Difficult Weeks Ahead For Valenti's Charges

Barometer Sports Editor

Oregon State's cagers were idle over the weekend, as they began preparations for the battles with UCLA and USC at the end of this week. The wrestlers and swimmers took over attention on the OSU campus. Meanwhile, the usual number of major happenings filled the national sportslight

In fact, the sports world was busier than ever. The Winter Olympics are getting started in Grenoble, France. But take a look at last weekend's Pacific-8 titantic that competed for Reflections on several of the stars Oregon State will be at six o'clock and Sundays at more than he was the last time he was on TV. That was range in the loss to Houston. Of course, he didn't have an Elvin Hayes guarding him Saturday in LA.

Alcindor is the star performer - the man who gets the raves. But he isn't the only key to the Bruin success. The great zone press is what makes UCLA go. Guards Mike Warren and Lucius Allen harass their opponents into an almost unbelievable string of turnovers. They steal the ball almost at will, and rarely are guilty of fouls.

The Trojans may be a distant second. But they are still one solid ball club. Only the endless ball turnovers gave the Bruins such a wide victory margin. BEAVERS WILL HAVE HANDS FULL ..

Center Ron Taylor, the 7-1 senior, has definitely improved this season, as everyone has been saying. He did a decent defensive job on Alcindor, before fouling out. He also scored 15 poihts and grabbed quite a few rebounds.

Forward Bill Hewitt was off on his shooting, finishing with only 14 points, after going in with a 25-point per game clip in conference play. But at 6-7, he is still one of the league's most colorful stars.

Anyway, Oregon State figures to have its work cut out for it in the next two weeks, with four games against the Bruins and Trojans. The fireworks start Friday night at Gill
