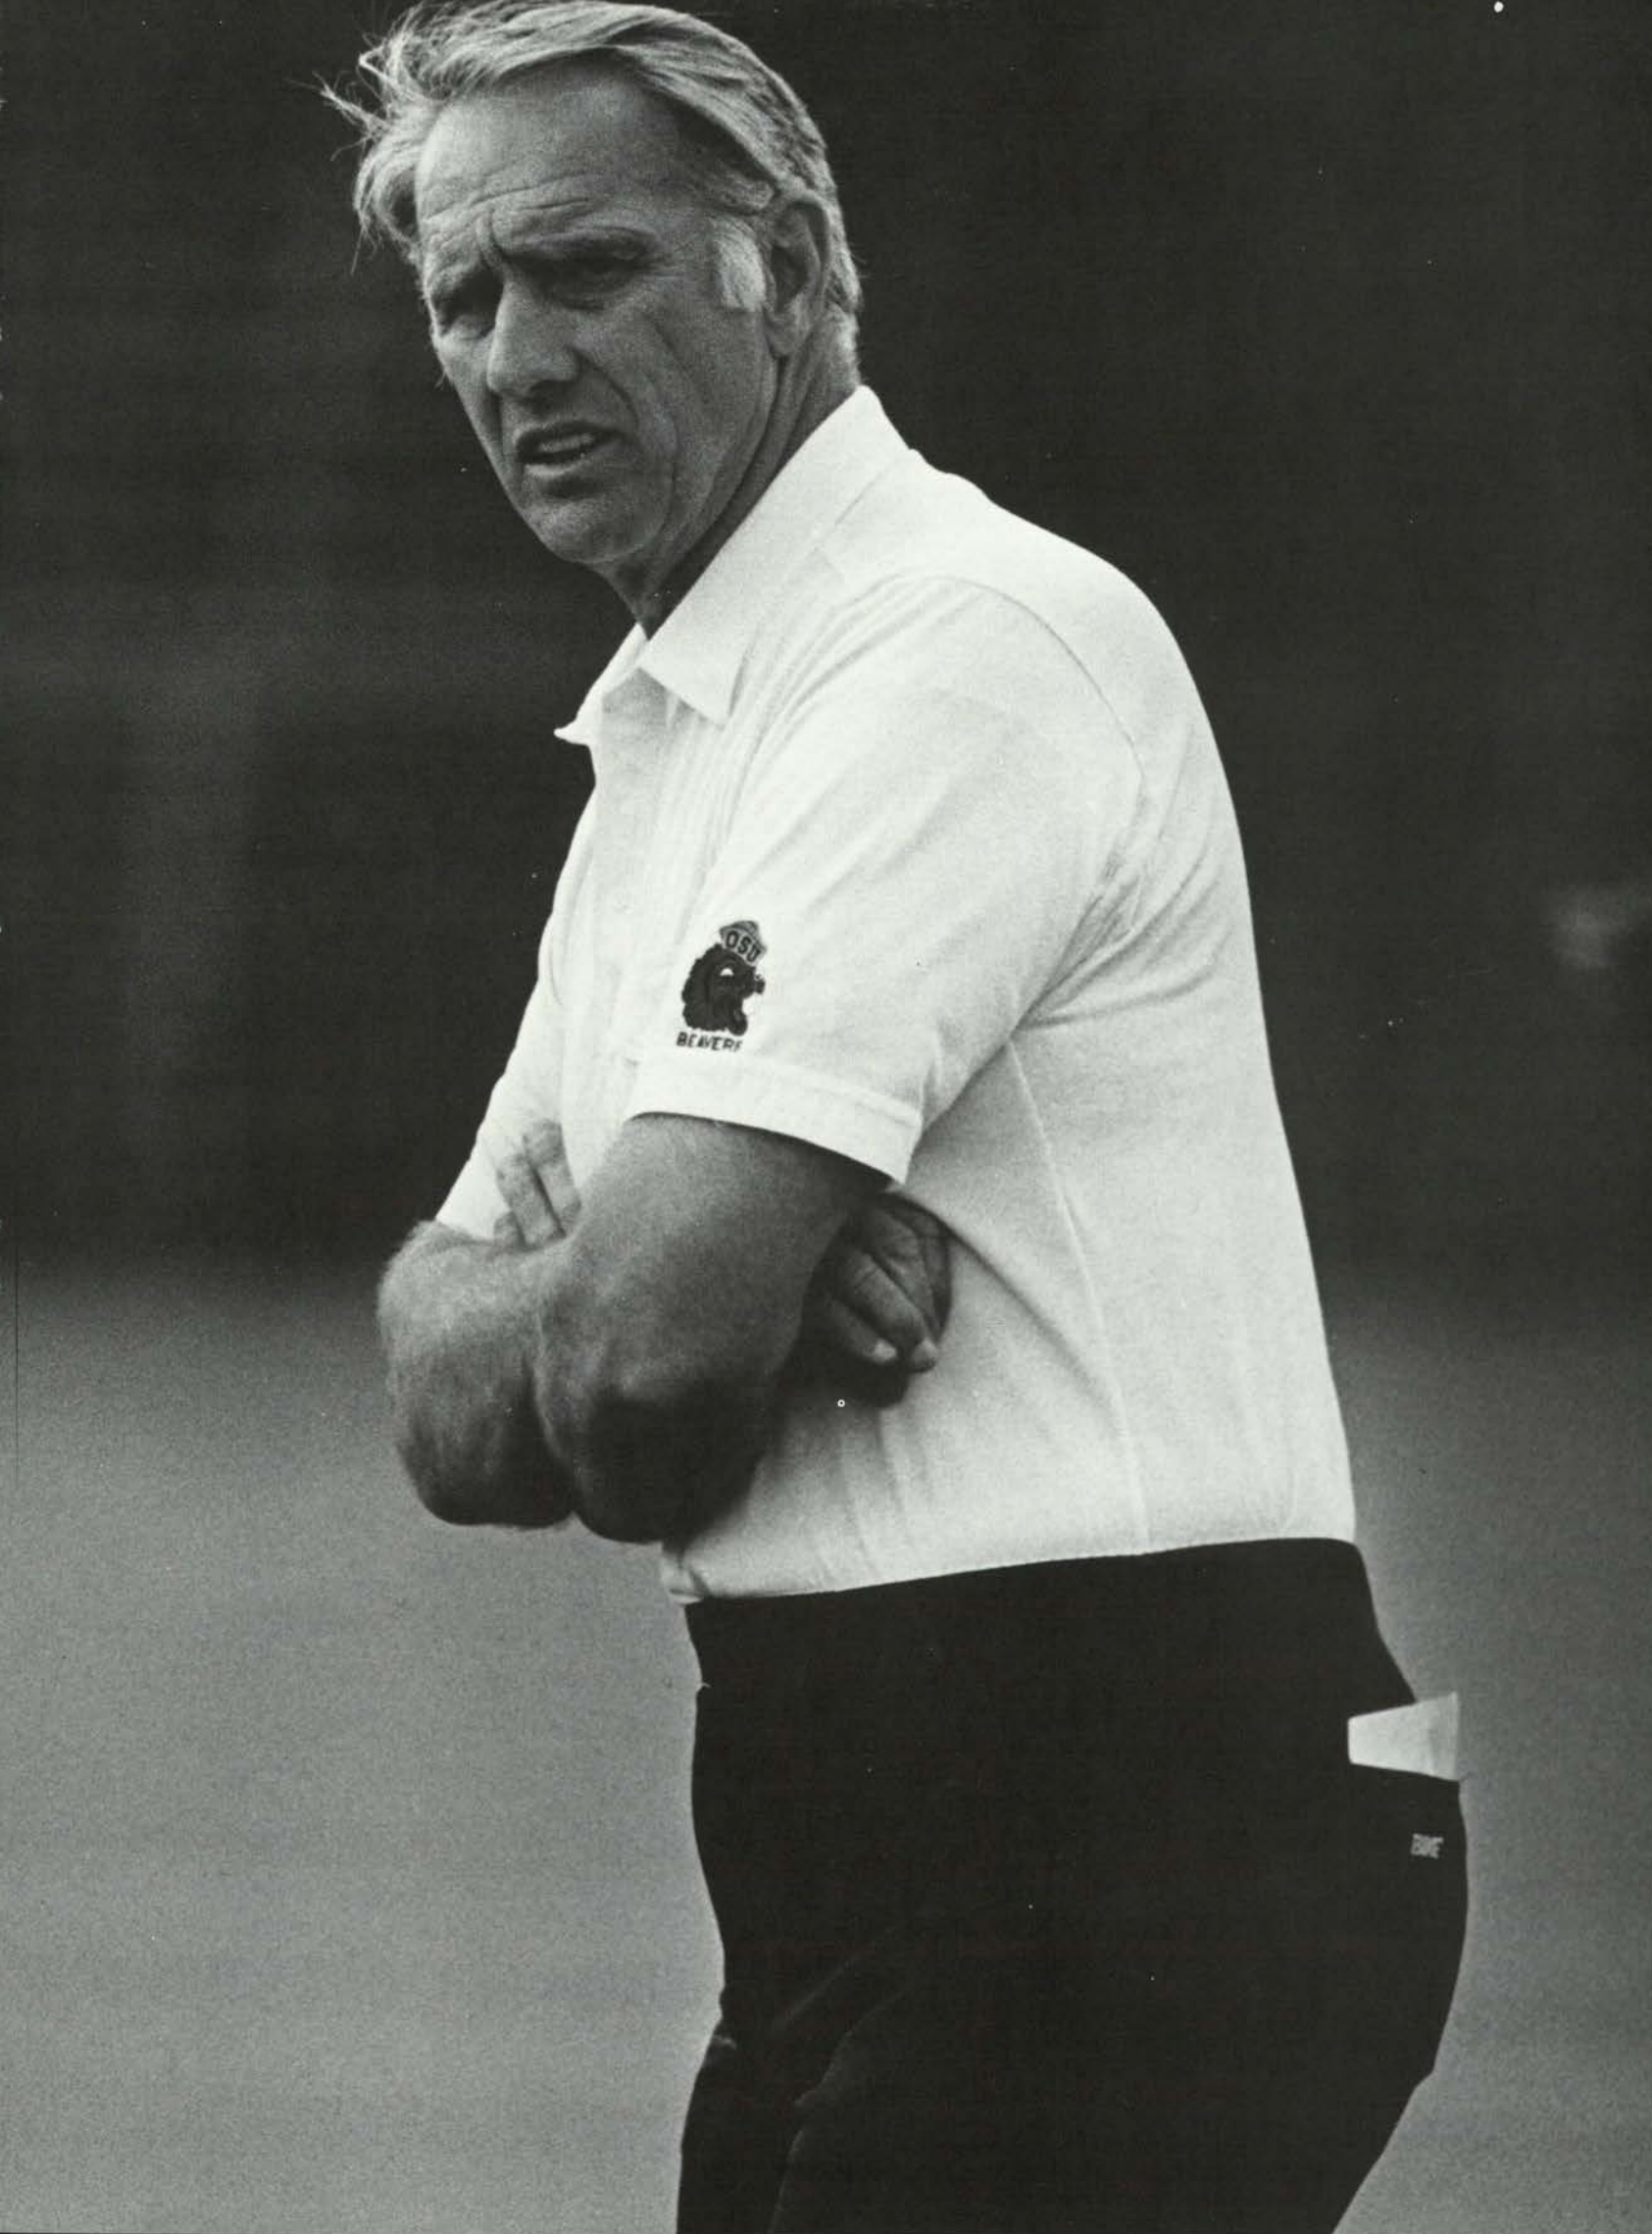

Dave Kragthorpe

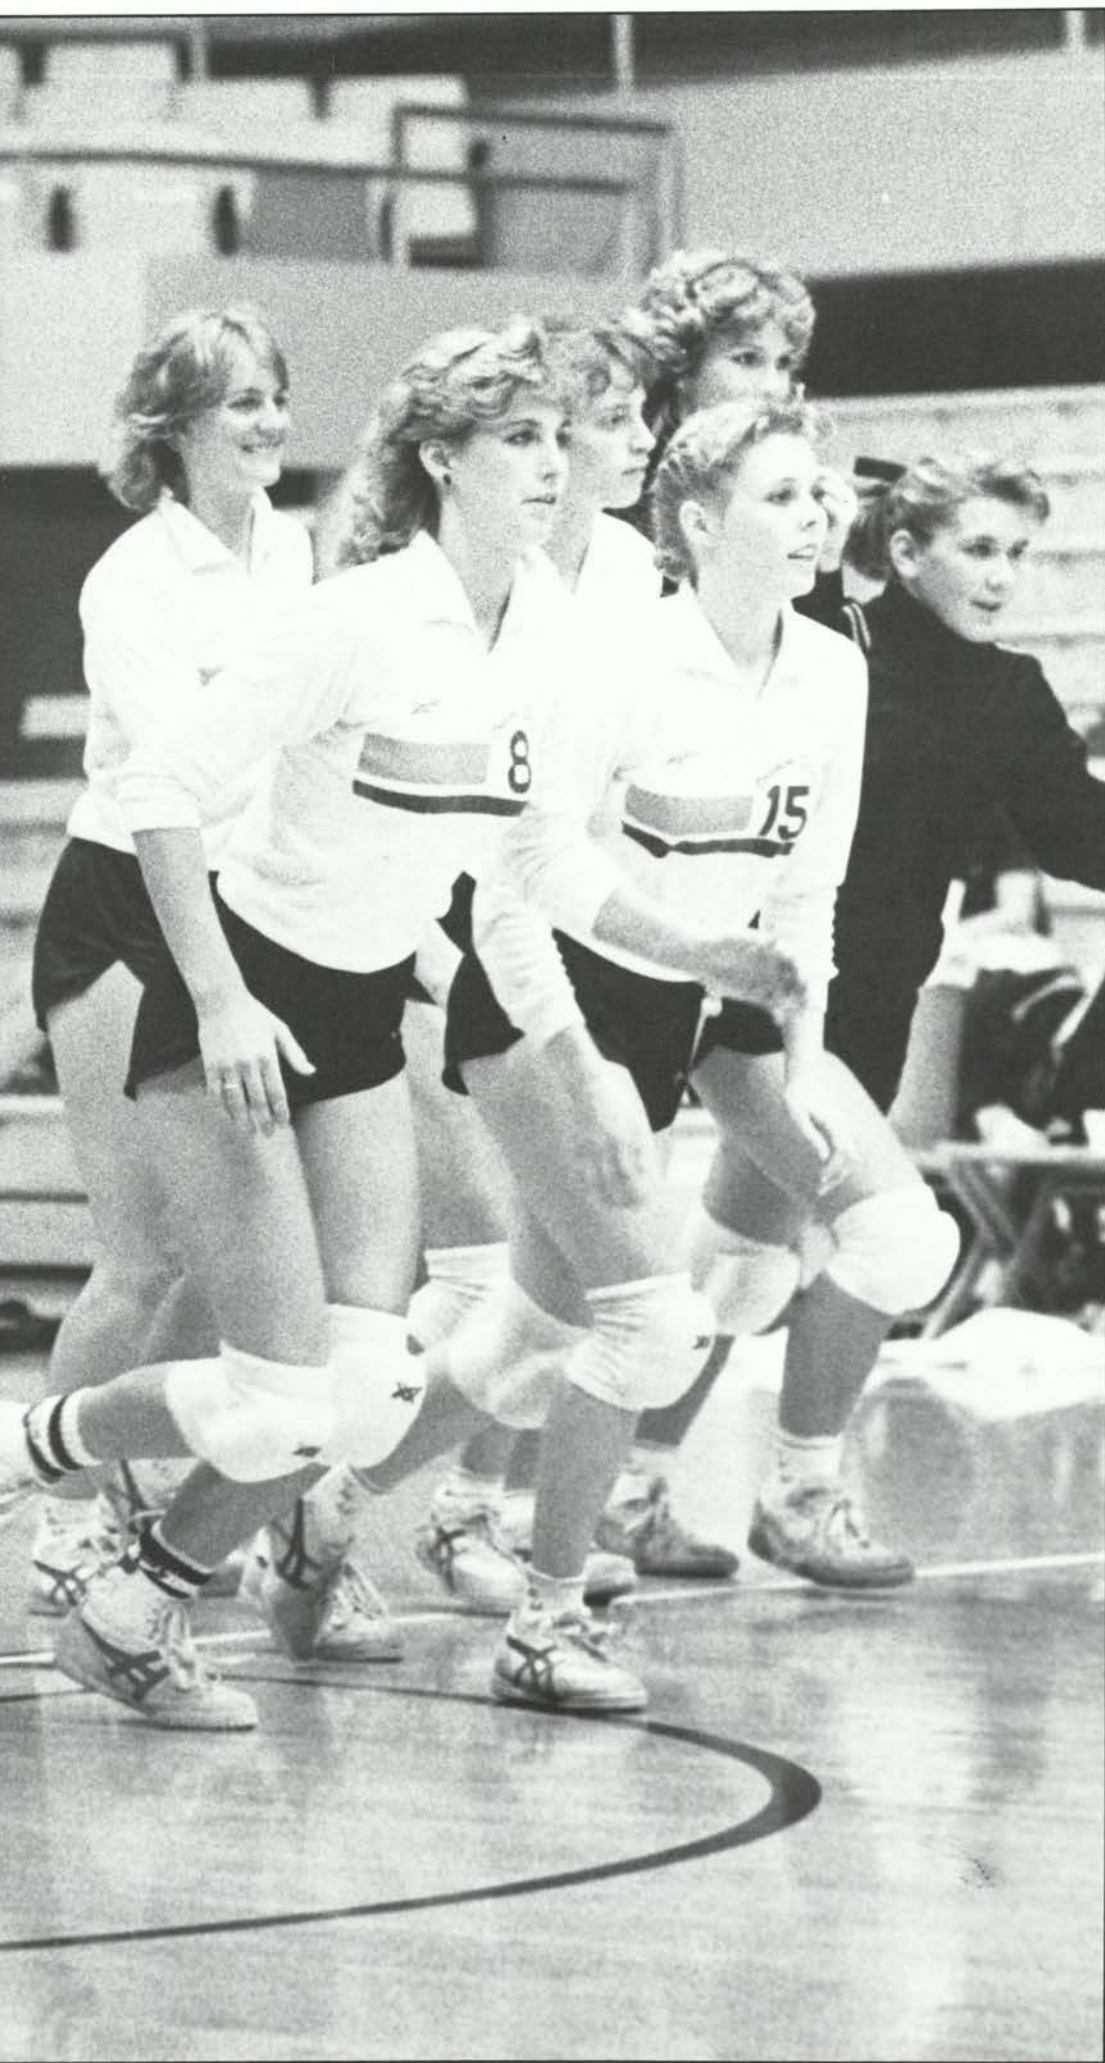

When Joe Avezzano took over the reigns of a losing football program at Oregon State in 1981, Dave Kragthorpe was doing the exact same thing at Idaho State University. The promises were the same by both men at both schools, but the outcomes were definitely different. Idaho State now has a winning program with six games won that first year under Kragthorpe. Why then did he give up coaching for an Athletic Director position at Utah State? There was a "natural move" planned at Idaho State to eventually become A.D. there, but when he was offered the job at his alma mater, Utah State, he decided that maybe it was time to make the switch. After 18 months, however, that coaching itch was too strong, and the move to OSU was made.

Coaching has been a life long dream for Dave Kragthorpe. He graduated from Utah State and became an assistant coach at the University of Montana and then South Dakota State where he was made head coach after his second year. Kragthorpe then moved to BYU as assistant coach where he helped develop the passing offense he plans to bring to OSU. He went to Idaho State as head coach and then Utah State as Athletic Director, and now he's here. Kragthorpe doesn't promise any miracles but says, "there's no place to go but up." He places a lot of emphasis on the players already on the team saying, "the nucleus is here, and there is no reason we can't be as competitive as the next guy."

NET EFFECTS

STEVE SHIELDS

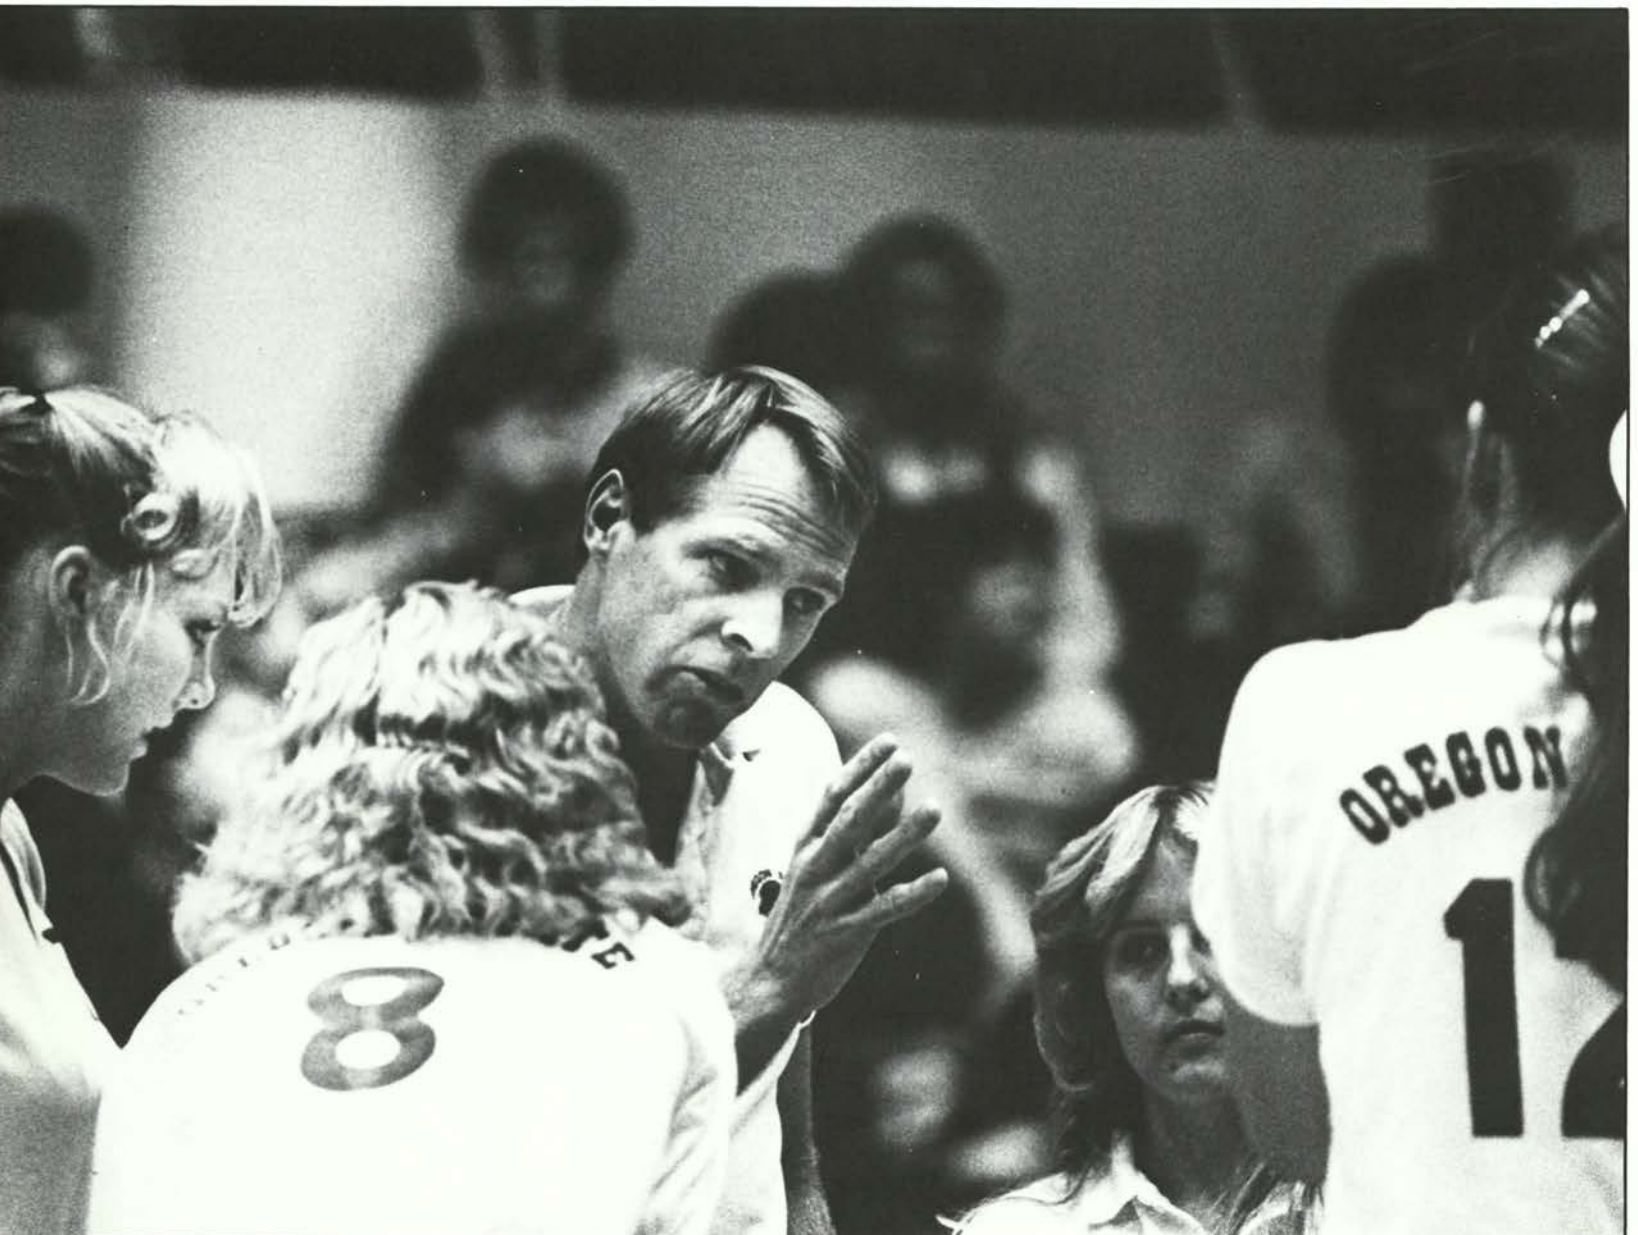

In a season with many highlights, one thing shone above others for the 1984 women's volleyball players: coming together as a team. Coach Iams and the team began their season with high expectations, which lead to impressive victories at the Boise Invitational Tournament. The OSU spikers then went on to win the OSU Intercollegiate Tournament, in which they defeated Eastern Washington, San Francisco State, Boise State, Idaho State, University of Nevada at Reno, and Idaho State with a powerful and uncompromising pursuit of first place. As their season progressed, the OSU women traveled to Hawaii to play the powerful University of Hawaii.

Meeting their own high expectations was a difficult, if not impossible task, but the OSU women "never gave up", according to Coach Iams. With their team spirit, hard work, and die-hard attitude, the Beaver women posted a winning season (6-5 in conference play). With this record, the team gained a berth in the Norpac Championship Tournament. Along with this championship berth, fourth-year team member, Shari Jamison, was selected to the Norpac Conference 2nd place team and Merri Walters was selected by coaches to the All-Freshmen Team.

For Coach Jim Iams, the team accomplished a great deal. He knew their expectations were high, but he felt that, "They were convinced they could win every time they took the court." Despite early losses in championship play, the girls still felt their season was a winning one. As Shari Jamison phrased it, "The most important thing that came out of our season was, we came together in the end and played as a team."

UNITY AND INSPIRATION
MOMENTUM TO

A major strength for the Cross Country team came through a bond of unity and inspiration. Though lacking in numbers, which was needed for depth, the small size of the group encouraged a closeness and greater desire to perform well among the teammates. Excitement and a real love for running helped keep the teams' spirit and momentum growing throughout the season.

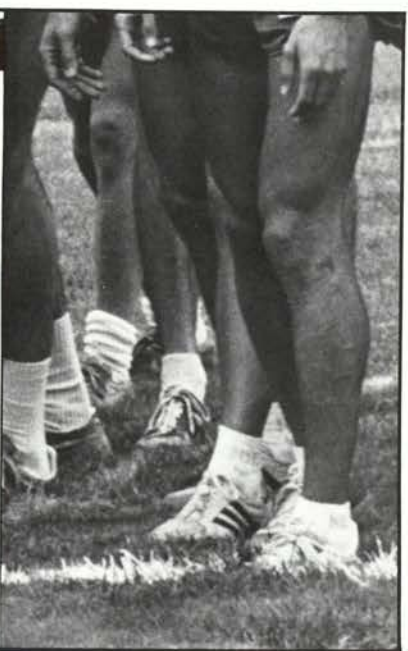

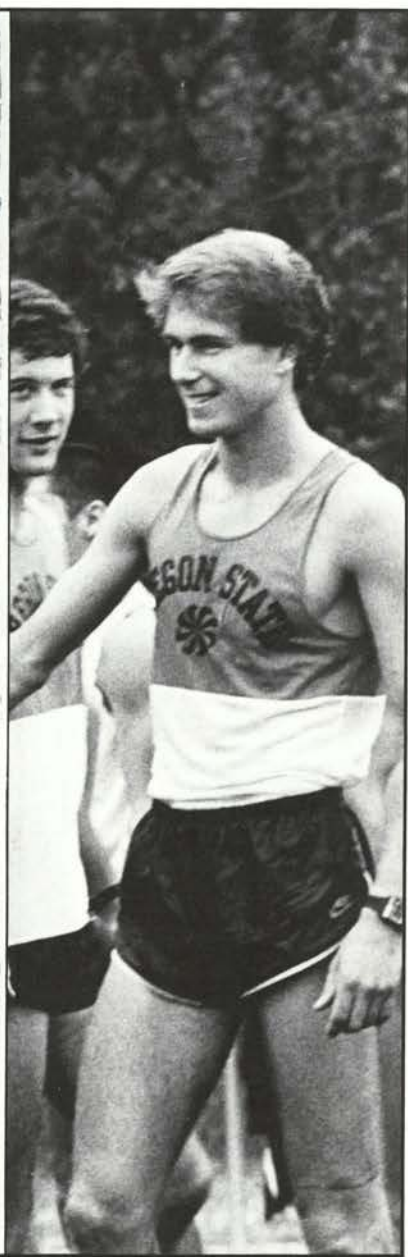

The mens' team started training camp with the scare of not having enough runners to field a team. With only three returnees, Coach Gary Sievers had to recruit from the track team to get the strength he needed. Said womens' team member, Peggy Murri, "The guys' team did really well. It was hard for the guys that usually run 800's to switch to the six milers and push with that kind of intensity." It was an inspiration to the womens' team to see the men try so hard. Much of the weight of the seasons' performance fell into senior Pete Warners' shoes. Warner was a strong leader for the team, placing 47th in the District 8 Championships. That achievement, plus strong performances from junior John Warinner and sophomore Tom Diegal, led the mens' team to 10th, 9th, and 5th place finishes during the season.

UNITY AND INSPIRATION...

For the women's team, "excellent" was the best description of the season. As the season progressed, the runners grew very close, which served to unify and inspire the entire team. Senior Kathy Knowlton had her best season ever, beating all of her last year's times by at least one minute. Placing 19th in the District-8 Championships, she came within one second of qualifying for Nationals. "Knowlton was a real inspiration to work with and you could really tell she was giving it her all," said Murri. Murri's goal for the season was to be more consistent and she felt she had accomplished that goal this year.

The team, as a whole, had a very good season. An upcoming challenge for Coach Sievers, however, will be to recruit young runners for OSU. Many good runners are lost to UofO, but with the attitude and unity of the current runners, this challenge may become an easy one to master.

After improving her times Kathy Knowlton sighs with relief.

UNITY AND DEDICATION...

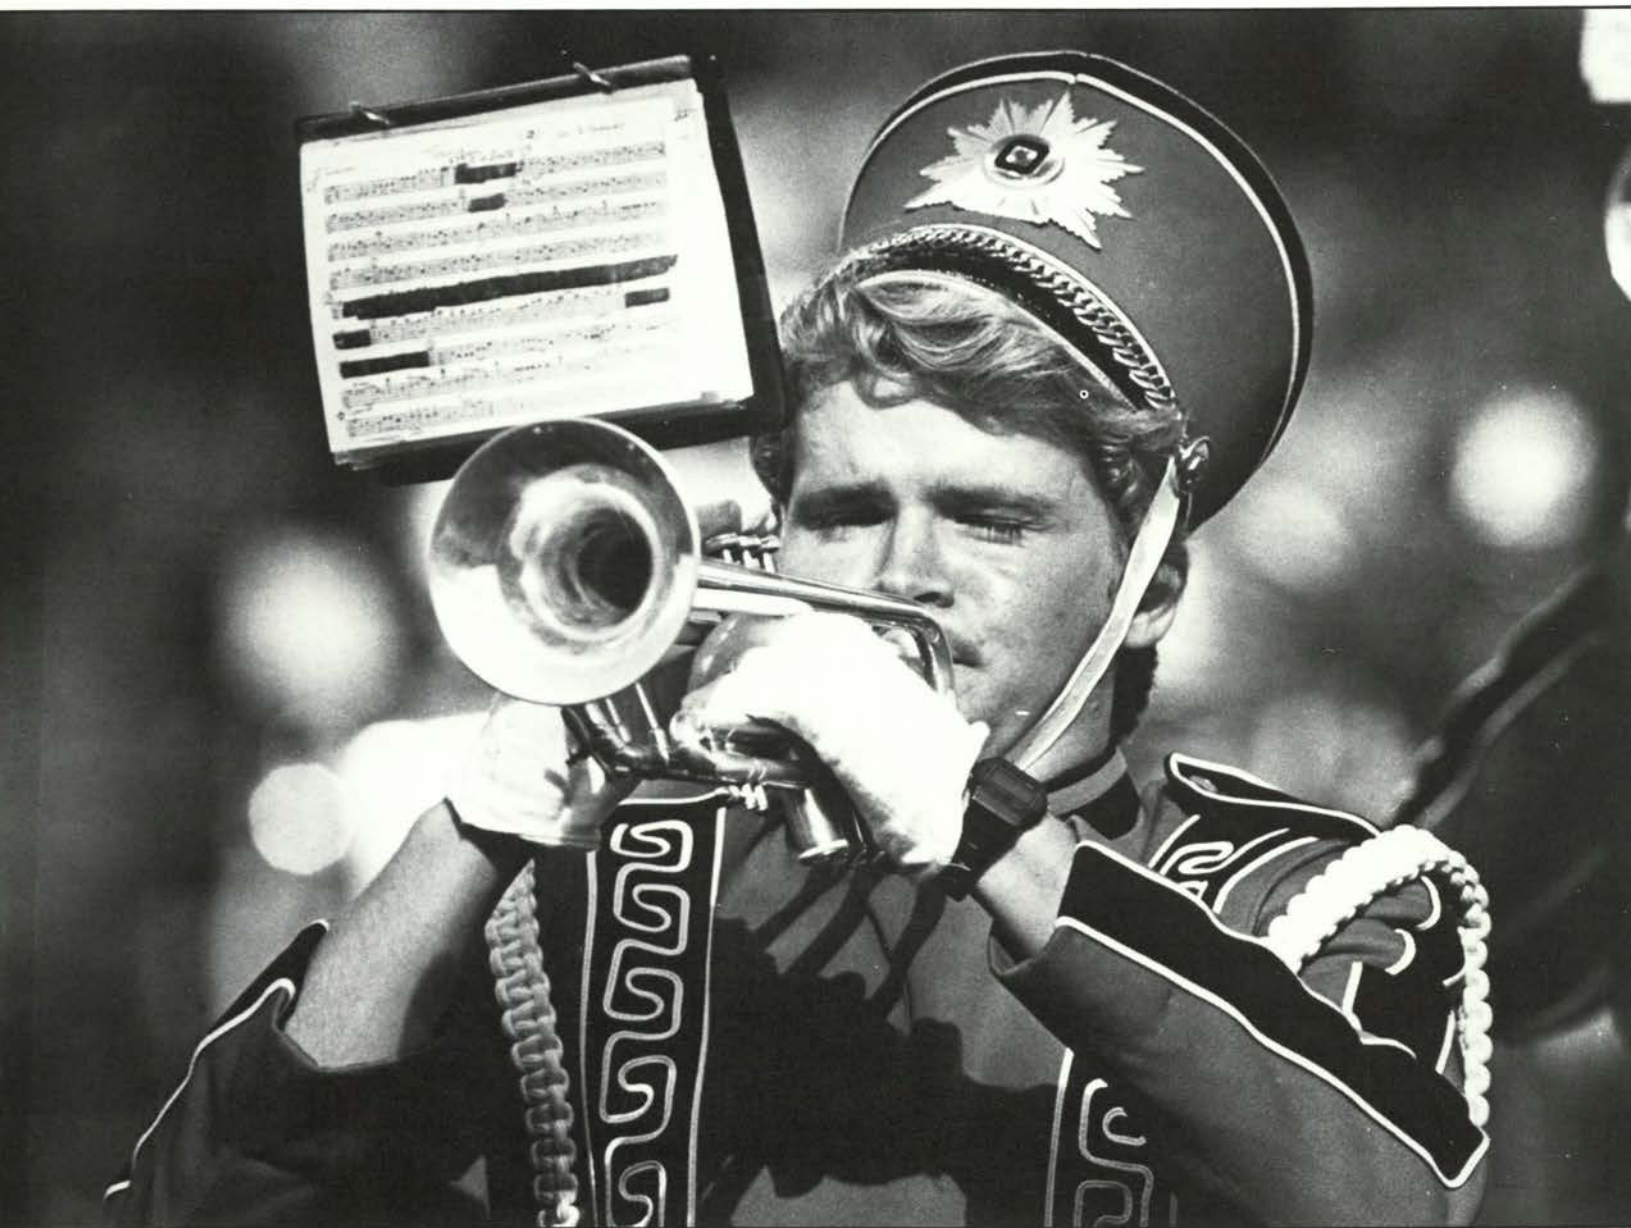

This year's Marching Band had a new leader with a new and upbeat style. Assistant Director Mark Dickey took over Jim Douglass' position in Marching Band this season with enthusiasm and positive reinforcement. "We are trying to combine the old with the new, keep updated with our moves and music. It's a real challenge to be moving and playing at the same time and this year's Marching Band also had to switch from its traditional high step to core style marching," said Dickey. Dickey had three goals in mind for the Marching Band this year: first, show entertainment; second, to present fine music; and third, to move well on the field. He stressed these points and plans to follow them in the future. Dickey led his band through a time of 'financial hardship'. "I am uncertain about the funding but it won't hamper the quality or the enthusiasm I put into Marching Band," Dickey said.

Dickey's students really enjoyed his new fresh style and the way in which he got them to work. "This year we really had to work, think and perform," said sophomore, Chris Farley, Marching Band member. "This year was fun. We slaved through the rain and mud and were rewarded with the trip to California, (which was a blast)! It was the highlight of the season to get a chance to play in the Rose Bowl and to get together with the UCLA Marching Band," Farley said.

Standing in the mud and having rain come down on her head, sophomore, Lisa Marr remembers back to the drill team season as one of both hard work and fun. Under the leadership of Sharon Frid, the drill team had an exciting season in which they became closer. With many new freshmen, the drill team learned what hard work and dedication were all about. "Having to put a show together in two weeks is hard work, and getting everyone to learn it is really hard," said Marr.

All in all, it was a great transition period for the Marching Band and Drill Team. Funding looks hopeful for both groups in the near future.

TOUGH SEASON PROVES

Oregon States' men's basketball team made it through one of the toughest Pac-10 seasons in recent years to claim a third place tie with Arizona and UCLA. USC finished first with Washington second.

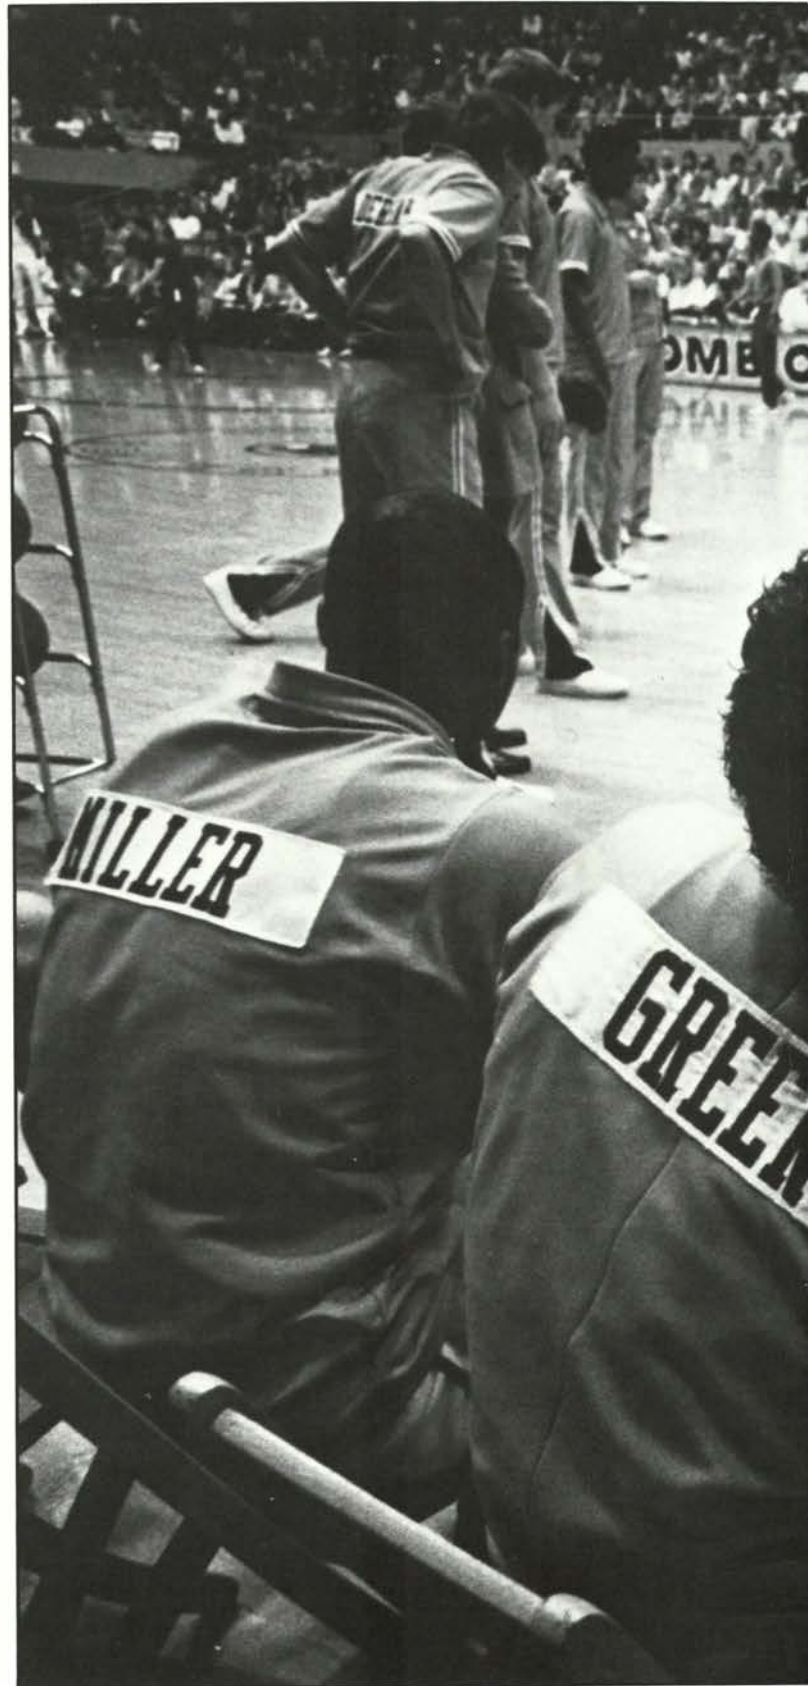

OSU's season was a frustrating one, but one full of pressure and excitement. The Beavers finished the season with a 22-8 record and gained a berth in the NCAA Tournament. OSU was put in the southeastern bracket where they were defeated by Notre Dame in the first game 79-70. It was the Beavers thirteenth trip to NCAA post-season play and they hold a 13-15 record.

OSU set many school records this year including finishing with a 20+ win season for the sixth year in a row. The Beavers also surpassed previous records with only four turnovers in one game against both the University of Portland and California. They also broke the record for the most steals in one game with 27 against Hawaii-Loa, and most free throws attempted in one game, 30/34 against Boise State.

The Beavers won 35 of their last 46 games with four losses at home. Three of those losses were to Pac-10 teams, which is the most Pac-10 losses at home since Miller's first season in 1970-71. Although OSU didn't finish ranked in any major poll, they were as high as 8th on UPI and 10th on AP at one point during the year. OSU's shooting was consistent throughout the year except for games against U of W and California. The Beavers were praised nationally for their strength on defense. They were able to hold their opponents to below .500 in shooting.

OSU Beaver basketball success can be attributed to the work of the whole team. Certain figures, however, made it into the record books with their efforts. Darryl Flowers moved into 7th place on OSU's all-time assists list. Coach Ralph Miller became the 9th winningest of all-time NCAA coaches with 600 wins, and he needs only 11 more to move into 8th place. Steve Woodside became the 21st all-time scoring leader with 952 points. Top honors, however, have to go to the lone senior A.C. Green. A.C. became the third leading scorer with 1,668 points. He moved into second place with 868 career rebounds, and he lead the Pac-10 this year in both areas. A.C. Green was also a unanimous pick for the All Pac-10 Team for the second year in a row.

THE MOTIVATING FORCE

Backed by pride and enthusiasm, the 1984-85 Oregon State Varsity Rally squad chalked up a season full of accomplishments and excitement. The talented Black squad consists of Gifford Beuker, Sam Damm, Debra Green, Rhonda Grudier, Randy Lewis, Susan Maio, Clay Miller, Janelle Shields, Andy Spendlove, and Kim Topper. The Black squad, gets extra pep from the Orange squad, whose members are: Jill Layport, Sarah Major, Kris Miller, Darla Patterson, Joe Shrou, Katy Wallin, and Benny Beaver.

This large group has worked together to build a strong Oregon State Rally program. Work is exactly what they did too! Through several different fundraisers, the rally squad raised the funds to purchase their outfits and supplement the cost of their travel expenses. The Squad hosted several Alumni banquets in which funds were donated. Prior to the Civil War games, the squad sold "Duck Buster" T-shirts and "Beaver Fans".

Motivation is what makes the OSU squad so hard-working. Their hard work pays off when they are able to support the Beavers at home and on "road trips" successfully. The squad ventures to University of Washington, Washington State University, University of California at Berkeley, Stanford University, and the University of Oregon to back the Beavers and keep that OSU spirit going.

When asked why the rally squad puts in so many practice hours and time for fund raising, squad member, Susan Maio, gave several reasons.

"We have a lot of fun, along with the work, we get a chance to travel with the OSU teams, and we get an opportunity to meet lots of OSU alumni."

Thus, the force that motivates, also is motivated by all the rewards and excitement the OSU seasons have to offer.

Swimmers, Suzie Graham and Leslie Wallace, demonstrate the sparkle of their season.

The season was a thriller for the OSU women's swimming and diving teams. It started out for the Beavs with the introduction of a new coach, Laura Baumhofer. Coach Baumhofer entered the position with a lot of expectations for her teams. Many of them were met, as the Beavers did well in Norpac season and championship competition. The great strength of the teams came from the six seniors, but the younger members also excelled this season.

The OSU women ended their season proudly by obtaining season bests in 45 of 48 swims during their meet in Seattle. Following this meet, the swimmers and divers headed to the Norpac Championship meet, in which they placed sixth. The top qualifiers for Oregon State were Leslie Wallace, who placed sixth in the 200-meter backstroke and Sharon DeHaas, who placed fifth in 1-meter diving and fourth in 3-meter diving. This performance by DeHaas qualified her for the NCAA zone National Diving meet.

But the season was not without its mishaps. Early into the season, swimming standout, Patty Eacobacci, sustained a back injury which kept her out of competition for the remainder of the meets. Eacobacci plans to be back in full force next season.

The supreme example of dedication, the Beaver swimmers and divers, practiced many long hours. Six days a week, the women spent four hours in the pool, building themselves into a strong unified team.

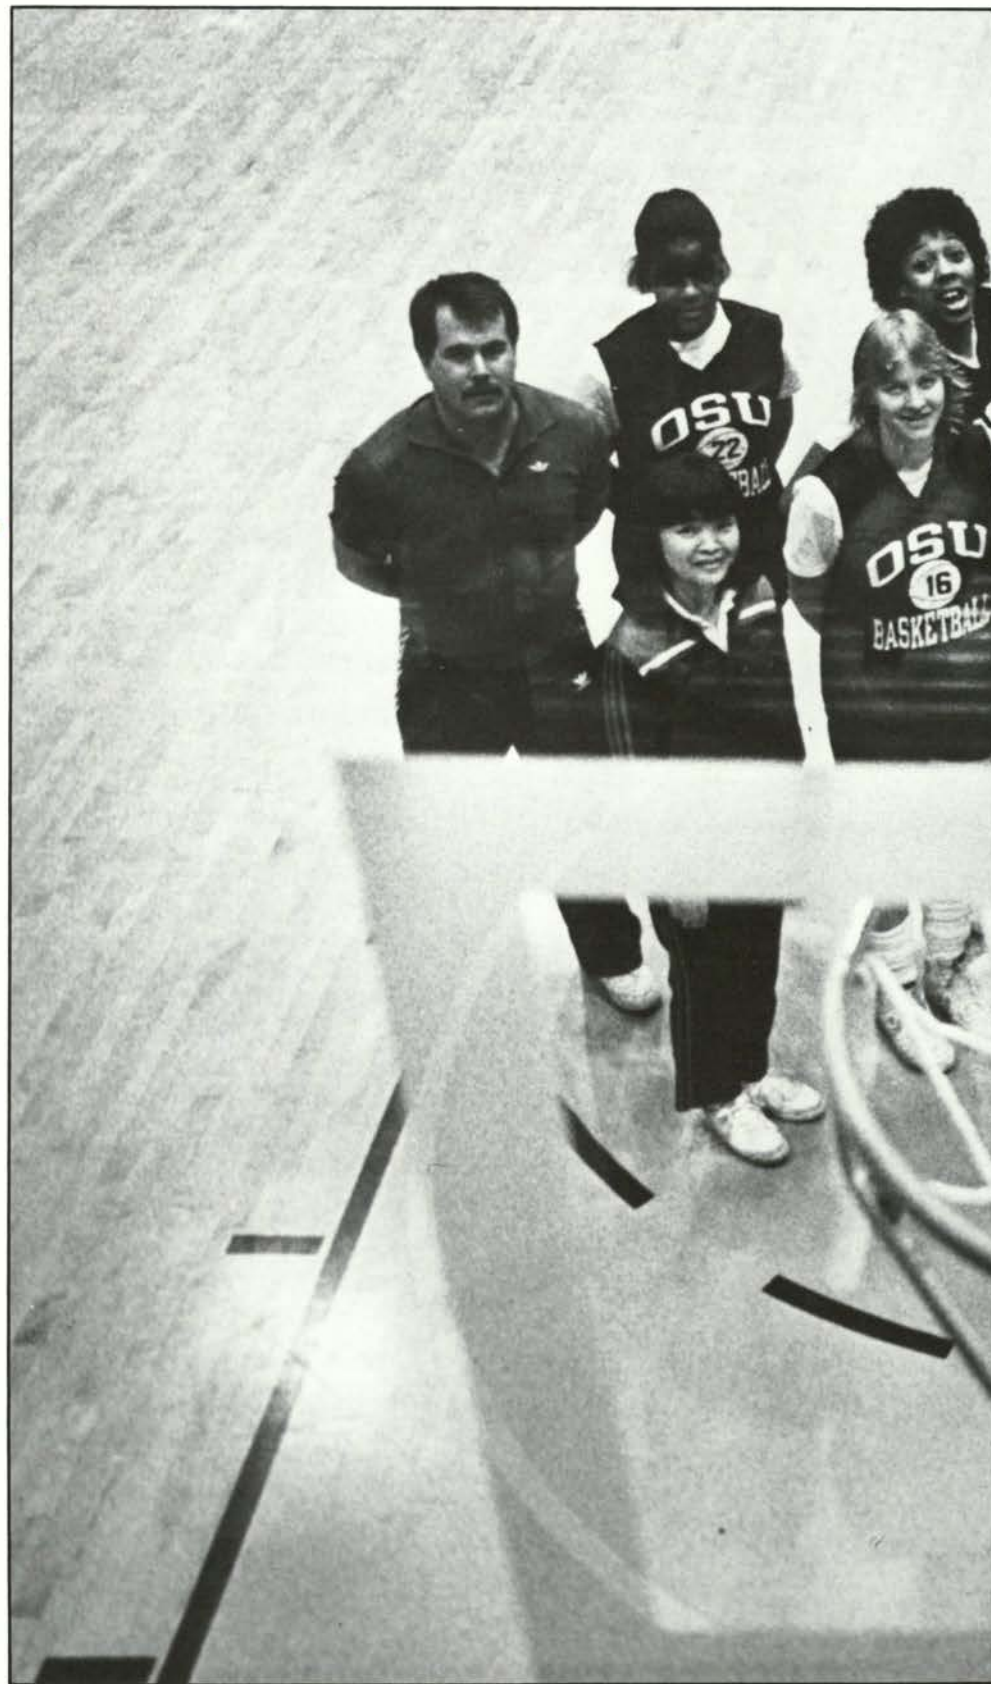

As Eacobacci says, "We became very united and developed a strong sense of cohesion. The season was really a building block year; we worked to grow for the future."

The Oregon State women's basketball team ended the 1984-85 season with a 19-10 record. The 10 losses proved to be a record for Coach Aka Hill's career at OSU. Hill's team also failed to qualify for the NCAA Division I championships, a first in her seven year coaching career at Oregon State. The Beaver women were plagued by injury during the season. Lisa Channel, who was expected to be a key player this season, spent the season on the bench due to injury. Juli Coleman also began the season with a knee injury, but came back to complete one of the most successful seasons in OSU history.

Senior guard Juli Coleman, averaged 23.9 points per game this season. She also sported an outstanding 80 percent free throw percentage. Coleman led the NorPac Conference in points per game and was a first team, all-league selection. She was named to the NorPac All-Tournament team, the first team All-America squad by Women's Basketball News Service, and was a second team CoSIDA Scholastic All-America pick. She ended her career as the No. two scorer in OSU history with 1,840 points, beaten only by Carol Menkin with 2,243 points.

Both Aka Hill and assistant coach Bucky Gill motivated the team to "keep their goal in sight." Not only was it to win as many games as possible, but to play their best as a team. Said Gill, "... we had one of the tougher schedules in the nation this season." Despite this, the Beavers kept sight of their goal and played well as a team.

The Oregon State gymnasts took potential and formed it into perfection during their very successful 1985 season. Coach Ron Ludwig claimed, "This is my best team ever" and the Beavers performed as "best" as OSU has seen.

Granted with strong-willed rookies, the Beavers matured into a well balanced team, headed by veterans Heidi Anderson, Michelle Gabiola, and Jayne Weinstein. Freshmen standouts Tina Barnes, Debbie Marland, and Carol Schroeder performed like professionals by the end of the season.

The Aloha Gym Fest, Shanico Inn Invitational, and the NorPac Championships provided pedestals for the Beavers to claim victories, as well as all their conference competition meets, except one loss to Utah.

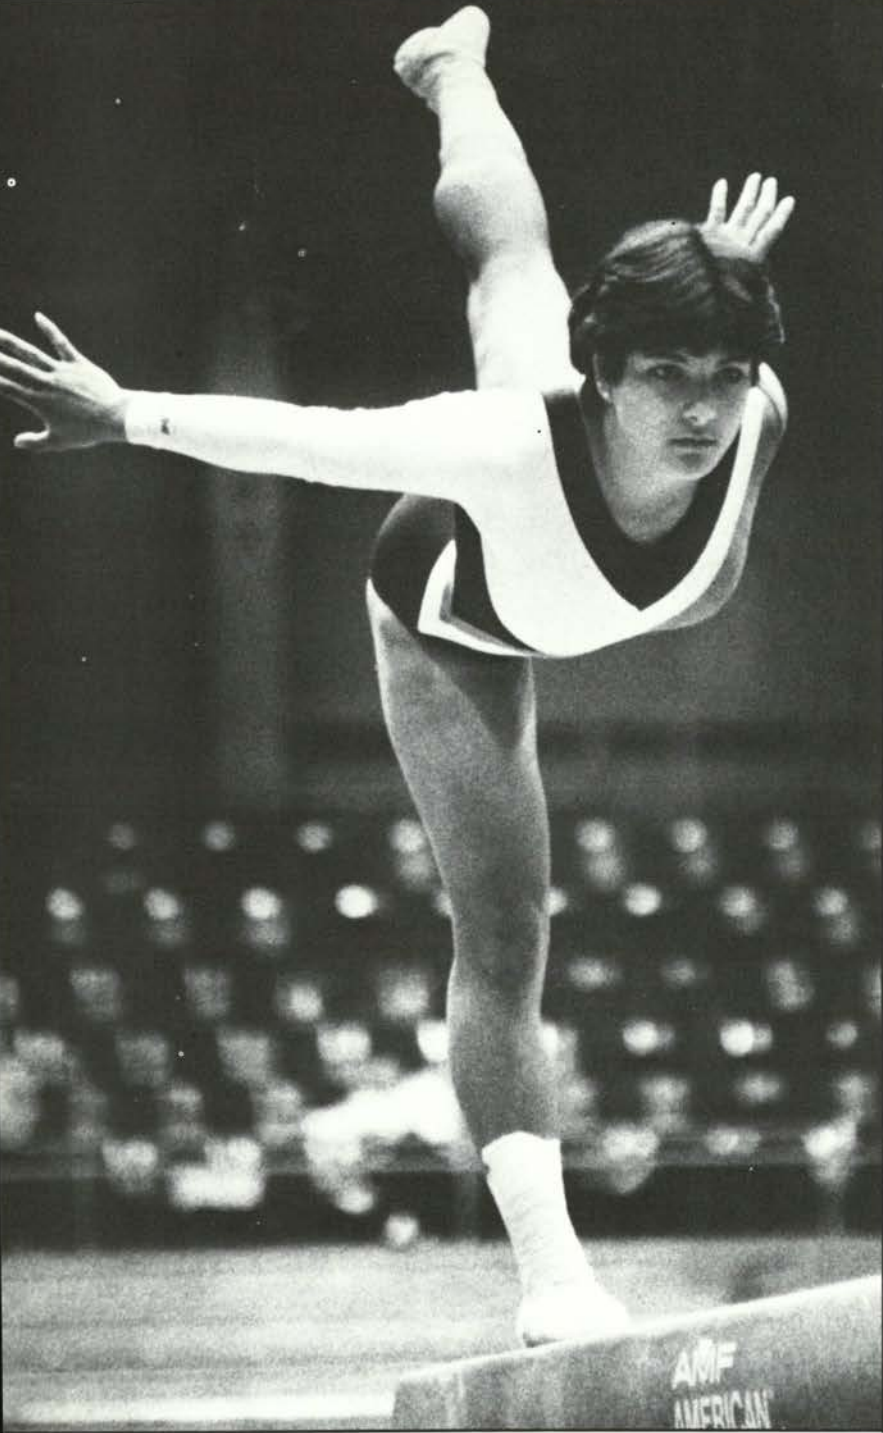

Not only were the Beavers victorious against their competition, but they won the hearts of fans and the audiences at Gill were larger than OSU has seen before to support the lady Beavers.

OSU went as a team to the NCAA National Championships and placed sixth among the nations collegiate teams. All-American Heidi Anderson regained that title by placing third on beam in the individual competition. Tina Barnes also earned All-American honors after placing fourth in vault, the event Barnes reigned during the league competition.

The talents of Jill Bumford, Shannon Gimble and Nadine Ueoka completed the unity of the Beaver team. With the diversity of talents that the gymnasts have, the OSU team established their reputation as a victorious group, but also a group that came together to show the spirit of the individual gymnasts.

The O.S.U. wrestling season was very promising overall. The season went fairly well—the team lost a few close matches but improved both individually and as a team.

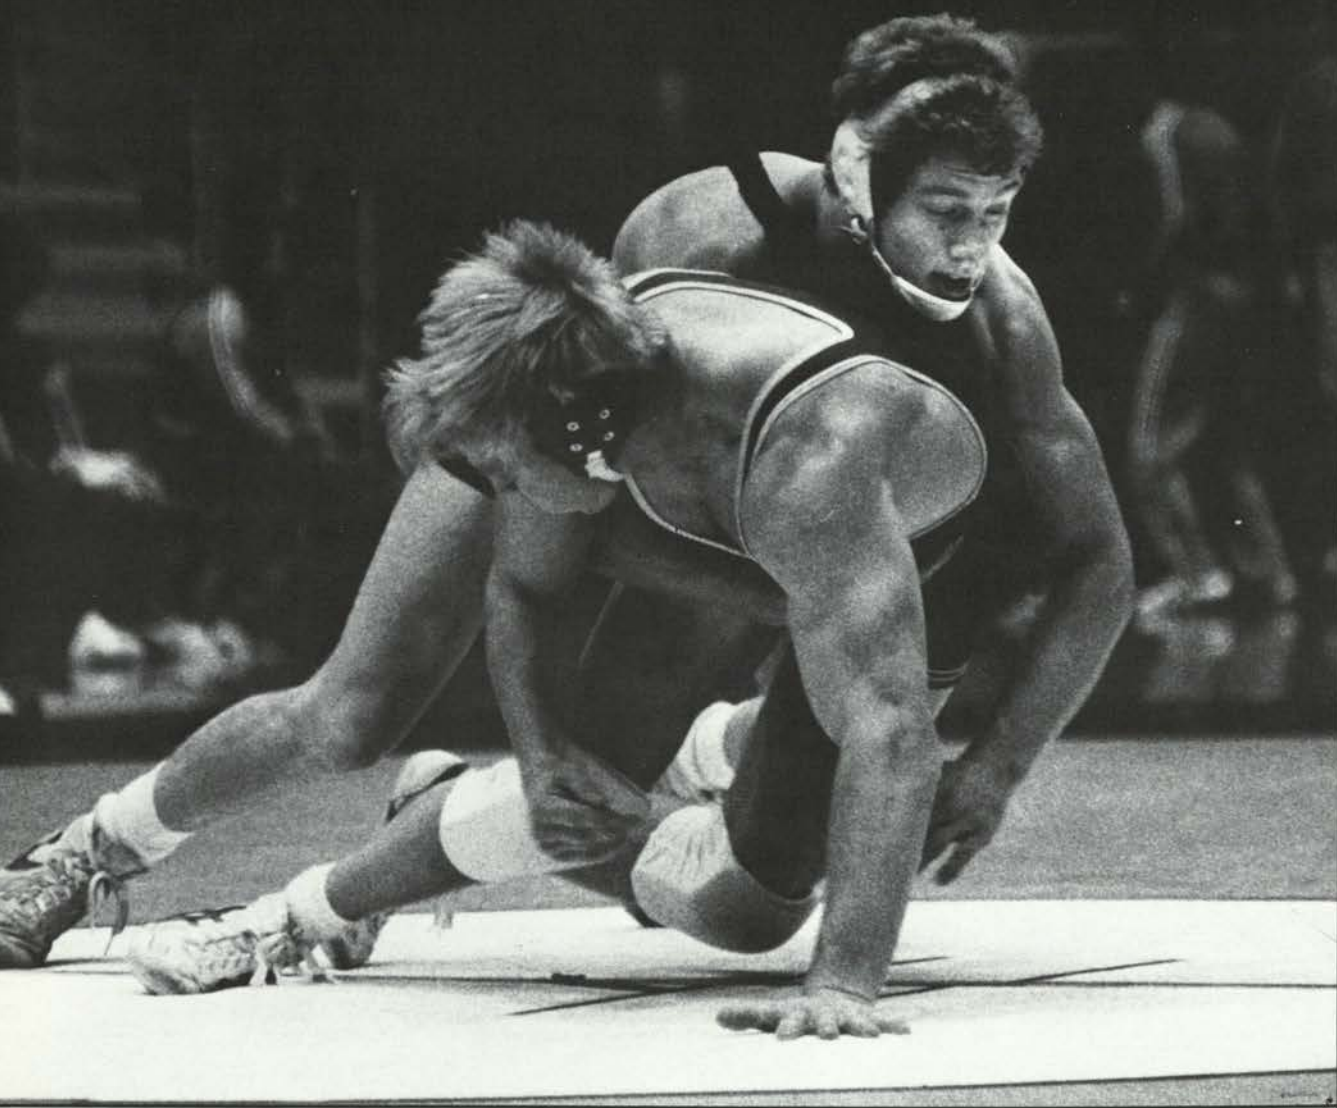

The Beavers finished the regular season with a 29-6 record and placed second in the Pacific-Ten Conference Meet to Arizona State. The highlights of the year included five mat men going to Nationals. Seniors Curt Berger and Jamie Wise went and represented OSU for their last time. Along with Berger and Wise went freshman Jeff Cardwell and juniors Pat Gibson and Jeff Smyth. None of the OSU wrestlers were seeded in the tournament.

Besides Nationals, some of the team goals this year were to win as many matches as they could, do well academically, and to perform well individually. The team did a lot of running, swimming, and lifting together in the morning before the days practice.

The wrestlers enjoyed wrestling for OSU and their coach. “Dale Thomas gets the most out of us. He’s enthusiastic in helping us. If we’re not doing well he tells us why and gives us constructive criticism, which really helps us out,” said junior Marvin Seal. The problems of this team had a lot to do with injuries and a few outbreaks of the flu. They pulled out very well, however, considering the problems. Seal said the team was better this year because they went on more road trips and exposed themselves to more styles of wrestling and more competitive teams.

As for next year? “Recruitment is going well with lots of young talent in the state,” said assistant coach Jim Cremley.

Oregon State boasts many strong, hardworking, and dedicated teams, but none display these qualities more than the Beaver crew team. The large group of approximately sixty-three men and women train together throughout fall, winter, and spring. Competition starts for the rowers and coxswains spring term and during this time the dedication really shows. Lead by Head Coach Dave Emigh and his staff, crew members spend hours on the river practicing strokes and strategy.

But the crew members do venture off the river in order to raise funds for their expenses. Through the Athletic Department, the team cleaned Parker Stadium following football games and Gill Coliseum following basketball games.

This rather large group of people breaks down into their special areas to form the different "boats". Eight OSU men comprise the heavyweight boat and similarly, eight are in the lightweight boat. The first year rowers, or novices, have an eight man boat and a four man boat. The men are rounded out by the junior varsity boats. For the crew women, there is a varsity boat of eight and a junior varsity boat of eight. Throughout the season, the novice and junior varsity boats have done exceptionally well.

For Coxswain, Becky Schneider, the year as a beaver crew team member has been very special. "We all really help each other out and are a very close team," reports Schneider. The spirit and dedication must be present as approximately two-thirds of the rowers and coxswains, according to Schneider, plan to be back on the river in the 1986 season.

"Placing 7th overall in the Pac-10 is not upsetting when you're playing everyday with some of the top teams in the nation," Blind said. This year's team was made up of four young and exciting new freshmen with Bob McCallister leading the way for the newcomers. Leading the sophomores was Dean Claggett having a good year as well as juniors Scott Larson and Scott Kraemer placing 1st and 2nd. OSU's top finishers were in the Pacific Northwest Invitational and the Pilots Spring Intercollegiate where they placed 2nd both times to Oregon, and in the Airforce Invitational they placed 2nd to New Mexico. Once again the 1985 track team was plagued by low numbers. The men's and women's squads were both lacking depth this year, but as for talent - there was certainly nothing lacking. Said assistant coach, Mike Chriss, "The team is really building. We've seen some great results this season, both individually and collectively."

Individual performance stand outs this season starred sophomore, Karl Van Calcar. Fourth in the nation, Karl Van Calcar ran outstanding races in the 3000-meter steeplechase and in the 5000-meter race. Women's team captain Kathy Knowlton had a faultless season, capturing the OSU record in the 5000-meter race. Connie Peterka also broke the school record for the javlin, and took second at the Norpack tournament. Kari Weston took the school record for the 400-meter hurdles and was deemed second fastest in Oregon State history for the high hurdles.

The Beaver track squad made an outstanding showing in the Pac-10 championships. The men's team finished only 11 points behind University of Southern California, which proved that they have some excellent talent to draw from. "We surprised the people at the Pac-10 championships. We, though, were not at all surprised," said coach Mike Chriss. The season went quite well despite low numbers. The key this season was talent.

BEAVERS TURN WACKY SEASON

INTO PAC-10 TITLE

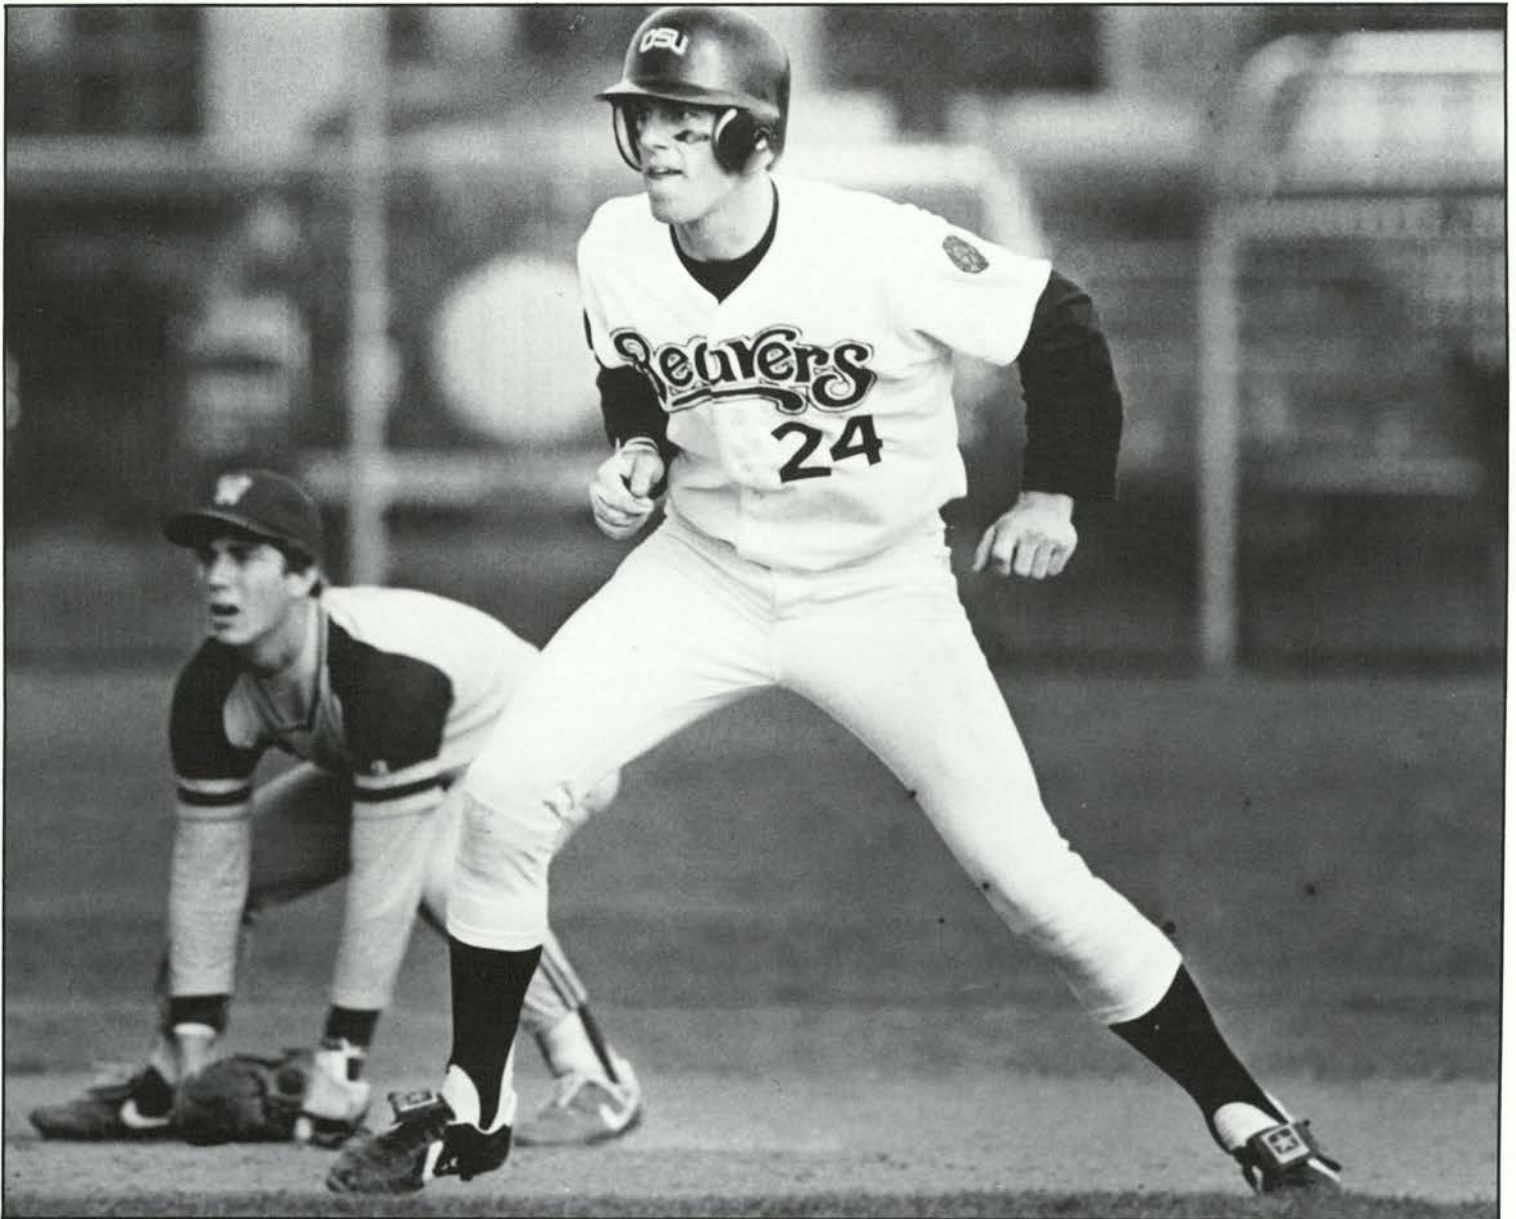

The OSU baseball team finished a very rollercoaster season with a Pac-10 Northern Division record of 12-12 and an overall record of 31-15. The fourth place finish still put the Beavers into post season play with Washington, Washington State, and Portland State. OSU won the tournament and proceeded to the NCAA playoffs.

OSU started their League season coming off an exciting 8-0 tournament streak that brought them the championship of the Riverside Baseball Invitational. The tournament featured some of the best baseball teams in the U.S and it brought the Beavers much respect when they took the tourney title. The rest of the season, however, wasn't so sunny. "Maybe we had a flash-in-the-pan type thing and after that we settled into things like we should have." said OSU coach Jack Riley.

The season went up and down for the Beavers, but 'must' wins over Western Oregon and Eastern Washington gave them a run at post season play. Many standouts this year include a 10 game winning streak by pitcher, John Sipple, which ended with a blemish in the last game of the regular season when OSU lost to Eastern Washington after clinching a playoff spot. Dave Brundage finished the season leading the team with a .380 batting average, and Gary Hamilton and Mel Mallinek both had six home runs to lead the team this year. The All-Division infield, picked by the Northern Division coaches, was made up of all Beavers. Dave Brundage at first, Mel Mallinak at second, Ken Bowen at shortstop, and Quinn Williams at third proved that the Beavers infield was a force to be reckoned with.

The Oregon State mens soccer team finished the year with a 6-6-2 record. The season was highlighted by a 1-0 loss to Warner Pacific, the number-one ranked team in the nation. The Beavers had a rough start, losing the first five games without scoring a goal. They then had a great turn around and played to a 6-1-2 record for the second half of the season. This season marked the graduation of the team's Most Valuable Player Brad Stratton, midfielder Alex Nagygyor, captain Mike Pyeatt, forward Brandon Shea, and fullback Mark Denney. Even with the loss of these players, the Beavs have a strong nucleus returning for next season, including forward Rudy Mansfield, mid-fielders James Konyn and Kent Cramer, wing defenders Alden Holmes and Mark Boyd, and defending the middle, John Clarke, Marty Reusch and keeper Jim Sunderland. The staff of the 1985 Beaver would like to thank the following for their assistance in making this book possible: Jim Folts; Hal Cowen and the Sports Information Office; Meagan McKenzie, Paul Gilles and the Daily Barometer; Frank Ragulsky, Grace Gutierrez and the University Student Media Committee; Tom Nieswander and the 1984 Beaver staff; and Kevin DeWhitt — dorm photographer.

Contributing photographers: John Wollenbecker, Terry Poe, Terri Hewitt, Steve Shields, Mike Shields, Leticia Coronado, Bryant Pierre, Kelly James, Scott Wiskur, and Eugene Tanner.

Specifications:

The 1985 Beaver, volume 79, was printed by Josten's American Yearbook Company of Visalia, California. Press run was 5,450 copies consisting of 528 pages each. Pages are printed on 80 lb. offset enamel, dull finish using black ink. Headlines are set in varying styles depending on the section. Body copy is Souvenir Light, photo credits are set in Helvetica bold. Individual portraits were taken by Varden Studios of Rochester, New York. Dorm photos were taken and printed by Kevin DeWhitt of Corvallis. Color photography was processed by Kodak Laboratories of Palo Alto, California and printed by Dot Dotson's of Eugene, Oregon and by Photo-craft of Portland, Oregon. The cover was designed by Kent Lytle using a 3-tone press run with a patterned, fox fur stamping and etching of the beaver formation.

Having served on the Beaver yearbook for a couple of years, I witnessed first-hand how the job of editor affected by two predecessors. I saw with great horror the incredibly long hours these two spent on yearbook related tasks. I watched as each in turn experienced an exponential decline in their grade point averages as their terms of office dragged on. And I shook my head in dismay as my two role models abandoned their ordinary social lives in favor of a hallow existence each night at MU East 231 — the home of the Beaver. I vowed with firm resolution that my turn at the helm would be much different . . .

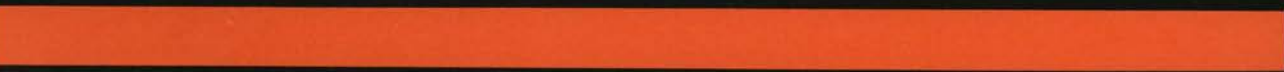

Well, with my year as editor now officially concluded, I am happy to report that I think I gained more from the job than I had to sacrifice. For example, I gained a real ability to establish a daily routine of activities. The routine was highlighted, of course, by my march every evening over to the office for hours of intense work. I also became adept at hosting fast-paced yearbook parties (known by others as frantic, all-night work parties the eve of a big deadline). By the same token, I managed to keep myself in remarkable shape with a regular running program — down to the Federal Express office the day of the big deadline. I am also proud to reveal that, as the custodian in MU East will testify, I have acquired over the past year the amazing ability to fall asleep absolutely anywhere — be it on a stack of yearbooks, on the floor of my office, in the darkroom, or even in my car in the parking lot. And, as far as grades go, you know what? I didn't really want to be a lawyer anyway.

Special thanks go to Leticia Coronado, Ira Gabriel, and Kent Lytle for their untiring dedication (they finished 100+ pages in a 48 hour marathon performance on the last two days of finals week); Russ Nielsen and the business staff for making this probably the most profitable Beaver ever; and my roommates — sorry about having to be reintroduced to you guys at the end of the year.

Sincerely,

Steve Nieswander, editor
